Worshipful Gentlemen and honoured Friends,

Do not dedicate this piece of my Labours unto yan, thereby to beg protestion for it; as fearing either its weaknefs, or the malewolent censures of the ignorant; for I very well know, and have experienced, that it is the usual property of idle and pragmatical persons to please their own malignant bumors, with the condemning and scoffing at the painful lucubrations of others. And I have ever judged that nothing ought to be published, that like a Noun Substana tive cannot stand by it felf, without being supported by any other adjoined belp. Neither is this forth of a vain confidence or an overweening of mine own abilities, though I very well know that some are as much in love with the brood of their own brains, as others are with the fruit of their loines : Because I have for many years been as wary and vigilant, as any could be, to watch over my felf, that I might both know, and keep a clear diffinction, beimint flattering Phantafie, and trus and found judgment. But I fball in brief fbew you the true

a. The first reason is, because you have all been Gentlemen, not only well known unto me for many years, as being my near Neighbours, but also with whom I have been feely admitted to a Noble and Generous converse, and have been trusted, and bonouved by you in your Domestick contenns, wherein by my Medical Prosession, I might be serviceable to you.

reasons of my presenting of this poor piece to your reading

2. Another reason is, you have all fully known me, and the most of the particulars of my life, both my follies and frailties, as also my other endowments and abilities, and therefore in reference to these, I thought none more fit than your selves, to whom I might tender this laborious piece. For it is not unknown unto you, that (excepting my Physical Practice, which age and infirmities will not suffer me very much to attend) I have for many years last post lived a solitary, and sedentary life, mini & Musis, having had more converse with the dead than the living, that is, more with Books than with Men. And therefore I present this unto you, as be-

judge what I am like or able to perform in such a subject as tife unto you.

3. Also it is not unknown unto you, that I have had a large portion of Tromble and Persecution in this outward world, wherein you did not like many others stand aloof off, as though you had not known me, but like persons of Justice, and true Magnaniminy, durst both look upon and assist wronged innocency, though besmeered over with the envious dire of malicious scandals, and even in that very conjuncture of time, when the whole giddy Troop of barking Dogs, and recome

ing better able than most others to whom I am unknown, to venous Wolves, did labour to devour me. But then, even then did put to your belping bands, and were free to declare, what you knew of mine innocency which was so Generous, Noble and Christian a kind of just commiseration, that I should for ever account my self a wretched person, if I should not have deeply impressed in my breast and memory, which no time, nor adversity can ever obliterate. But being in a condition that I may truly say with the Apostle S. Peter; Arriveu & zwelo & xindexnum, Silver and Gold have I none (which I know you expect not) and therefore the greatest power I have is my weak pen, thereby to testisse my thankfulness for your unparallel dindness. And therefore I offer this I reatise as a perpetual and monumental memorial to all Posterities, of my gratitude, and your goodness.

And further, to whom can a subject of this nature be more fuitably and fitly presented than to such Magistrates as your felves, who have often occasion to be cumbred and troubled with the ignorant, envious, and sometimes knavish accusaitons against people suspected of Wetchcraft, Sorcery, Charming and Inchamment ? Wherein to free the guilty, and condemn the innocent, is equally abominable to the Lord: And therefore much judgment, caution, care and diligent inspection ought to be used in the examining and determining of these matters, wherein I have used as much perspicuity and plainness as was possible to distinguish betwixt those that are Impostors, Cheaters, and active D'ceivers, and those that are but under a mere possive delusion through ignorant and superstitious education, a melancholy temper and constitution, or led by the vain credulity of inefficacious Charms, Pictures, Ceremonies and the like, traditionally taught them. The one fort of which deferves to be punished for convening of the people, and taking upon them, and pretending to bring to pals things that they have neither skill nor power to perform ; but the other fort Pather merit piry and information, or the Phylicians help than any punishment at all. And I make bold to mind you of this one thing especially that in things of this nature great heed ought to be taken of the conditions, qualities, ends and intentions of the Complainants and Informers, who are often more worthy of punishment, than the persons accused. For many forth of a meer deluded fancy, envious mind, ignorance and superstition do attribute natural diseases, distempers, and accidents to Witches and Witcheraft, when in truth there is no such matter at all. And sometimes they counterfeit strange fits and diseases, as womiting of preternatural and strange things, which if narrowly looks into and examined are but Juslings, and deceitful consederacies, and yet for malice, revenge or some other base ends, do accuse others to be causers of them.

And though you should find some confidently confessing that they have made a visible and corporeal league with the Devil, and that he hash carnal copulation with them, and that he doth suck upon some parts of their Bodies, and that they are Translubstantiated into Dogs, Cats, and the like, or that they sly in the air, and raise Tempests; yet (I hope) I have sufficiently proved by the word of God, the true grounds of Theologie and sound reason, that there never hath been any such Witch existent in rerum natura, and so you may know what credit may be given to such Fables and impossibilities.

So wishing that you may long live in Health and Happiness, to do his Majesty and your Countrey service, which is, and shall be my faithful prayer for you, I take leave subscribing my self

PREFACE or INTRODUCTION.

Readers

Nowing certainly that all writings once published, do equally undergo one fate, as to stand or fall by the common censures, judgments and opinions of Men; therefore have I affixed no Epichete, as foreseeing this Treatise like a Man once at Sea that is forced to hold out against all weathers) must abide the censures of all fort of persons, how various soever their minds and principles be. And though mens fancies and opinions be commonly as different as their faces, yet I shall enumerate some few general sorts, that may be sufficiently comprehensive to comprise the most of other subordinate particulars, and that in this order.

1. First, that which a Man hath found true by experience in fuch like cases, may very reasonably induce him to expect the like again; as after I had printed my book of the History of Metals I met with some that were no more learned than Parrots, who could not write true English, and whose greatest skill was in the several ways of debauchery, and other poor Pedanticks that were hardly mafters of Grammar, and yet this crew, and the like were rash and bold enough, to censure my painful endeavours, and to scoff at it as a mere collection. And therefore in publishing of this piece, which is a dark and mysterious subject, I may very probably meet with some troops of such rash ignorants, to whom only I shall return this sharp, but suitable responsion. It is an ordinary thing for many that hever could likape a thoo, to reprove and find fault with the Shoomaker: but such wife men (fit only for Gotham) may learn thefe two Proverbs, There is none fo bold as blind Bayard, and A Fools bolt is foun flot, and their heads may be fitter for Feathers, than the Laurel, and when any of them have made fuch a collection as my former Book, or publifht fuch, a piece as this, then I shall give them a better answer, and Hot Before, Ehclucas non effe dundas bifce Afinis comeden-2. There dis, cum illis sufficiant cardui.

2. There are another generation that seem wife in their own eyes, whose brains are like blown Bladders filled with the wind of over-weening and self-conceitedness, and these usually do huff, shuff, and puff at every thing that agrees not with their Capricious Cockscombs, when their abilities for the most part lie in the scraps they have gathered from the Theaters, or from the discourses had in Taverns and Coffee-houses. and if they can but reach some pittiful pieces of Drollery and Raillery, they think themselves fit and able to censure any thing though never read nor seen, except the Title Page. To thefe I have little to fay, as being but fuch airy and frothy Vaporoso's, as the least blast of sound reason maketh them vanish into smoak and nothing; but only wish them to take into serious consideration, the saying of the Wileman: Seeft thou Prov. 26. 12. aman wife in his own conceit? there is more hope of a Fool than of him. And the counsel of a learned Father is proper for such vain confidents : Expedit bene timere, quam male fidere ; & stilins eft, ut infirmum fe bome cognoscat, ut fortis existat, quam fortis videri velit, & infirmus emergat.

3. There are another fort that are so critically envious, that they can allow of nothing that is not their own production, and beareth not the test of their approbation, and cannot but stigmatize the labours of others how good or beneficial foeever they be, because they shadow their same, and tend not to the advancement of their own reputation: even as divers forts of infects do feed upon the excrements of other animals. so these feed their own humours, and please their own fancies by the calumniating, and blacking the labours of others. These being guilty of peevilh morofity cannot look kindly at any thing of anothers, without frowning, distast, and centuring a but we have little to fay unto fuch as thefe, but shall leave them to the gall of their own breafts, and the spleen of their own minds, having neither intended our labours for any fuchnor valuing their censures how sharp and bitter soever they be-For nulla falicitas tam magna eft, ut malignitatis dentes vitare possit. And therefore it is discretion to bear that patiently for which humane prudence can find no remedy.

4. Others there are who are grown obstinate in their minds and wills, concerning Spirits, Apparitions, Witchcraft, Sorcery, Inchantment, and the like, and are grown pertinacious and resolute to stick to and hold those opinions that they have imbibed through ignorant education: not confidering that perseverance in a good cause, and well grounded opinion is laudable and commendable, but pertinaciousness in a bad and ill grounded tenent, is as bad and huttful. And it is every wife mans duty to study the cultivation and improvement of the goods of the mind, and never to be ashamed to learn that of which they were ignorant before. For the minds of men are not only darkned in the fall of Adam, but also much milled, by the fucking in of errors in their younger and more unwary years, from whence they ought to endeavour with might and main to extricate and deliver themselves. But he that is wilfully settled upon the lees and dregs of former opinions, though never so erroneous, hath shut forth all further light from shining into his understanding, and so is become wilfully blind. To such as these we shall only propose the example and practice of the Apostle, who saith: When I was a 1 Cor. 13. iti child, I spake as a child, I understood as a thild, I thought as a child: But when I became a man, I put away childish things. And I advise them not to refuse the counsel of S. Augustine, who faith: Ad discendum quod opus est, nulla ætas sera videri potest : quis essi Senes magis decet dicere quam discere; magis tamen decet discere, quam ignorare. And they need not be ashamed to imitate Socrates, who did wax old every day learning something.

5. As we have not intended this Treatile, and Introduction for such conditioned persons as we have enumerated before. so there are others to whom we freely offer and present it. and shall shew the grounds and causes that moved us to undertake such a mysterious, and dangerous subject. And those are such as have an humble, lowly, and equal mind, that they commonly read Books to be informed, and to learn those truths of which they are ignorant, or to be confirmed in those things they partly knew before. It is to such as these only that we offer our labours, and therefore shall candidly declare unto them the causes and reasons of our undertaking which are thefe.

1. Though there be a numerous company of Authors that have written of Magick, Witchcraft, Sorcery, Inchantment, Spirits, and Apparitions, in fundry ages, of divers Countrys, and in various languages: yet have they for the most but borrowed one from another, or have transcribed what others had written before them. So that thereby there hath been no right progress made truly to discover the theory or ground of these dark and abstruse matters, nor no precise care taken to instance in matters of fact, that have been warrantably and sufficiently attested: But only rhapsodies, and confused heaps of stories and relations, shuffled together, when not one of an hundred of them bore the face cither of verity, or truth-likeliness, whereby the understandings of Readers have remained uninlightned, their memories confounded, and their brains stuffed with Whimsies and Chimera's. And though there benothing more common than disputes of Witches, and Witchcraft, both in words and writing, yet not one of great multitudes that hath plainly told us, in what notion, or under what acceptation, they take the words, nor what description is agreed upon, of either of these, that their existence, or not being, their power and operations might be known and determined: But all the disputes as yet concerning them have been loose, wild, and in vagum. And therefore to remedie this, as far as fuch a subject would allow, and our abilities firetch, we were moved, and have attempted to clear those difficulties. And if we do not (which is epidemical to mankind) flatter and deceive ourselves, we have in some measure reasonably attained, as having plainly laid down the notion and acceptation of the words, Witches and Witchcraft, in which we grant them an existence, and in what sense and respect we grant them none, which is more (as we conceive) than yet hath been performed by any. And though our instances of matters of fact be neither so punctual nor full as might be wished, for things of this nature are deep and hid; yet are they the best we could select or chuse; and this is one chief reason why I undertook to treat of this subject

2. Though the gross, absurd, impious and Popish opinions of the too much magnified powers of Demons and Witches, in this Nation, were pretty well quashed and si-

lenced by the writings of Wierns, Tandler, Mr. Scot, Mr. Ady, Mr. Wagstaff and others; and by the grave proceedings of many learned Judges, and other judicious Magistrates: yet finding that of late two persons of great learning and note, who are both (as I am informed) beneficed Ministers in the Church, to wit Dr. Casanbon, and Mr. Glanvil, have afresh espoused so bad a cause, and taken the quarrel upon them; And to that purpose have newly furbished up the old Weapons, and raked up the old arguments, forth of the Popili Sink and Dunghills, and put them into a new dress, that they might appear with the greater luster, and so do with Tooth and Nail labour to maintain the old rotten affertions, the one in his Book called, A Treatise proving Spirits and Witches &c. the other in a Treatise called, A blow at modern Sadducism &c. Finding these (Isay) as two new Champions giving defiance to all that are of a contrary judgment, I was stirred up to answer their supposed strong arguments. and invincible instances, which I have done (I confess) with out fear, or any great regard to their Titles, Places, or Worldly Dignities, but only confidering the strength or weakness of their arguments, proofs, and reason. For in this particular that I have to deal, it is not with the men, but their opinions and the grounds they would lay their foundations upon. And if I be centured for dealing too sharply and harshly with them, they must excuse me, for I profess I have no evil will at all against their persons, no more than against a non-Entity, but was juftly zealous for the truth, and bitter against such opinions as they have vented, which to me seem dangerous, and in some respect impious, as (I suppose) I have fully proved. And this was another reason of my writing about this subiea.

3. Another reason that made me undertake this subject, was the horrid absurdities the tenent of the common Witchmongers brings along with it, as not only tending to advance superstition and Popery, but also to be much derogatory to the Wisdom, Justice, and Providence of the Almighty, and to cry up the power of the Kingdom of darkness, to question the verity of the principal Article of the Christian Faths.

concerning the Refurrection of Christ in his true numerical Body, and generally to tend to the obstruction of the practice of Godlinels and Piety. These after I had seriously weighed and considered them, did move me to labour as far as the light of Gods word, the grounds of true Theology, and the clear strength of reason would guide, and direct me, to undertake the confutation of them as far as I was able, and if I have failed I humbly defire those that are more able to handle the matter more fully if possible.

If any be moved that I feem to maintain some things that arc Paradoxes, I hope I may crave leave, as well to discede from the opinions of others, as others have done from those that went before them. And I defire them not so much to consider, either the novelty or strangeness of the opinions, as the weight and strength of the reasons that are laid down to support and statuminate them; for if the arguments be sound and valid, the Tenents built thereupon cannot be weak and tottering. And however I acknowledge my felf to have humane frailties and so may err, yet I have no mind or will pertinaciously to persevere in an error, and these things that we have treated of lying so far from the ken of our senses, and experiments of this nature, either so rare, or uncertain, that we may rationally expect pardon, rather than reprehension.

But I shall say no more, but let the Book speak for it self, only desiring the Readers, first to peruse and seriously to confider, before they centure, that to I may have cause to bid them, Farewel.

CHAP. I.

Of the false, irrational, and unchristian Censures, that have been, and yet are, cast upon Learned men, for writing of abstruce Subjects: As also for treating of Apparitions and Witchcraft, especially if they crossed the common stream of evulgar Opinion.

EING about to treat of the mysterious and abstruse Subject of Witches and Witchcraft, I cannot but think it necessary (especially to make the things we handle more plain and evidential) to imitate Architectors, who when they intend to raise some fair Fabrick or Edifice, do not only provide themselves of good and lasting Materials, but above all take care to lay a firm and sure soundation, which they cannot well accomplish, unless the earth and rubbish be removed, that a firm ground for a foundation may be found out. So before I lay the soundation of what lintend in this Discourse, I shall labour to remove some censures and calumnies, that are usually cast upon those learned persons that labour to unmanacle imprisoned truth, and to adventure to cross the stream of vulgar Opinion, backt with seeming Authority, Antiquity, or universality of Votes, especially if they have intermeddled in Subjects occult and mysterious.

And these Censures (how unjust soever) have often deterred the most

most able and best learned from divulging their opinions, or publish their thoughts upon such difficult and intricate matters, which (I conceive) ought not to be done for these reasons.

1. Because the best part of a man, as naturally considered, is his Courage, Resolution, and Magnanimity, which should make him resolute and couragious to declare and maintain, what he upon found and rational grounds apprehends to be truth, and not at all to fear the censure or judgment of others, who may have had no better means to inform themselves, or perhaps have been less diligent, and however are subject to the same errours and mistakes of Mankind, who must all confess the verity of that unerring Oracle, Humanum est errare. And therefore he must needs be a person of a poor, base, and low spirit, that doth conceal his own sentiments of the truth, for fear of the censure or calumnies of others.

2. He that is afraid to declare his thoughts, for fear of censure or feandal, must of necessity be very weak in his Morals, as having little affection for verity, which is the chief object of the intellect and consequently ought above all things to sway and lead the affections. And to be frighted from owning or declaring of the truth, for fear of the vain, aery, groundless, and erroneous censures of others, must needs speak a man weak in the grounds of Morality, and to have small affection for vertue, whose guide is verity. August. de Ago. The Learned Father said exceeding well to this purpose : Qui veritatem occultat, & qui prodit mendacium, uterg; reus eft. Ille quia prodesse non vult, ipse quia nocere desiderat.

3. He that conceals the truth that he knows, for fear of the censures of others, must needs have little of Christianity in him.

for we are commanded to buy the truth, and not to fell it; but for a Christian to conceal the truth, and not to dare to declare and defend it, for fear of the vain and perishing censures of men, is to make absolute sale of the truth, and that for the worst of all prises that can be. For what a weightless and worthless prise are the judgments and opinions of vain man, whose breath is in his no. strils, and whose life is but a vapor, that a Christian should, for fear of such vain censures, be afraid to declare or defend the truth? Therefore let the subtil Politicians and Machiavillians of this Age. who have in a manner turned the truth of the Christian Religion, and the most certain Rules of Providence into Atheism, and becom'd vain Idolaters, to sacrifice to the falsely adored and deified fancies of their own craft and cunning, think or fay what they please, yet the rule of plous Gregory will ever hold true: Ille veritatie desensor esse debet, qui quum rette sentit, loqui non metuit, nec erubescit. And that of chrysostom ought never to be forgotten by a good Christian, and one that fears God, who saith: Non solum proditor est veritatie, qui mendacium pro veritate loquitur : scd qui non libere pronuntiat veritatem, quam pronuntiare oportet, ant non libere defendit veritatem, quam defendere oportet. But as there have been some that have been affrighted with the feigned Bugbears

Bugbears of malevolent mens censures and scandals; so there have been others, to whom Nature hath given greater Magnanimity, who were better principled in their Morals, and better rudimented in the Christian Religion, that have scorned and undervalued those censures as vanities and trifles, and these were those

1. In the first place we need not travel far, either in regard of time or place, to find Precedents of fuch as have undergone no small censures and subsannations for vindicating Truth, and labouring the advancement of it, though against common and deep rooted Opinion. So ill entertainment new Inventors and Inventions have always found amongst the present Masters of several Professions, and those that made the World believe, that they alone had gained the Monopoly of all Learning. Our learned Country-man Doctor Hackwell in his Preface to his Apology, bath fufficiently proved this particular: whose profound Piece of proving no decay in Nature (a truth now sufficiently known, and assented to) found no small opposition, both from the Learned in Theology, and other persons, and underwent many sharp censures, until men had more confiderately weighed the strength and cogency of his Arguments, which carry sufficient evidence to confute rational persons. Our learned and most industrious Anatomist Dr. Harvey, who (notwithstanding the late Cavils of some) first found forth and evidenced to the World that rare and profitable discovery of the Circulation of the Blood, did undergo the like Fate: who for eighteen or twenty years together did groan under the heavy censur e of all the Galenists and expert Anatomists almost in Europe, and was railed upon, and bitterly written against, not only by such as Alexander Rosse and Dr. Primrose, but by Riolanus and others, and not forborn by that famo s Physician of Roterodam, Zacharias Sylvins, who ingenuously confesseth thus much: Primum mibi inventum boc non placuit, quod & voce & scripto publice tostatus sum; sed voca dans dum postea ei resultando & explodendo vehementiù s incumbo, refutor & ipfe & explodor : aded funt rationes ejus non persuadentes, sed cogentes: diligenter omnes examinavi, & in vivis aliquot canibin eum in finem à me di fect is , verissimum comperi. Which was a most candid and free retractation and confession of his own errours, and may be proposed as an example to all rash and unadvised Censurers. Neither could this most clear and evidential Verity (which falls under ocular Demonstration and manifest Experiments) find countenance in the World, unt / that Wallem, Plem-

pins, and divers other judicious and accurate Anatomists, had found the truth of Harvey's opinion, by their own tryals and ocular inspection: so difficult it is to overthrow an old radicated opinion. For I have known some years ago, that a person for owning or maintaining the Circulation of the blood, should have been censured and derided, as much by other Physicians, as one should be now for denying the same: so hard it is to root out an opinion (though never to falle and groundless) if once fetled in the brains of many, and hath had a long current of continued reputation and belief. And it is much more to consider the ignorance, stupidity, and perversness of those, that in this Age of Knowledge dare take upon them to censure (nay to condemn) that Society of persons, and their endeavours, who have a just, pious, merciful, and learned King for their Founder, and the greatest number of Nobility and Gentry, renowned both for divine and humane Knowledge, that can be chosen forth of the three Nations for their Members, and whose undertakings and level are the most high, noble, and excellent that ever yet the World was partaker of. And yet (which may be wondred at) I have not only met with many, that do cenfure and misjudge their vast and laudable enterprise, but even have been bold to appear in Print to censure and scandalize their proceedings, as is manifest in that Piece styled Plus ultra, written by Mr. stubbs of Warwick, wherein he hath effected as much as Dogs do by barking at the Moon. But it is plain, that highness of place. or greatness of parts exempts no man from evil tongues, or bad censures. And to this purpose I cannot but add Dr. Casanbon, who as he had a long fickness of body, so doubtless he wanted not some distemper of mind, when in his Treatise of Credulity and Incredulity, he uttered this. "If I may speak my mind (he saith) "without offence, this prodigious propenlity to innovation in all "kinds, but in matters of Learning particularly, which so many "upon no ground, that I can see, or appearance of reason, are "poffeffed with; I know not what we should more probably a-"scribe it unto, than to some sad Constellation or Influence. Alas! poor man, he was fo blind, that he could fee no ground or appearance of reason for the usefulness of Experimental Philosophy, nor for the Institution of the Royal Society, but must ascribe it to the Stars: it is a wonder why he ascribes it not to natural Melancholy, as he doth almost all strange Effects, in his Book of Enthusiasm, or why not unto Demons or Witches, as he doth the most things in the Treatife quoted.

2. That learned and painful person Renatus des Cartes, who brought in, revived, and refined the old Doctrine of Atoms, ascribed to Democritus, and other of the Ancients, found for a long time much opposition; insomuch that when he lived at Otrecht in Holland, the Aristotelian Professors of that University became so inflamed with envy at him, that their Scholars raised the Rabble of the City at the found of a Bell, to drive him out of Town. And yet this mans Philosophy hath had the luck to triumph in that University, where so much contempt was poured upon him; for Henricus Regius, the publick Profesior of Physick there, hath published a Book of Natural Philosophy, agreeable to the Principles and delign of Des Cartes: and is in a manner generally received and applauded; and by the honourable Mr. Boyle much made use of, and by him styled the Corpuscularian Philosophy. So was not that must learned and diligent Mathematician Galalaus imprisoned for seeing more than others could by the help of his Optick Glasses, losing (as one faith) his own liberty in Prison, for giving the Earth liberty to fetch a round about the Sun? And yet now to what great height of improvement are Telescopes arrived unto, and what credit is given to the Observations made with them? though in their birth their first Author and User so much opposed and punished; for all Inventions that are new (as well as Opinions) are in their beginnings opposed and censured, not considering, that all acquired Knowledge, and all Arts and Sciences were once new, and had their beginnings.

3. When Josephus Quercetanus and Sir Theodore Mayern did labour to introduce the practice of Chymical Physick into the City of Paris, what cruel censures and scandals did they undergo by all the rest of the Physicians of the Colledge, so that they were accounted illiterate and ignorant Fellows and dangerous Empiricks, not fit to practife in the King of France his Dominions, and so were fentenced by the Colledge, and prohibited to practife? So far did ignorance, self-interest, and blind malice prevail against these two persons, of so much Worth and Learning, insomuch that the former was made Physician to the King of France, and lived to see despised Chymistry to flourish, where it had been most contemned, himself to be honoured, and his Chymical Works to be published, and to be had in great and general efteem with all that were Lovers of Learning. The latter likewise out-lived the malice of all his enemies, and law himself advanced to be Physician to two potent and renowned Kings of England, and to have the general practice of the most of the Nobility and Gentry of the Kingdom, and to live to a fair old age, and to dye valtly rich. So that even the bravelt men, for their noble endeavors for the good of Mankind, have always found harsh usage.

4. It hath fared no better with divers persons that have written of abstruse and mysterious Subjects, such as were Arnoldus de Villa Nova and Raimundus Lullius, who, because they handled that secret and sublime Art of the Transmutation of Metals, were by the ignorance and malice of Francis Pegna and the John Tredeschen of Mund. Subter. Rome, Athanasius Kircherus, with some others, branded with the pag. 277. name of Magicians, taken in the worst sense. Facile est reprebendere & maledicere, so apt are men through over-weening pride and self-conceitedness, as though they were ignorant of nothing, to take upon them to censure all things, when Artists only are fit to judge of those proper Arts, in which they are verst and bred in. and not others: For it is not sufficient for a man to be verst in many parts of Learning, but also in that very Science or Art, in which the Question is propounded : as for Example; Suppose a man to be well read in School Theology, Metaphysicks, Logick, Grammar, Rhetorick, Ethicks, and Phylicks, yet for all this how unable were he to resolve one of the difficultest Propositions in Euclid? no more can any person, though never so generally learned, if he perfeely do not understand the method, terms, ground, matter, and end of the Writers in mystical Chymistry, be any competent Judge of their Art, nor of the nature of Transmutation. And this might justly have bridled Kircher, and many other rash and vain Censurers to hold back their judgment, until they perfectly understand the matter, about which they are to give judgment, and to have Prov. 26. 12. confidered that Maxime of the wifelt of men: Seeft thou a man wife in his own conceit? there is more hope of a fool than of him. But notwithstanding these groundless slanders against Arnoldus, that he was guilty of Diabolical Magick, from which the Pen of learned Nandeus hath totally discharged him, though he otherwise (according to his petulant humor and prejudiced opinion against the Art of Transmutation, of which he was no competent Judge, for the reason foregoing) cast some unworthy reflections both upon him. and Lully, yet he confesseth (which is but the bare truth, as every learned Physician doth sufficiently know, that have heedfully read his Writings of the Art of Medicine) in these words, "That it is "certain, he was the learnedest Physician of his time, equally ac-"quainted with the Latine, Greek, and Arabian Tongues, and one "whose Writings sufficiently witness his abilities in the Mathema-"ticks, Medicine, and Philosophy, the practice whereof gained him "favour and imployment about Pope Clement, and Frederick King "of sicily, who certainly would never have made use of him, if he "had thought him a Conjurer or Magician, such as many judged "he was. As for Lully (notwithstanding the malevolent froth of some rash, malicious, and ignorant Writers) he was guilty of no other Magick but what was natural, lawful, and laudable, as his profound and learned Works (if his blind Adversaries had ever taken pains to have perused them, who frequently censure and condemn those things they never saw, read, or understood) do witness beyond all exception, and is all justified by the testimonies of so many learned and judicious persons, that more cannot be said to his praise and vindication. The most of his learned Works being kept in the Library at Oxford, written in an ancient hand: which would never have been done, if they had not been highly efteemed and prifed. For as Zetznerus the great Stationer of stasburgh faith: "Tante " suo fuisce evo authoritatis atq; estimationis legitur, ut justissimi Arragonum Reges cum in privilegite eidem concessis, magnum in "Philosophia magistrum, & mirandarum artium & scientiarum "authorem nominarint. Lastly, one Pather Pacificus in his Journey from Persia 1628. came into the Isle of Majorca, where Lully was born, and to his great admiration found the Statue of Luly Vide Relat. Pathere in Wood curioully coloured, and he honoured as a Saint vil, impref. Gal-(whom he had before judged an Heretick) as also a Society of Pro- lie, 1631. fessor following the Doctrine of Lully, and called Raymundines or Lullists, and that they affirmed, that by Divine illumination he had the perfect knowledge of Nature, by which he found out the universal Medicine, by a certain Aurum potabile, by which he prolonged his life to the 145. year of his age, in which year he suffered Martyrdom. This I have produced to thew how inconfiderately and ignorantly the best learned of an Age may be, and often are wrongfully and falfely traduced and flandered, which may be a warning to all persons to take heed how they pass their cenfures, until they understand perfectly all that is necessary to be known about the Subject they are to give judgment of, before they utter or declare their sentence. Roger Bacon our Country-man, who was a Franciscan Fryar, and Doctor of Divinity, the greatest Chymist, Astrologer, and Mathematician of his time, yet could not escape the injurious and unchristian censure of being a Conjurer, and so hard put to it, that Lib. I.de Script. as Pitts faith, he was twice cited to Rome by Glement the Fourth, Anglia to purge himself of that accusation, and was forced to send his Optical and Mathematical Instruments to Rome, to satisfie the Pope and the Conclave, which he amply performed, and came off with honor and applause. To vindicate whom I need say little, because it is already performed by the Pens of those learned persons, Pitts, Leland. Selden, and Nandeus, only I shall add one Sentence forth of that most learned Treatise, De mirabili potestate artis de nature, de de Cape I. nullitate magia. Where he faith thus: Quicquid autem est prater operationem naturæ vel artis, aut non est humanum, aut est fictum & fraudibus occupatum. Another of our Country men Dr. John Dee. the greatest and ablest Philosopher, Mathematician, and Chymist that his Age (or it may be ever fince) produced, could not evade the censure of the Monster-headed multitude, but even in his life time was accounted a Conjurer, of which he most sadly (and not without cause) complaineth in his most learned Presace to Euclid. Englished by Mr. Billing sley, and there strongly apologizeth for himself, with that zeal and fervency, that may satisfie any rational Christian, that he was no such wicked person, as to have visible and familiar converse (if any such thing can be now adays) with the Devil, the known Enemy of Mankind, of which take this short passage, where he saith :- "O my unkind Country-men, O unnatu-"ral Country-men, O unthankful Country-men, O brain fick, rash, " spiteful, and disdainful Country-men, why oppress you me thus "violently with your flandering of me contrary to verity, and "contrary to your own consciences? Yet notwithstanding this, and his known abilities in the most parts of abstruce Learning, the great respect that he had from divers Princes, Nobles, and the most Learned in all Europe, could not protect him from this harsh and unjust censure. For Dr. Casanbon near fifty years after Dr. Deer death, hath in the year 1659. published a large Book in Folio of Dees conversing for many years with Spirits (wicked ones he meaneth.) But how Christian-like this was done, to wound the mans reputation so many years after his death, and with that horrid and wicked flander of having familiarity with Devils for many years in his life time, which tends to the loss both of body and foul, and to register him amongst the damned, how Christian-like this is, I leave all Christians to judge? Besides, let all the World judge in this case, that Dr. Casanbon being a sworn Witchmonger, even to the credulity of the filthiest and most impossible of their actions, cannot but allow of the Law that doth punish them for digging up the bones of the dead, to use them to Superstition or Sorcery; what may he then think the World may judge him guilty of, for uncovering the Dormitories of the deceased, not to abuse their bones, but to throw their Souls into the deepest pit of Hell? A wickedness certainly beyond the greatest wickedness, that he can believe is committed by Witches. It is manifest, that he hath not published this meerly as a true relation of the matter of fact. and so to leave it to others to judge of; but that designedly he hath laboured to represent Dee as a most infamous and wicked perfon, as may be plainly seen in the whole drift of his tedious Preface. But his defign to make Dee a Converser with evil Spirits was not all, he had another that concerned himself more nearly. He had before run in a manner (by labouring to make all that which he called Enthusiasm, to be nothing else but imposture or melancholy and depraved phantalie, ariling from natural causes) into the centure of being a Sadducee or Atheist. To wash off which he thought nothing was so prevalent, as to leap into the other end of the balance (the mean is hard to be kept) to weigh the other down, by publishing some notorious Piece that might (as he thought) in an high degree manifest the existence of Spirits good and bad, and this he thought would effect it sufficiently, or at least wipe off the former imputation that he had contracted.

But that I may not be too tedious, I shall sum up briefly some others, by which it may be made clear, that those dauntless Spirits that have adventured to cross the current of common opinion, and those that have handled abstruce Subjects, have never wanted oppolition and scandal, how true or profitable soever the things were that they treated or writ of. Trithemius that Honour and Ornament of Germany for all forts of Literature, wanted not a Bouillus to calumniate and condemn him of unlawful Magick, from which all the Learned in Europe know he is absolved, by the able and elegant Pen of him that ftyles himself Guftavus Silenus, and others. Cornelius Agrippa run the same Fate, by the scribling of that ignorant and envious Monk Paulus Jovius, from whose malicious slander he is totally acquitted by the irrefragable evidence of Wierus. Melchior Adams, Nandew, and others. Who almost have not read or heard of the horrid and abominable falle scandals laid upon that totime Germania decus, Paracelsus, by the malevolent Pen of Erastus, and after swallowed up with greediness by Libanius, Conringing, Sennertue, and many others? for not only labouring to bring in a new Theory and Practice into the Art of Medicine, but also for striving to purge and purific the ancient, natural, laudable, and lawful Magick from the filth and dregs of Imposture, Deceit, Ceremonies, and Superstitions: yet hath not wanted most strong and invincible Champions to defend him, as Dorne, Petrus Severinus, Smetius, Crollius, Bitiscius, and many others. Our Countryman Dr. Fudd, a man acquainted with all kinds of Learning, and one of the most Christian Philosophers that ever writ, yet wanted not those finarling Animals, such as Marsennus, Lanovius, Foster, and Gassendus, as also our Casaubon (as mad as any) to accuse him vainly and fallely of Diabolical Magick, from which the strength of his own Pen and Arguments did discharge him without possibility of replies. We shall now come to those that have treated of Witchcraft, and strongly opposed and confuted the many wonderful and incredible actions and power ascribed unto Witches: and these crossing the vogue of the common opinion, have not wanted their loads of unworthy and unchristian scandals cast upon them, of which we shall only name these two, Wierus a learned person, a German, and in his time Physician to the Duke of Cleve; the other our Country-man Mr. Reginald Scot, a person of competent Learning, pious, and of a good Family: what is faid against them in particular, I shall recite, and give a brief responsion unto it. 1. There is a little Treatise in Latine titled Damonologia, fathered upon King James (how truly we shall not dispute, for some ascribe it to others) where in the Presace these two persons are intimated to be Witches, and that they writ against the common opinion, concerning the Power of Witches, the better to shelter and conceal their Diabolical skill. But indeed this groundless accusation needs no confutation, but rather scorn and derision, as having no rational ground of probability at all, that they should be such curied Hypocrites, or diffembling Politicians, the one being a very learned and able Phylician, as both his Writings do witness, and that upright and unpartial Author Melchior Adams in his life hath most amply declared: the other known (as not living so very many years ago) to be a godly, learned, and an upright man, as his Book which he calleth, The Discovery of Witchcraft, doth most largely make it appear, if his Advertaries had ever taken the pains to peruse it. So that all rational persons may plainly see, that it is but a lying invention, a malicious device, and a meer forged accu-

2. These persons are accused to have absolutely denied the existence of Witches, which we shall demonstrate to be notoriously falle, by these following reasons.

1. Could

1. Could ever any rational man have thought or believed, that Mr. Glanvil, a person who pretends to such high parts, would have expressed so much weakness and impudence, as to have charged Mr. Scot with the flat denial of the existence of Witches, as he doth in these words speaking of him? and pretends this to be a Confutation of the being of Witches and Apparitions; and this he intimates in divers other places, but without any quotation. to thew where or in what words Scot doth simply deny the Being of Witches, which he doth no where maintain: so confident are many to charge others with that which they neither hold nor write.

2. Mr. Scot and Wierns do not state the Question, An fint. Whether there be Witches or nor, but Qnomodo fint, in what manner they act. So that their Question is only, What kind of power supposed Witches have, or do act by, and what the things are that they do or can perform: so that the state of the question is not simply of the Being of Witches, or de existentia, but only de modo existendi : wherein it is plain, that every Dispute de modo existendi. doth necessarily grant and suppose the certainty of the Existence, otherwise the Dispute of the manner of their Being, Properties. Power, or Acts would have no ground or foundation at all. As if I and another should dispute about the extent, buildings, and situation of the great City Peking in China, or about the length, breadth, and height of the great Wall dividing China from Tartary; we both do take for granted, that there is such a City, and such a Wall, otherwise our Dispute would be wild, vain, and groundless: like the two Wife-men of Gotham, who strove and argued about the driving of theep over a bridge; the one affirming he would drive his sheep over the bridge, and the other protesting against it. and so begun, one as it were to drive, and the other to stay and stop them, when there were no sheep betwixt them. And this might be a sufficient document to Mr. Glanvil, to have been more fober, than to have charged scot fo falfely. And do not the ancient Fathers differ in their opinions circa Angelorum modum exiflendi, some of them holding them to be corporeal, and some incorporeal? yet both these parties did firmly hold their existence: so that this is a false and improper charge, and hath no basis to stand upon at all.

3. What man of reason and judgment could have believed, that Mr. Glanvil or Dr. Casanbon, being persons that pretend to a great share of Learning, and to be exact in their ways of arguing, would have committed so pitiful and gross a fault, as is fallacia consequentis? For if I deny that a Witch cannot flye in the air, nor be transformed or transsubstantiated into a Cat, a Dog, or an Hare, or that the Witch maketh any visible Covenant with the Devil, or that he sucketh on their bodies, or that the Devil hath carnal Copulation with them; I do not thereby deny either the Being of Witches, nor other properties that they may have, for which they may be so called: no more than if I deny that a Dog hath rugibility (which is only proper to a Lion) doth it follow that I deny the being of a Dog, or that he hath latrability? this is meer inconsequential, and hath no connexion. So if I deny that a man cannot flye by his natural abilities in the air like a Bird, nor live continually in the Sea as a fish, nor in the earth as a Worm or Mole, this doth not at all infer that I deny the existence of man, nor his other properties of risibility, rationality, or the like. But this is the learned Logick, and the clear ways of arguing that these men

3. A third scandal Mr. Glanvil throws upon him is this, where he faith thus: "For the Author doth little but tell odd tales and Pac. 16. "filly Legends, which he confutes and laughs at, and pretends this "to be a confutation of the Being of Witches and Apparitions. In "all which, his reasonings are trifling and childish; and when he "ventures at Philosophy, he is little better than absurd. Dr. Ca-" faubon, though he confesseth he had never read Scots Book, but Of Credul and "as he had found it by chance in friends houses, or Book-sellers Incredul p.400 "Shops, yet doth rank him amongst the number of his illiterate "Wretches, and tells us how Dr. Reynolds did censure him and " some others. To these, though they be not much material, we shall give positive and convincing answers.

1. There is no greater fign of the weakness of a mans cause, nor his inability to defend it, than when he slips over the substance of the question in hand, and begins to fall foul upon the adverse party, to throw dirt and filth upon him, and to abuse and slander him; this is a thing very usual, but exceeding base, and plainly demonstrates the badness of their cause.

2. If Mr. Scot hath done little but told odd tales and filly Legends, Mr. Glanvil might very well have born with him; for I am fure his story of the Drummer, and his other of Witchcraft are as odd and filly, as any can be told or read, and are as futilous. incredible, ludicrous, and ridiculous as any can be. And if the tales that scot tells be odd and filly, they are the most of them taken from those pitiful lying Witchmongers, such as Delrio, Bodinus, Springerus, Remigius, and the like, the Authors that are most esteemed with Dr. Gasanbon, and other Witchmongers, of whom we shall say more hereafter.

3. For Mr. Glanvil to give general accusations without particular proofs, as to fay scots reasonings are trifling and childish, and when he ventures at Philosophy, he is little better than absurd, do plainly manifest the mans malice, and discover his weakness: For dolus ver fatur in univer falibus, and no man ought to be condemned without particular and punctual proof, as to the time, place, and all other circumstances, which Mr. Glanvil could not do. and therefore he only gives general calumniations without ground; and if Scot were little better than abfurd, then he the better agrees with Mr. Glanvil, whose Platonical Whimseys are as absurd as any, as we shall sufficiently prove hereafter.

4. Dr. Casanbon must needs have been highly elevated with the defire of censuring, when he would condemn a man without reading his Book, or ferious weighing the force of his arguments, this concludes him of vast weakness, and of great perversness of mind. as all rational men may judge; for in effect it is this, Scot is an illiterate Wretch, and his Book full of errors, but I never read it, but as I have looked upon it at a friends house, or a Book-sellers 3hon: is not this a wretched ground whereupon to build so wretched a foundation, as thereby to judge him an illiterate Wretch? And to censure him by the report of others, is as unjust, weak, and childish as the former; and though Dr. Reynolds were a learned man, it doth not appear for what particular point or errour he censured Scot, and therefore is but a general and groundless charge, sheltred under the colour of Dr. Reynolds reputation, an evidence, in Reafon and Law, of no weight or validity.

5. For Dr. Casaubon to rank him amongst illiterate Wretches, is against the very Rule of the Law of Nature, that teaches all men. that they should not do that to another, which they would not have another to do unto them. And fure Dr. Casaubon would not have another to judge and condemn him for an illiterate Wretch. and therefore he ought not to have condemned Mr. Scot to be fo. And as it is against the Law of Nature, so it is contrary to the rules of modelty and morality to give a man such stigmatizing titles: nay it is even against the rules of good manners and civil education, but that some men think that it is lawful for them to say any thing, and that nothing what they say doth misbeseem them. And lastly, how far it is against the Rules of Christianity and Piety, let all good Christians judge.

6. The fallity of this foul scandal is manifest in both the particulars therein couched. 1. For Mr. Scot was a learned and diligent person, as the whole Treatise will bear witness; he understood the Latine Tongue, and fomething of the Greek, and for the Hebrew. if he knew nothing of it, yet he had procured very good helps, as appeareth in his expounding the several words that are used in the Scriptures for supposed Witches and Witchcraft : as also his quoting of divers of the Fathers, the reformed Ministers, and many other Authors besides, which sufficiently prove that he was not illiterate. 2. And that he was no wretched person, is apparent, being a man of a good Family, a confiderable Estate, a man of a very commendable government, and a very godly and zealous Protestant, as I have been informed by persons of worth and credit, and is sufficiently proved by his Writing.

I have not been thus tedious to accumulate these instances of men that have been censured, for opposing vulgar opinions, or writing of abstruce Subjects, as circumstantial only, or for a flourish, but meerly as they are introductive, necessary, and pertinent to the purpose I intend in this Treatise, as I shall make manifest in these Rules or Observations following, and shall add sufficient reasons to confirm the same.

1. That the generality of an opinion, or the numerousness of Rule 1. the persons that hold and maintain it, are not a safe and warrantable ground to receive it, or to adhere unto it: nor that it is safe or rational to reject an opinion, because they are but few that do hold it, or the number but small that maintain it. And this I shall labour to make good by these sure and firm arguments following.

low the multitude to do evil. And that there are many deceivers: For many shall come in my Name, saying, I am Christ, and shall de- Mat. 24. ceive many. And woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of Luke 6. 26. you: for fo did their fathers to the false rophets. From whence it is plain, that first we are to consider and be assured, that the matter be not evil; for if it be, we are not at all to be swayed with the multitudes that follow it, or that uphold it: so if the opinion be evil, erroneous, or falle, we ought not to receive it, or adhere unto it, though never so many do hold or maintain it. So that in truth and substance, we are not at all to confider, whether there be few or many that hold it, but fimply. whether it be true or not. For as Plato tells us: Neg; id confiderandum quid dixerit, sed utrum verè dicatur nec ne. For the multitude have been by all good Authors and Learned men always esteemed the most erroneous, as Seneca saith: Querendum non quod bial. Lasiant. vulgo placet, pessimo veritatis interpreti. And Lactantius teaches Duimar. Infit. us this: Vulgue indoctum pompie inanibus gaudet, animifq; puerili- 1.2.63. bus hectat omnia, oblectatur frivolis, nec ponderare secum unamquamq; rem potest. And our Saviour gives us a proof and instance of the errour of the multitude, and that in matter of fact. Did not almost all the Jews under divers Kings Raigns applaud and approve of the doctrine and opinions of the false Prophets, though utterly erroneous? infomuch that Elijah faid, that he only was left of the true Prophets, though the falle ones were many and numerous. So that the Rule is proved to be true, both by the precept and example of the Scriptures. 2. If we confider the generality of Mankind, either in respect of their inclinations and dispositions, or their breeding and education, we shall not find one of an hundred, either by nature inclined, or by education fitted and qualified to fearch forth and understand the truth. And then if there be an hundred to one drowned in ignorance and errors, and so few fitted to understand the truth of things either divine or natural, then it must needs follow, that it is not fafe to embrace or adhere to an opinion, because of the great number of those that hold or maintain it, but rather to stick to the smaller number; though neither simply ought to be regarded,

2. Again, if we consider those numbers, that either by nature are inclined, or by education trained up in Learning, to enable them to judge rightly betwixt truth and truth likeliness, how few of these that prove any thing excellent in those parts of Learning wherein they are bred, we may easily see the verity of this Rule sufficiently proved, that it is not safe to embrace or adhere to an opinion, because the numbers are great that hold or maintain it.

4. If the multitude that hold the opinions, whether of spiritual or natural things were to be followed, meerly because of the great numbers that hold them: then if we look and consider the Writings of the best Geographers, Travellers, and Navigators, we should either be of the opinions of the Pagans, who are the most numerous part of Mankind, or the Mahumetans, which are many in respect of the paucity of Christians. And then what horrid, blasphemous, idolatrous, impious, and diabolical opinions must we receive and hold, both concerning God, Angels, the Creation, and the most of the operations that are produced by Nature ? So that the arguments of Dr. Casaubon and Mr. Glanvil, drawn from the universality of the opinion, and the great multitudes of those that

5. If the comparison I use be thought too large, and the rule be put only as to the greater part of the Learned that are in Europe, yet it will hold good, that the greatest part of the Learned are not to be adhered to, because of their numerousness; nor that the rest are to be rejected, because of their paucity. For it is known sufficiently, that a Bishop of Mentz was censured and excommunicated for holding that there were Antipodes, by some hundreds of those that were accounted learned and wife: so that it is plain, that the greater number may be in the errour, and those that are few be in the right. And did not the greatest number of the Physicians in Europe altogether adhere to the Doctrine of Galen, though now in Germany, France, England, and many other Nations the most have exploded it? And was not the Aristotelian Philosophy embraced by the greatest part of all the Learned in Europe? And have not the Cartesians and others sufficiently now manifested the errours and imperfections of it, and especially the endeavors of the honourable and learned Members of the Royal Society here in England, and the like Societies beyond Seas by their continual labour and vigilancy about Experiments, made the errours and defects of it obvious to all inquisitive persons? So that multitude, as multitude, ought not to lead or fway us, but truth it felf.

6. If to all this we add, that truth in it felf is but one; for naum and verum are convertibles, and that errour or falfity is various and manifold, and that there may be a thousand errours about one particular thing, and yet but one truth; it will necessarily follow, the greatest number holding an opinion, cannot be safe to be followed, because of their multitude, and the reason is errour, is manifold,

2. It is not fafe nor rational to receive or adhere to an opinion because of its Antiquity; nor to reject one because of its Novelty. And this we shall make good from and by these following reasons.

I. Because there is no opinion (especially about created things) things) but it hath once been new; and if an opinion (hould be rejected meerly because of novelty, then it will follow, that either all opinions might have been rejected for that very reason, or that novelty is no lafe ground only, why an opinion should be oppo-

2. Antiquity and Novelty are but relations quoad nostrum intellettum, non quoad naturam; for the truth, as it is fundamentally in things extra intellectum, cannot be accounted either old or

new. And an opinion, when first found out and divulged . is as much a truth then, as when the current of hundreds or thousands of years have palled fince its discovery. For it was no less a truth, when in the infancy of Philosophy it was holden, that there was generation and corruption in Nature, in respect of Individuals, than it is now: so little doth Time, Antiquity, or Novelty alter, change, confirm, or overthrow truth; for veritas est temporis filia, in regard of its discovery to us or by us, who must draw it forth è puteo Democriti. And the existence of the West Indies was as well before the discovery made by Columbia as since, and our ignorance of it did not impeach the truth of its being, neither did the novelty of its discovery make it less verity, nor the years since make it more: so that we ought simply to examine, whether an opinion be possible or impossible, probable or improbable, true or falle; and if it be falle, we ought to reject it, though it seem never so venerable by the white hairs of Antiquity; nor ought we to refule it, though it seem never so young, or near its birth. For as St. Cyprian faid : Error vetuftatie eft vetuftas erroris. 3. In regard of Natural Philosophy, and the knowledge of the properties of created things, and the knowledge of them, we preposterously reckon former Ages, and the men that lived in them, the Ancients; which in regard of production and generation of the Individuals of their own Species are fo; but in respect of knowledge and experience, this Age is to be accounted the most ancient. For as the learned Lord Bacon faith: "Indeed to fpeak truly, Anti- Advanc. of "quitas fecult, juventus mundt, Antiquity of time is the youth of Learn. I. 1. c. 9. the World. Certainly our times are the ancient times, when the World is now ancient, and not those which we count ancient, ordine retrogrado, by a computation backward from our own times; and yet so much credit hath been given to old Authors, as to invest them with the power of Dictators, that their words should stand, rather than admit them as Consuls to give advice.

3. It is not fafe nor rational to refolve to frick to our old imbi- Rule 2. bed opinions, nor wilfully to reject those that seem new, except we be fully satisfied, from indubitable grounds, that what we account old is certainly true, and what we reckon to be new is undoubtedly false. And this will appear to be a truth, partly from the weakness of their arguments, that seem utterly to condemn all recession from ancient opinions, as vain, foolish, and unnecessary 3 as also from other politive reasons.

I. Som€

1. Some give the reason why they will not recede from an opinion that their Predecessors held; for that their Foresathers were as wise, if not wifer than they. But this, if strictly considered, is very lame and desective; for their Predecessors were but men, and so were liable both to active and passive deception, and were not exempted from the common strailty of Mankind, who are all subject to errours. And therefore, unless they were affured that their Ancestors in former Ages, held the certain and undoubted grounds of truth, it is nothing of reason in them, but meer pervershels of truth with those that are coetaneous with them, which is foolish and irrational. Further, there are more helps now, and means to attain the knowledge of Verity, than were in the days when their Ancestors lived, and it must be a kind of the greatest madness to shut their eyes, that the light of truth may not appear unto them.

2. This kind of reasoning hath no more of reason in it, than if one should say, that because his Grandsather and great Grandsather were blind or lame, therefore they will be so too: or that their Ancestors never learned the Greek or Latine Tongues, nor to write or read, neither will they learn any more than they did: or that their Predecessors were ill husbands and unthrifts, and that therefore they will continue the same courses: or that because their Foresthers sollowed drunkenness and luxury, therefore they will continue the same cariere of vices, as many of our debauched persons do now adays, having no better reasons to alledge for their exorbitant and vicious courses, but what the Prophet condemned, The sathers have eaten som grapes, and the childrens teeth are set on edge.

3. How far would they run back to state the beginning of their Ancestors? If as far as their first Originals, then they must all be Savages, Barbarians, and Heathens. And if they state it distant from their sirst Originals, then their Predecessors had the same reason to have continued, as those did that preceded them. But if their Ancestors varied from, and less the spand opinions of those that went before them, then if they will do as their Ancestors did, they must leave their courses and opinions, as they had done of those that preceded them.

Rule 4.

4. Some say they cannot recede from the opinions of their Predecessors, because it would be a shame and disgrace unto them. But that which we call shame and disgrace consists in the opinion of others, and we ought not to receive errour, or reject truth, by readent. Albert. Abbittion fumitur, utiliue permittitur nasci scandalum, quam veritar relimputation. And to leave an errour to entertain truth, is so far from being a shame and a disgrace, that there cannot be a greater honour or glory: for errare humanum est, sed in errore perseverare belluinum ac diabolicum est.

4. Those effects that seem strange and wonderful, either in respect of Art or Nature, require much diligence truly to discover and find out their causes; and we ought not rashly to attribute those effects to the Devil, whose causes are latent or unknown unto us: and that for these grounds.

CHAP. I.

1. It hath been common almost in all Ages, not only for the vulgar, but also for the whole rabble of Demonographers and Witchmongers to ascribe those strange and wonderful effects, whether arising from Art or Nature, unto the worst of Gods Creatures, if they did not themselves understand their causes, and to censure the Authors that writ of them, as Conjurers and Magicians, as I have made manifest in my former Instances, and might be further made good and illustrated by the effects of healing by the Weapon-salve, the Sympathetick Powder, the Curing of divers Diseases by Appensions, Amulets, or by Transplantation, and many other most admirable effects both of Art and Nature, which by these self conceited Ignorants are all thrown upon the Devils back, and he made the Author and effector of them, as though he had a kind of omnipotent power: of which the learned Philosopher and Physician Van Helmont gives us this account: " Credo equidem cum pietate De Injett.mater. "pugnare, st Diabolo tribuatur potestas naturam superans. Verum 118. 597. " natura ignari prasumunt se natura secretarios per librorum lectio-"nem: quicquid autem ipsos latet, vel adynaton, vel falsum, vel "prastigiosum, atq; diabolicum esto. And a little after he adds this: "Pigritia saltem enim immensa inventum fuit, omnia in wid. pag. 598. "Diabolum retulisse que non capimus , nec velim Diabolum invocau tum, ut noftris fatisfaciat questionibus per temerariam potestatum " attributionem.

2. Whosoever shall read Pancirollus derchus memoralibus noviter repertir, may easily be satisfied, what strange and stupendious things Art and the Inventions of men have produced in these latter Ages. And no man can rationally doubt, but that many more as strange or far more wonderful, may in Ages to come be found out and discovered; for there is a kind of bottomless depth in Arts, whether Liberal or Mechanical, that yet hath not been sounded, but lye hid and unknown unto men. And if these for their wonderfulness should (as former Ages have ignorantly done) be ascribed unto the power of Satan, and their Authors accused of Conjuring and Diabolical Magick, no greater wrong could be done unto Art and Artists, and it would be a kind of blashemy to attribute these stupendious effects (as the Vulgar and Witchmongers use to do) unto the Devil, the worst of Gods Creatures, and the Enemy of Mankind.

3. The third argument I shall take from Mr. Glanvil (which is the greatest piece of truth in all his Treatise) and convert and retort it against him: and is this (he saith) We are ignorant of the Pas. 103. extent and bounds of Natures Sphere and Possibilities. Now if we be ignorant of the extent and bounds of Natures Sphere and against Gods power in Nature, to attribute those effects to wicked. fallen, and degenerated Demons, that we do not know but are produced by the course of Nature. And to ascribe the products of Nature to such wicked Instruments is blasphemous, in depriving Nature of the honour due unto her, and robbing God of the honour and glory belonging unto him, for the wonderful power wherewith he hath endowed his Creatures, who were all made to shew forth his power and Godhead, and the Heavens declare the glory of God, and the Firmament sheweth his handy work : and as one faid very well, Natura creatrix eft quedam vis & potentia divinitus insita, alia ex alise in suo genere producens. So that the honour that is due unto the Creator, Conserver, and Orderer of Nature ought not to be ascribed unto the Devils; for in doing this. the Witchmongers become guilty of Idolatry, and are themselves fuch Witches as are mentioned in the Old Testament, who by their lying Divinations led the people after them to follow Idols; therefore the effects that belong unto Nature, are to be attributed to Nature, and the effects that Devils produce, are to be ascribed unto them, and not one confounded with another. And much to this purpose the learned Father hath a very considerable passage: " Quicquid igitur mirabile fit in hoc mundo, profetto minus eft quam "totus bic mundus, i.e. celum & terra, & omnia que in cie be great by his Creation, and not lessened by his Fall (which is doubtful or falle) yet can he not exert, or put this power into execution, but when, where, as oft, and in what manner, as God doth fend, order, direct, and command him: and could not enter into the herd of Swine, until that Christ had ordered and commanded him; nor to touch Job or afflict him either in his goods or body, until that God had given him licence and order with express limitation how far he should proceed, and no surther. In all which there appeareth nothing at all of his power, but his malice and evil will; and what was effected, was the hand of the Lord, and he but the bare instrument to execute and perform the command. Therefore to ascribe to the Devil the efficiency of those operations we do not clearly understand, is to allow him a kind of Omnipotency, and both to rob God and Nature of that which belongeth unto them; for the Almighty doth work whatfoever he pleases both in Heaven and Earth, and it is he that worketh all in all. And the Devil is but as Gods Executioner to fulfil his will in tempting men, and punishing the wicked, and can act nothing but as God commands him, except the acts of his wicked and deprayed will; for he is with all his Angels delivered into chains of darkness to be reserved unto Judgmenr. To this purpose there is a very true and Christian saying of St. Angustine in these words: "Diabolus plerumq, vult nocere, & non potest, quia potestas ista est dugust. supri " sub potestate : nam si tantum posset nocere Diabolus quantum vult, " aliquis justorum non remaneret.

" funt, que certe Deus fecit : nam & omni miraculo quod fit per bo.

"minem, majus miraculum est bomo. Quamvie igitur miracula vi-

5. The last Rule I shall observe is, That men, if they mean to Rule 5. profit by reading Controversies of this nature, they must prudently and deliberately consider the design that Authors have had in writing. For though it be the general pretence of all, that they write to confute errours, and to maintain truth, yet very few in Disputes of this nature have sincerely performed this pretended end. For some have written (as we shall hereaster make manifest in due place) upon defigned purpose, thereby to establish some points in their corrupted and superstitious Religion. Some because of their own lucre and profit arising by the upholding of these opinions of the great power and performances of Witches, as did all the Inquisitors and their Adherents, having a share in the condemned Witches goods. Others have written in these Subjects meerly for oftentation and vain-glory, to get a name that they were learned and able persons: of all which the judicious Readers ought to beware of, and to consider. There is another main scandal that Witchmongers usually (especially of late) cast upon those that oppose their gross, impious, and blasphemous opinions; but I cannot seasonably give answer unto it, untill I have laid down the state of the question, upon which the substance of this Treatise is grounded, and therefore shall proceed to its Explication.

Of the Notion, Conception, and Description of Witches and Witchcraft, according to divers Authors, and in what fense they may be granted, and in what sense and respect they are denied.

"Hose that are Masters in Ethicks teach us, that every Vertue hath on either fide one Vice in the extreme, and that Vertue only consists in the mean, which how hard that mean is to be kept in any thing, the Writings and Actions of the most Men do sufficiently inform us. This is manifest, that not many years ago the truth of Philosophy lay inchained in the Prisons of the Schools, who thought there was no proficiency to be made therein, but only in their Logical and Systematical ways: so that (in a manner) all liberty was taken away both in writing and speaking, and nothing was to be allowed of that had not the Seal of Academick Sanction. And now when Philosophy hath gotten its freedom, to expatiate through the whole Sphere of Nature, by all forts of inquiries and tryals, to compleat a perfect History of Nature, some are on the other hand grown to rigid and peremptory, that they will condemn all things that have not past the test of Experiment, or conduce not directly to that very point, and so would totally demolish that part of Academick and Formal Learning that teacheth men Method and the way of Logical procedure in writing of Controversies, and handling of Disputes. Whereas what is more necessary and commendable for those that treat of any controverted point in Writing or in other Disputations, than a clear and perspicuous Method, a right and exact stating of the Question in doubt, defining or describing the terms that are or may be equivocal, and dividing the whole into its due and genuine parts, distinguishing of things one from another, limiting things that are too general. and explaining of every thing that is doubtful? Those that would totally take away this so profitable and excellent a part of Learning, are not of my judgment, nor can be excused for having run into that extreme that is extremely condemnable. Let Experimental Philosophy have its place and due honour; and let also the Logical. Methodical, and Formal ways of the Academies have its due praise and commendation, as being both exceedingly profitable, though in different respects; otherwise, in writing and arguing, nothing but disorder and confusion will bear sway.

I have premifed thus much, because the most of the Authors that have treated about this knotty and thorny Subject of Witches and Witchcraft, have been as confused and immethodical as any. For whereas the learned Orator Cicero tells us, that omnis discursus à definitione debet profici (ci ; and that it is alfo true, that what is not aptly and fitly defined or described, as far as the Subject will admit of, is never perfectly understood: yet have the most of these Authors (which are numerous) laid down no perfect description of a Witch or Witcheraft, nor explained fully what they meant by that name, notion, or conception. And therefore, left I become guilty of the same fault. I shall lay down what the most considerable Authors that have treated of this Subject, do mean or intend by this word Witch, and Witchcraft, and shall fully explain in what notion or sense I either allow or deny them, and their actions, and that in this order, and in these Particulars following.

1. Though an argument taken à denotatione nominir be of little weight or validity, and that the industrious and sharp-witted person Galen doth seem to make little account of words, that is, in this respect, when we would only understand the nature of things, yet in another respect he concludeth thus : " Verum qui alterum "docere volet que ipse tenet, buic prorsus nominibus propter res uti " of opus. Now the handling of Controversies is chiefly and principally to inform others, and teach them the truth, and to discover errours; therefore in this respect the explication and denotation of words is exceeding profitable and necessary: and so Plato in Cratylo tells us: " Nomen itagy rerum, substantiam docendi discernen"dia; instrumentum est. And it being a manifest truth, that words are but the making forth of those notions that we have of things, and ought to be subjected to things, and not things to words; if our notions do not agree with the things themselves, then we have received falle Idola or images of them ; but if we have conceived them aright, and do not express them fitly and congruously, then we shall hardly make others understand us aright, nor can clearly open unto them the doctrine that we would teach them.

2. But to come to the fignification and acceptation of the words that those Authors, who have magnified and defended the power of Witches, have used to express their notions by, we shall find them to be so far fetcht, so metaphorical, and improperly applied, that no rational or understanding man can tell us what to make of them. And if we take the notion, as they do, of a killing and murthering Witch, with the rest of the adjuncts, which they couple with it, we shall not be able to find a proper and significative word, either in the Hebrew, Greek, Latine, French, Spanish, Italian, or High Dutch, but a multitude or a Ferrage of words, whereof not one doth properly fignific any such thing, as they would make us believe, by the notion that they maintain of a Witch: of which we shall principally note these.

I. For the Hebrew words used in the Old Testament we shall not mention them here, but afterward, where we speak of the mistranslation of them, and therefore shall pursue them in the Latine and other Languages. And first they sometimes use the word Lamia in the Latine, Alpus in Greek , which Gesner and others tell us doth fignific a terrestrial Creature, or a voracious fish, as also a Spectrum or Phantasm. And this was supposed to be a Creature with a face like a Woman, and feet like a Horse or an Ass, such as (indeed) neither is, nor ever was in rerum natura, but was only a figment devised to affright children withal. But if we will believe Poetical Fables, the Romances of Philostratus concerning Apollonius, or the lying Diary of his Man Damis, we must take it to be a Spirit or Apparition, such as the Greeks called Empusa, that went upon one leg, and had eyes that they could take forth, and fet in, when they pleased. And such a monstrous Fable and Lye was a fufficient ground for doting Witchmongers to build their incredi-ble stories of the power and actions of Witches upon, having no proper word for such a Witch as they fallely believe and suppose. Though there be a Text in the Lamentations of Jeremiah, that Lament, 4, 4, hath given occasion or colour to this vain opinion, especially as the vulgar Latine renders it, which is thus: Sed & Lamia nudaverunt mammam, lactaverunt catulos suos. Filia populi mei crudelis, quast struthio in deserto. The French render it, The Dragons have made bare their breasts: and so have also the Italians in their Translation retained the words Dragon and Offrich; and also the Septuagint render the words sexulis and ression. And Luther in his Translation hath kept the same words, though the Germans call Lamia catulos suos: Filia populi mei in crudelem, veluti ululæ in deserto. But none hath come up close to the mark but Junius and Tremellius, who render the place thus: Etiam Phoca prabent mammam, lastant catulos suos, quomodo filia populi mei, propter crudelem inimicum est similis ululis in deserto. And the Notes upon the place do make it plain : "Vox quidem Hebræa laté patet, significans serpentes & "reptilia magna, sive terrestria sive aquatilia; sed cum non omnium " reptilium fint mamma, neg; aquaticorum fint it quos Propheta vo-" cat catulos , necesse fuit hunc locum ad Phocas, id est marinos vi-"tulos accommodari, qui à natura sint quasi Amphibit. Nam Dra-

" ac proinde hac ad marinum istud genus referri debent. 2. Another far fetcht and improperly applied name to Witches, is Strix, and so some Authors call them Striger; when as the word Strix doth properly fignifie a nocturnal bird, à stridendo sie ditta, that do use to suck the dugs of Goats, and also of young children, which we shall shew hereafter to be a Truth, and no Fable, as ovid

Note volant, puero sq petunt nutricis egentes, Et vitiant cunis corpora rapta fuis. Carpere dicuntur lactentia viscera rostris, Et plenum poto sanguine guttur habent. Est illis strigilis nomen; sed nominis hujus Causa, quod horrenda stridere nocte solent.

This is that fort of bird that Gefner calleth Caprimulgus, and the Greeks 'Airobinas, the Germans Baththogel or Bathtraben, the Hebrews זילית Lillith, as is faid in Ifaiah : Quin & ibi fubito quievit strix (seu lamia) & invenit sibi requiem. It is taken to be a kind of Owl, litter bigger than an Oufel, and less than a Cuckow, they Gifa.de Avib. are blind upon the day, and flye abroad upon the nights, making an horrible noise, and were to be found about Rome, Helvetia, and Crete or Candy, and do certainly fuck the dugs of Goats, that thereby they waste away and become blind. And that they are also sometimes found in Denmark, that learned Physician and laborious Anatomist Bartholinus doth make manifest, and that they do suck the breasts or navils of young children. Now what affinity hath this to a Witch or Witchcraft? but that Witchmongers would bring in any allusion or Metaphor, though never so impertinent or incongruous? For if it were transferred to the actions of Witches, yet as Calepine tells us : Ab hujus avis nocuments striges appellamus mulieres puellulos fascinantes suo contactu. 🔗 lactis mammaruman oblatione. So that if the affimulation were proper in any proportion or particular, those Women they do account Witches, do but hurt the little children with the virulent steams of their breath, and the effluviums that iffue from their filthy and polluted bodies, and fo wrought by contact and contrectation, by which the contagious poylon is conveyed, but not by Witchcraft.

CHAP. H.

3. There is another word that they apply to Witches, as infignificant and improper as the other, and that is Sortilegus, Kensuonizo, a Teller of Fortunes by Lots or Cuts: and Lambertus Danens, who in other things was a judicious and learned person, yet doted extremely about this opinion, calling a Witch Sortiarius, deriving it from Sortilegus, which the French call Sorcier. Now what affinity or congruity hath casting or using of Lots with that which these men call Witcheraft ? furely none at all. For though Lots may, like the best things, be abused and wrested to a vain or evil end. yet are they not altogether evil, but that a civil and lawful use may be made of them, as is manifest this day at the famous City of Venice, where their chief Officers are chosen by them. And also there hath been a godly and divine use made of them even by the Apofiles themselves, in the deciding of the Election of Barfabas and Ad. 1.26, Matthias, upon the latter of which the Lot fell, and so he was numbred with the eleven Apostles. And Solomon tells us, The los Prov. 16. 33. is cast into the lap, but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord. And sure these men were at a loss to find a suitable word to fix upon these Creatures, to whom they ascribe such impossible and incredible actions, when they were fain to bring this appellation of Sortileges, that hath no kinship at all with such Witches, as they mean and intend. 4. Sometimes they call them by the name Saga, which fignifieth no more than a Wife and subtil Woman, being derived à Jagiendo to perceive quickly, or to fmell a thing quickly forth, which the Germans call Bubolo, which is no more than malevolus, or evil-

5. They use the word Veneficus, venefica, and veneficium, and this in its proper fignification and derivation from the Latine, doth import no more than a Poyloner, or to make poylon, venenum facere, and so might perhaps be given unto them, because by Tradition they had learned feveral ways to poylon fecrotly and strangely, as doubtless there may be divers hidden and not ordinarily known ways (as we shall shew hereafter) by which either by smelling, tasting, touching (and it may be by sight) they could kill and destroy, though the means they used, and the effects produced, were meerly natural ; yet because the manner was very pecult and unperceivable, it was through ignorance and want of due inspection into the matters accounted Diabolical; when there was no more of a Devil in the business, than is in a Thief or Murtherer. but only in the Use and Application, which is to steal, kill, or destroy. And this, though now improperly and abusively called Witchcraft, doth but signisse poysoning, and so the French call it Empoisonnement , and the Italians Veneficio Or Avenenatione , and the Germans Bergifftung, which all amount to one purpose. And this Veneficium or poyloning the Greeks call Daguarious and Daguaria from Daquator Medicamentum v l Venenum; for sometimes it was taken in the better sense for a curing and healing Medicine; and fometimes in the worse for poyson that did kill or destroy. Neither can it be found in any Greek Author to fignific any more, than fuch men or women that used Charms and Incantations, and were believed by the Vulgar to effect strange things by them, when in truth and indeed they effected nothing at all but by natural means and secret poysons, and from thence had these names. And the Poets spoke of them to adorn and imbellish their Poems withal. according to common opinion; not that either they themselves believed the things to be so done, as the Vulgar believed, nor to give credit to such false Fables and impossibilities; but to make their Poems more delectable and welcome to the common people, who are usually taken with such fond Romantick stories and lyes. But after the year 1300. when the Spanish Inquisitors, the Popish Do-Gors and Writers had found the sweetness and benefit of the confiscated Goods of those that they had caused to be accused and condemned for Witches, in their sense then these words either in the Greek or Latine were wrested to fignifie a Witch that made a visible and corporeal League with the Devil, when in the true sense of them they did but signifie a secret Poysoner. So that all things were hurried, though never so improper and dissonant, to be made serviceable to their filthy lucre and avaritious felf-endedness. Templum venale Deusgy.

6. Lastly, For Withcraft they used the Latine Fascinum and Fascinatio, and so they called a Witch Fascinator and Fascinatrix, and this the Greeks called Basnasior, Basnasia, Fascinum, Fascinatio, also invidia, odium, seu invidentia, siò su Basuares à fascinando, fen oculis occidendo : the Germans call it Zauberp, and Ber-Jauberung, and sometimes Bermerk; the French Enforcellement and Sorcelerie; the Italians Lestrigare & amaliare, amaliamento; the Belgicks Bermbenge: the Saxons called them and it Picce and Picce cpeers, from whence we have the name Witch and Withcrast, that fignified Saga, Venefica, Lamia, and Fascinum, Magia, Incantatio, Fascinatio, Prastigium: of which (because we shall have occasion to speak more of it hereafter) we shall here only note thefe few things.

1. It is taken sometimes for Envy and Malice, because those that were supposed to use Fascination, did direct it to one Creature more than another through their envious minds, as may be perceivide Alexand. ved by some sew Authors: And so was accounted a kind of eye-Apinod. 11b. 2. biting, whereby (as the Vulgar believed) children did wax lean, and pined away, the original whereof they referred to the crooked and wry looks of malicious persons, never examining the truth of the matter of fact, whether those children that pined away, had any natural disease or not, that caused that macilency or pining away; nor confidered, whether or no there was any efficiency in the envy or wry looks of those malicious persons, but vainly ascribed effects to those things that had in them no causality at all to produce such effects.

2. Sometimes this kind of Fascination was ascribed to the fore or infected eyes of those that were accounted causers of hurt thereby in others, and in this sense Virgil saith: Nescio quie teneros ocu- Eclos. 3. lus mibi fascinat agnos. And by this no more could be underftood, but that those that had infected and fore eyes might infect others, and this was nothing but contagion, or corrupt steams issuing from one body to another, which may happen in many diseases, as is manifest by the Writings of divers learned Physicians, as in bodies infected with the Plague, French Pox, Leprofie, Ophthalmies, and fuch like.

2. Sometimes Fascination is taken for some kind of Incantation. that by virtue of Words or Charms doth perform some strange things; but concerning this there is such incertainty of the opinions of the Learned, some flatly denying that Words or Charms have in them any natural efficacy at all; others as strongly affirming it, that of this point it is very difficult to make a clear determination: and therefore we shall say but this of it here, that the Angelical Doctor did conclude well in this particular, in these words: "Ad Sep. piss. Di "feiendum autem quid sit fascinatio, sciendum est quod secundum c. 3. "glossam fascinatio proprie dicitur ludificatio sensus, qua per artes magicas fieri consuevit, puta, cum hominem facit aspectibus alio-" rum apparere leonem, vel cornutum, & hujusmodi.

Having been thus large in confidering the names and denomination given to those persons that are esteemed Witches, and finding them to be so improper, impertinent, various, and uncertain, let us now proceed to the notion and acceptation of Witchcraft and Witches, to try if in that we can find any more certainty or confonancy, and herein we shall produce some of the chief descriptions that are given of them by several Authors; for to quote all would be tedious and superfluous. Those that are or may be accounted Witches we rank in these two orders.

1. Those that were and are active deceivers, and are both by practice and purpose notorious Impostors, though they shadow their delusive and cheating knaveries under divers and various pretences, some pretending to do their Peats by Astrology (which is a general Cheat as it is commonly used) some by a pretended gift from God, when they are notorioully drunken, debauched, and blasphemous persons, such as of very late years was the Cobler that lived upon Elil Moor, named Richmond, and divers others that I could name, but that in modelty I would spare their reputations: some by pretending skill in Natural Magick, when indeed they can hardly read English truly ; some by pretending a familiar Spirit, as one Thomas Bolton near Knaresborough in Tork fibre, when indeed and in truth they have no other Familiar but their own Spirit of lying and deceiving: some by pretending to reveal things in Crystalglasses or Beryls, as was well known to be pretended by Doctor Lamb, and divers others that I have known. And some by pretending to conjure and call up Devils, or the Spirits of men departed ; and some by many other ways and means that are not necessary to be named here; for errour and deceit have a numerous train of Followers and Disciples. And the existence of such kind of Witches as these (if you will needs call them by that name, and not by their proper titles, which are, that they truly are Deceivers, Cheaters, Couleners, and Impostors) I willingly acknowledge, as having been, and are to be found in all ages, and these forts are also acknowledged by Wierm, Mr. Scot, Johannes Lazarus Gutierius, Tobias Tandlerus, Hieronymus Nymannus, Martinius Biermannus, and all the rest, that notwithstanding did with might and main oppose the groß Tenent of the common Witchmongers.

And of this fort were all those several differences of Diviners. Witches, or Deceivers named in the Scriptures, as Mr. Adr hath A Candle in the fufficiently declared in this passage, which we shall transcribe. "A dark, p. 12,13. "Witch is a man or woman that practifeth Devillish crasts of sedu-"cing the people for gain, from the knowledge and worthin of "God, and from the truth, to vain credulity (or believing of lyes) "or to the worshipping of Idols. And again he saith: "Witch-"craft is a Devillish craft of seducing the people for gain, from the 'knowledge and worthip of God, and from his truth, to vain cre-"dulity (or believing of lyes) or to the worshipping of Idols. "That it is a Craft truly so called, and likewise that it is for gain. "is proved Ad. 16. 16, 19. The Maid that followed Paul crying. "brought in her Master much gain; and that it is a Crast of per-"verting the people, or seducing them from God and his Truth, "is proved All. 6. 7, 8. Elimas the Sorcerer laboured to pervert "the Deputy from the Faith. So likewise Att. 8. 9, 10, 11. it doth "more plainly prove all these words: And there was a man before "in the City called Simon, which used Witchcraft, and bewitched "the people of Samaria, saying, That he himself was some great " man, to whom they gave heed from the least to the greatest, saying, "This man is the great power of God, and gave heed unto him, because that of long time he had bewitched them with Sorceries. "How bewitched them with Sorceries ? That is , seduced them "with Devillish Crasts: (as the Greek and also Tremelius Latine "Translation do more plainly illustrate.) In this sense speaketh Paul "to the Galatians 3. 1. O foolish Galathians, who hath bewitched you, that you should not obey the truth? And that a Witch or "Witchcraft is taken in no other sense in all the Scripture, it appeareth by the whole current of the Scriptures, as you may fee in this Book. But against this Mr. Glanvil and the rest of his opinion will object and say, that it is hard and severe that Cheaters Object, p. 78. and Impostors should be ranked with Inchanters, and such as converse with Devils and with Idolaters, and that of this it is hard to give a reason. To this we shall give this full responsion.

1. We are to consider in what precise respect actions are in Sacred Writ called finful and wicked, and wherefore they have fuch fevere punishments annexed unto them, and we shall find that this Levit. 20, 10. is not ratione medii vel attus, sed finis. As for instance and illustra- Deut. 22. 22, tion: we shall find that the Law was peremptory in point of adul- 23, 24. tery, which faith: If a man be found lying with a woman married to an husband, then they shall both of them dye. Now the act of copulation, as it is an act, is all one with a lawful wife, and with the wife of another man (that is, one generically confidered) and yet the one is lawful, as agreeing with Gods Law and Ordinance, and the other is unlawful, finful, wicked, and therefore to be punished with death, because it is an aberration from the Divine Ordinance, and contrary to the Command of God, who faith, Thou shalt not commit adultery. So though the things committed by these perfons, were or might be performed by natural or artificial means, that simply in themselves were not sinful, or so severely punishable, yet were they evil in regard of the end, which was to deceive and seduce the people to Idolatry.

CHAP. II.

2. Therefore the true and punctual reason why these persons (termed Witches or Diviners) are by the Law of God so severely to be punished, is, because they drew the people to Idolatry, the thing that God most hateth, and against which he hath pronounced the most severe and terriblest judgments of all. Nay these people were the very falle Prophets, especially of one fort, and the 2 Chron. 33. very Priests to the Idols, as is manifest in the wicked and filthy 7, 8. Idolatry of all forts fet up and practifed by Manasses, even all the forts (or the most of them) mentioned in the Scriptures. And God declareth himself to be a jealous God, and that he will not give his glory to another, but is the only Lord God, and him only we ought to serve; and therefore will most severely punish those that attribute that unto Idols, that is only proper unto himself: and for this cause, and upon this ground are all those terrible Comminations used in the Scriptures, and especially against this fort of people, who were the chief Instruments of promoting Idolworship, ascribing the power of a Deity unto them, when the Prophet tells us, Their Idols are silver and gold, the work of mens pal. 115.4, 5, hands; they have months, but they speak not; eyes have they, but 6,711. they fee not; they have ears, but they hear not; no fes have they, but they smell not; they have hands, but they handle not; feet have they, but they walk not, neither speak they through their throat, neither is there any breath in their mouths.

3. That many great and abstruse things may be lawfully done by Natural Magick, is well known to the best Naturalists, and how great Feats may be performed by the Mathematicks and Mechanical Arts, are well known to the Learned; and that there is and may be a lawful use of Astrology, and many things may be foretold by it, few that are judicious are ignorant; that the Prognoflicks in the Art of Medicine are necessary, and of much use and certainty, all learned Phylicians know very well; that observing of times, and many other such like things may for divers respects be lawfully practifed. But if all or any of thefe be used to draw people to Idolatry, and their strange effects ascribed unto dumb and dead Idols, then what horrible lin and abomination were this. and no punishment could be too heavy for it. And so it is in the case of these fort of people called Witches or Diviners, they perswaded the multitude, that their false Gods (or rather Devils) in their Idols, could foretel life or death, and so led the people a whoring after them, as Abaziab fent to inquire of the god of Ekron, whether he should recover or not, and therefore he had that sharp judgment. That he should not come down from that bed whither he was gone up, but should surely dye. And did not the Pricets of Baal (which were the same rabble named Deut. 18, 10, 11, 12, 13, &c.) obstinately labour to make Ahab and all the people believe, that the Gods (or Devils) that they worshipped in their Idols, could and would answer by fire, and pertinaciously persisted in their obstinacy, cutting themselves with knives and lancets from morning until the time of the offering of the evening facrifice, and yet nothing was effected? so that they were justly guilty of that punishment which they received, which was death, for afcribing that to a dead Idol. that none could perform, but the only true God of Fireel, and yet in the mean time could neither by their own skill, nor the skill of their Idols foresee that sudden death that fell upon them: which punishment fell deservedly upon them, for labouring to deceive the people, and confirm them in Idolatry, in ascribing that unto a dead stock, which was only in the power of the Almighty to perform. So if all those fine Knacks and near Tricks that Athanasiae Kircher performed at Rome by the help and means of the Loadstone, and mentioned in his Book de Arte Magnetica, had been by him ascribed unto some Saint, thereby to have drawn the people to the adoration of that Saint, and so to Idolatry, it had been active imposture, deceit, and knavery in him, and he might justly have been inrolled in the Catalogue of these Witches or Diviners, and had really been an active Impostor, as they were, and so had deserved the same punishment: when on the contrary for ascribing effects unto their true and proper caules, and clearly shewing the manner and means of producing those effects, he hath justly deserved the title of a learned and honest man. And though a common Hoene Poene man, or one that playeth Fricks of Leger-de-main or flight of hand, to get a livelihood by, do labour to make the ignorant multitude believe that he doth his Feats by virtue of his barbarous terms or non-lignificant words, or by the help of some familiar Spirit; must therefore a prudent or learned person believe the same, and not labour to understand that those pretences are but used the better to deceive the senses of the beholders, and so that pretence but a cheat and imposture?

We affirm that all these mentioned in the Scriptures (nay. and that the Priests attending all the so famoused Oracles) were but meer Cheaters and Impostors, and that for these reasons. 1. They could not be, nor were ignorant that all their numerous Idols were but the works of mens hands, and that they could not of themfelves move, see, hear, smell, or breathe, much less eat and drink; and therefore were notorious Cheaters and Impoltors in labouring to make the people believe the contrary. 2. They could not be ignorant but what answers were given, and what acts were done. were performed by themselves, and not by the Idols, and yet they laboured to make the people believe the contrary, as the Bramines and Priests do to this day all over the Eastern parts of Asia, and in many other places, and so must needs be notorious Knaves and Cheaters ; because, as Isaiab faith, With part of the wood whereof 14. 44. 15, 16. be bath made himself an Idol, he maketh a five and warmeth himfelf. 3. They could not be ignorant that their Idols could not. nor did declare any thing truly that was to come, but what Anfwers were given, or Divinations were uttered, were of their own deviling and invention, and no other Devil in the case, but Diabolical inspirations in their minds. And this is manifest by their pitiful shuffling equivocations (especially of all the Oracles) their responsions being always ambiguous, and bearing a double sense. which caused Gardan to say : " Oracula, fi non effent ambigua, non "essent oracula. And commonly (if not always) they were given in the favour of those that gave the largest gifts, which made Demosthenes say, that the Oracle at Delphos did onne allow, because it always spoke in favour of rhilip and his proceedings. And it was with the Oracles, as with the Temple of Neptune, All the Offerings of those that escaped shipwrack were preserved, and to beseen; but of those that had suffered shipwrack, there was no memorial nor knowledge of their number : fo, many have noted some few Hits of the Oracles, but few have noted their Milles, which doubtless were far the greater number. For so it is here in this North Country with our Figure-flingers and pretended Conjurers, Pils-Prophets, and Water-Witches, that if they hit once, it is cryed up and told every where; but if they erre an hundred times, it is foon buried in filence and oblivion, and one fool will not take warning at anothers being cheated and deceived. And that their Idols did not. nor could declare truly what was to come, is manifest by the Prophet who faith : Let them bring them forth (that is , their Idols) Ifa. 41. 03,05. and show us what shall happen: let them show the former things what they be, that we may consider them, and know the latter end of them; or declare us things for to come. Shew the things that are to come bereafter, that we may know that ye are gods : yea do good or do wil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together. Yet these miserable, cheating, dissembling Wretches that would have had the multitude to have believed, that their Idols could have foretold truly almost any thing; yet neither their Idols, nor the Gods (or Devils) they pretended to be in them, nor themselves could foretel or forcee their own destruction, as is manifest in the Prophets of Baal in the time of Elijab, who went up to Mount Carmel to advance the worship and power of their Idols, but did not foresee it should be all their destructions and deaths. Doubtles those that in the Book of Daniel are called Wife men, Magicians, Aftrologers, Sorcerers, and Chaldeans were endowed with much rare knowledge, both in respect of Nature and Art: for if their knowledge had been Diabolical, without question Daniel would hardly have interceded for them, yet could they not reveal what the Kings dream was that was gone from him, nor foresee that they run the hazard of their lives; but did conclude that none other could shew it, except the gods whose dwelling is not with stesh. 4. In matters of fact it appeareth, that they were active deceivers and deluders, as is manifest when Pharaob had dreamed two dreams, that he called and fent for all the Magicians and Wife men of Egypt; but they could not interpret them unto him. Junius and Tremelius render it: Omnes Magos Egypti, & omnes Sapientes ejus. The vulgar Latine (or that which is improperly called St. Hieromes Translation) gives it : Misit ad omnes Conjectores Agypti , cunctosq; Sapientes. And these doubtless Pharaoh would not have sent for, but that either upon his own knowledge he knew that they professed the ability of the interpretation of dreams, and (perhaps) as the fequel shewed, greater matters; or else upon common repute, or relation of others, and that must needs arise from their own profession of the knowledge of fuch abstruce matters: and so of necessity must have pretended greater matters, than when they came to tryal they were able to perform, and so must needs be Impostors. And 1 Sam. 28. 11. the Woman at Endor (fallely called a Witch, or a Woman that had a familiar Spirit, when in the Hebrew she is only called the Mistress of the Bottle, as we shall manifest hereaster) must need be a Deceiver and Impostor, because the pretended to bring up whomfoever saul defired, which was a thing absolutely not in her power, as I shall undeniably prove afterwards. And notwithstanding the stories of Enfebine, and the strong endeavours of Doctor Hamond to make it good, that Simon Magus was a person that had peculiar and corporeal converse with the Devil, and by that league and converse could perform strange and wonderful things; yet was he but a notorious Impostor, as appeareth by two reasons. 1. The Text faith, That he gave out that himself was some great one, that is, that he had great skill, and was able to perform wonderful things. This sheweth his presumption and pretence, the certain badge of a Deceiver and Cheater. 2. But could do little, except some petty jugling Tricks of Leger-de-main, confederacy, and the like; because he wondred, or was amazed, beholding the Miracles and figns which were done, and those were, that unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them : And many taken with palses, and that were lame, were healed. Now if he had been any great Magician, or could have performed any great things, he could not have so much wondred at those things that Philip wrought: or if he could have flown in the air, as Enfebius (or those that have foisted such incredible lyes into his Writings) pretendeth, then he need not have been so amazed at the miracles and figns that the Apostles wrought, nor to have offered to have bought the gift of bestowing the Holy Ghost, but only because he was a notorious Dissembler and Impostor. And if he had been in league with the Devil furely he might have cast forth Devils by the power of Belzebub the Prince of Devils: all which do plainly conclude him to be an absolute Cheater and Impostor. And the story of Bel and the Dragen (though but an Apocryphal piece, yet very ancient, and of fufficient credit as to matter of fact) doth evidently demonstrate, that these sort of people were abominable Cheaters and Impostors, and were not endowed with any fupernatural power, nor had affiltance of any visible Demon, but only the Devil of deceit and coulenage in their own breaks, and so were, as Cardan faith, Carnales Damones ipfis Damonibus calli-

5. And though by the Laws of our own Nation these kind of people were to be severely punished, as appeareth by the Statute I Jac. eap. 12. yet had they respect in that Act, not only to the punishment in respect of what these persons could or did do, but also in regard of their being suppostors and Deceivers of the people; for so the Lord Chief Justice Sir Edward Gook, the best Expositor of 11811, 123, 1246. Law that hath written in our Language, doth expound it in these words. The mischies before this part of this Act were: "That dis" vers Impostors, men and women, would take upon them to tell or do these single short shing here specified, in great deceit of the people, and "cheating and consening them of their money or other goods: there-"fore was this part of the Ast made, wherein these words sake upon them, on him or them are very remarkable. For if they take upon them, of the story in truth they do it not, yet are they in danger of this "sirl branch.

6. And whereas in the objection Mr. Glanvil mentioneth converse with Devils, if he mean mental, internal, and spiritual converse, such as Murtherers, Adulterers, Thieres, Robbers, and all wicked persons have with Satan, we grant it; for so had the Jews and the High Priese in coaspiring and acting to put our blessed Saviour to death: it was their bowr, and the power of darkwess. But if he mean a visible and corporeal converte, then we plainly affirm that there is not, nor can be any such, whereby any such trange things (as Witchmongen: fondly and falsely believe) can be performed or effected. Therefore by way of conclusion in this particular, we grant that there are many forts of such kind of

Witches,

CHAP. II.

Witches, as for gain and vain glory do take upon them to declare hidden and occult things, to divine of things that are to come, and to do many wonderful matters, but that they are but Cheaters. Deceivers, and Couseners.

2. And as there are a numerous crew of active Witches, whose existence we freely acknowledge; so there are another fort, that are under a passive delusion, and know not, or at least do not observe or understand, that they are deluded or imposed upon. These are those that considently believe that they see, do, and suffer many strange, odd, and wonderful things, which have indeed no existence at all in them, but only in their depraved fancies, and are meerly melancholia sigmenta. And yet the confessions of these, though absurd, idle, foolish, false, and impossible, are without all ground and reason by the common Witchmongers taken to be truths, and fallely ascribed unto Demons, and that they are sufficient grounds to proceed upon to condemn the Confessors to death, when all is but passive delusion, intrinsecally wrought in the deprayed imaginative faculty by these three ways or means.

1. One of the Causes that produceth this deprayed and passive delution, is evil education; they being bred up in ignorance, either of God, the Scriptures, or the true grounds of Christian Religion, nay not being taught the common Rules of Morality, or of other humane Literature; but only imbibing and fucking in with their mothers and nurses milk, the common gross and erroneous opinions that the blockish vulgar people do hold, who are all generally inchanted and bewitched with the belief of the strange things related of Devils, Apparitions, Fayries, Hobgoblins, Ghofts. Spirits, and the like: so that thereby a most deep impression of the verity of the most gross and impossible things is instamped in their fancies, hardly ever after in their whole life time to be obliterated or washr out: so prevalent a thing is Custom and Institution from young years, though the things thus received, and pertinaciously believed, and adhered unte, are most abominable falsities and impossibilities, having no other existence but in the brains and phantalies of old, ignorant, and doting persons, and are meerly muliercularum & nutricum terriculamenta & figmenta, and therefore did Seneca say: Gravissimum est consuetudinis imperium. And that this is one main cause of this delusion, is manifest from all the best Historians, that where the light of the Gospel hath least appeared, and where there is the greatest brutish ignorance and heathenish Barbarism, there the greatest store of these deluded Witches or Melancholists are to be found, as in the North of Scotland, Norway, Lapland, and the like, as may be feen at large in Saxo Grammaticus, Olaus Magnue, Helfor Boetius, and the like.

2. But when an atrabilarious Temperament, or a melancholick Complexion and Constitution doth happen to those people bred in fuch ignorance, and that have suckt in all the fond opinions that Cultom and Tradition could teach them, then what thing can be imagined that is strange, wonderful, or incredible, but these people do pertinaciously believe it, and as confidently relate it to others? nay even things that are absolutely impossible, as that they are really changed into Wolves, Hares, Dogs, Cats, Squirrels, and the like; and that they flye in the Air, are present at great Feasts and Meetings, and do strange and incredible things, when all these are but the meer effects of the imaginative function depraved by the fumes of the melancholick humor, as we might shew from the Writings of the most grave and learned Physicians; but we shall content our selves with some few select ones. 1. That distemper which schance observe tent our felves with lome rew letert ones. 1. I not different which medic lib. t. Physicians call Lycanthropia, is according to the judgment of Ae. pag. 129. time and Paulus, but a certain species of Melancholy, and yet they really think and believe themselves to be Wolves, and imitate their actions: of which Johannes Fincelius in his second Book de Mirac. giveth us a relation to this purpose. "That at Padna in the year 1541. a certain Husband man did seem to himself a Wolf, and "did leap upon many in the fields, and did kill them. And that "at last he was taken not without much difficulty, and did confi-"dently affirm that he was a true Wolf, only that the difference " was in the skin turned in with the hairs. And therefore that cer-"tain, having put off all humanity, and being truly truculent and "voracious, did smite and cut off his legs and arms, thereby to try "the truth of the matter; but the innoceacy of the man being "known, they commit him to the Chirurgions to be cured, but "that he dyed not many days after. Which instance is sufficient to overthrow the vain opinion of those men that believe that a man or woman may be really transformed or transubstantiated into a Wolf, Dog. Cut, Squirrel, or the like, without the operation of an omnipotent power, as in Lots Wife becoming a Pillar of Salt; though St. Augustine was so weak as to seem to believe the reality of these transformations: of which we shall have occasion to speak more

largely hereafter. 2. Another story we shall give from the Authority of that learned Phylician Nicolam Tulpius of Amsterdam to this effect. A cer Objevat. medica tain famous Painter was for a long time infected with black Cho- 116. 1. cap. 18. ler, and did falfely imagine that all the bones of his body were as foft and flexible, that they might be drawn and bended like foft wax. Which opinion being deeply imprinted in his mind, he kept himself in bed the whole Winter, fearing that if he should rise, they would not bear his weight, but would thrink together by reason of their softness. That Tulpius did not contradict him in that fancy, but said that it was a distemper that Physicians were not ignorant of, but had been long before noted by Fernelius, that the bones like wax might be softned and indurated, and that it might be easily cured, if he would be obedient: and that within three days he would make the bones firm and stable, and that within fix days he would reftore him to the power of walking. By which promifes it was hard to declare, how much hope of recovering health it had raised up in him, and how obedient it made him. So that with Medicines proper to purge the atrabilarious humour within the time appointed, he was at the three days end suffered to stand upon his feet, and upon the fixth day had leave given to walk abroad: and so found himself persectly sound afterwards; but did not perceive the deceit in his phantalie, that had made him lye a whole Winter in bed, though he was no stupid, but an ingenious person in his Art, and scarce second to any.

3. Thomas Bartholinus the famous Anatomist, and Physician to Frederick the Third King of Denmark, tells us these things: "That "it is the property of melancholy persons to fear things not to be "feared, and to feign things que nec picta ufquam funt, nec feripta. cont. 1. Hift. 75. " A Plebeian (he faith) with them abounding with melancholy "blood did imagine that his Nose was grown to that greatness, " that he durst not go abroad, for fear it should be hurt or justled "upon by those he met. And that a famous Poet at Amsterdam "did believe that his Buttocks were of glass, and feared their "breaking, if he should sit down. Another Old man of prime "Dignity did suspect that he had swallowed a nail, which being "lost, he could no where find, and thought himself much tortured "by its being fixed in him. But was restored to his health, by "having a Vomit given, and the Phylician conveying a nail into "the matter that he cast up. And that a certain man in England "would not make water, for fear that all the blood in his body "should have passed forth by that passage, and therefore straitly "tyed the yard with a thred for some days, which swelling he was "not far from death, but that his Brother by force untyed it. The Books of Phylicians are very full with fuch relations, and we in our Practice have met with divers as strange as these, and cured Utsopr. Histor. them. Also he tells us this: "A certain Student of a melancho-"lick Constitution, distracted with grief for the death of a Sister, "and wearied with lucubrations, did complain to (Bartholinus) " of the Devil haunting of him : and did affirm that he felt the evil " Spirit enter by his fundament with wind, and so did creep up his body until it possessed the head, lest he might attend his Prayers " and Meditations with his accustomed devotion, and that it did "descend and go forth the same way, when he bent himself to "Prayers, and reading of Sacred Books. Before these things he "used to be filled with unheard of joy from his assiduous Prayers "and watching, that also he had heard a celestial kind of Mulick, "and therefore despising all mortal things, he had distributed all "things to the poor; but that now piety waxing cold by too much "appetite after meat, and his brain troubled with that wind, that "he had heard a voice of one in his brain upbraiding him with "Blasphemy, and that he felt hands beating, and a stink passing "before his nofe. By all which Bartholinus gueffed, that it was "Hypochondriacal Melancholy, and by good Counfel, proper Phy-"fick, merry Company, and rightly ordering of him, he was per-" feally cured.

4. To these we will only add this that is related by Marcellus Donatus, Physician to the Duke of Mantua and Montferrat, to this purpose. "That he knew a Noble Countes of their City, Historical that did most earnestly affirm, that she was made sick by the mirab. La. c.t. "Witchery and Incantation of a certain ill-minded Woman; which p. 33. "was apprehended by a learned Phylician to be, notwithstanding "her fancy, nothing else but Hypochondriacal Melancholy, which "he cured by giving her proper Medicaments to purge that hu-" mour, and ordering her Waiting maid to put into the matter the "voided Nails, Feathers, and Needles; which when with a glad "countenance the had thewed to her Miltress, the presently cryed " out that she had not been deceived, when she had referred the "cause of her disease to Witchcrast, and afterwards did daily re-

" cover more and more. 3. And as ignorance and irreligion meeting with a melancholick Constitution, doth frame many persons to strange fancies both of fear and credulity: so when to these is added the teachings of those that are themselves under a most strong passive delusion, then of all others these become most strongly consident that they can perform admirable things. As when a perfon hath by education fuckt in all the groffest fables and lyes of the power of Witches and familiar Devils, and therein becometh extremely confident, heightned with the fumes of black Choler, and so thinks, meditates, and dreameth of Devils, Spirits, and all the strange stories that have been related of them, and becometh maliciously stirred up against some Neighbour or other: And so in that malicious and revengeful mind feeketh unto, and inquireth for some famed and notorious Witch, of whom they believe they may learn such craft and cunning, that thereby they may be able to kill or destroy the persons or goods of those that they suppose have done them injuries. Then meeting with some that are strongly deluded, and confidently perswaded, that they have the company and assistance of a familiar Spirit, by whose help they believe they can do (almost) any thing, especially in destroying men or cattel, they are presently instructed what vain and abominable Ceremonies, Observances, Unguents, Charms, making of Pictures, and a thousand such fond, odd fopperies they are to use, by which they believe they can do strange Feats. And from this do proceed their bold and confident confessions of lyes and impossibilities, that notwithstanding have abused so many to take them for certain truths: so that according to the Proverb, Popers and Witchcraft go by Tradition: and we shall find none of these deluded Witches (if they must be Relat. of Lanfo called) but they have been taught by others, that thought them. cafe. Witches. selves to be such also. And this is a truth, if we may trust the confession of Alizon Denice at the Bar at Lancaster, who saith thus: "That about two years agone her Grandmother called Elizabeth "Sotheres, alias Dembdike, did (fundry times in going or walking "together, as they went begging) perswade and advise this Exa-

"minate to let a Devil or a Familiar appear to her, and that she "this Examinate would let him suck at some part of her, and she "might have and do what she would.

But besides these two sorts of Witches, whose Existence we denv not, there is an acceptation of the word Witch in another fense, the Existence of which I absolutely deny, and that is this according to Mr. Perkins. " A Witch is a Magician, who either by open or fe-"cret League wittingly and willingly consenteth to use the aid " and affiltance of the Devil in the working of Wonders.

But the full Description and Notion that the common Witchmongers give a Witch is this. "That a Witch is such a person to "whom the Devil doth appear in some visible shape, with whom "the Witch maketh a League or Covenant, sometimes by Bond "figned with the Witches blood, and that thereby he doth after "fuck upon some part of their bodies, and that they have carnal "Copulation together, and that by virtue of that League the "Witch can be changed into an Hare, Dog, Cat, Wolf, or fuch like "Creatures; that they can flye in the air, raise storms and tempests, "kill men or cattel, and such like wonders. This notion of a Witch may be gathered from the Writings of these persons, Delrio the Iefuit, Bodinus, Jacobus Springerus, Johannes Niderus, Bartholomeus Spinens, Paulus Grillandus, Lambertus Danæus, Hemmingius, Brafins, Sennertus, and many others. As also from the Writings of our own Country men, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Bernard of Balcombe, the Author of the Book called Demonology, Mr. Ganle, Mr. Giffard, and divers others, who have from one to another lickt up the Vomit of the first Broacher of this vain and false opinion, and without due consideration have laboured to obtrude it upon others. Yet was it in a manner rejected by the most of the Learned, who had duly weighed the matter, and read the strong and convincing arguments of Wierns, Tandlerns, Nymannus, Biermannus, Gutierrins, Mr. Scot, and the like, until of late years Dr. Gafanbon and Mr. Glanvil have taken up Weapons to defend these falle, absurd, impossible, impious, and bloody opinions withal, against whose arguments we now principally direct our Pen, and after the answering of their groundless and unjust scandals, we shall labour to overthrow their chief Bulwarks and Fortifications.

CHAP,

CHAP. III.

The denying of such a Witch as is last described in the foregoing Chapter, doth not infer the denying of Angels or Spirits. Apparitions no warrantable ground for a Christian to believe the Existence of Angels or Devils by, but the Word

TAying declared in what sense and acceptation we allow of Witches, and in what notion we deny them, left we be mifunderstood we shall add thus much: That we do not (as the Schools speak) deny the existence of Witches absolute & simpliciter, fed fecundim quid, and that they do not exist tali modo, that is, they do not make a visible Contract with the Devil, he doth not fuck upon their bodies, they have not carnal Copulation with him, and the like recited before, and in these respects, and not otherwise, did Wierne, Gutierrine and Mr. Scot deny Witches, that is, that neither they nor their supposed Familiars could perform such things as are ascribed unto them. And that Dr. Casaubon and Mr. Glanwil should charge those that hold this opinion with Atheist or Sadducism, is to me very strange, having no ground, connexion, or rational consequence so to do : yet doth Dr. Cafanbon affirm it in Of Credulity these words: "Now one prime foundation (saith he) of Atheism, and increase these words: "as by many ancient and late is observed, being the not believing "the existence of spiritual Essences, whether good or bad, sepa-"rate, or united, subordinate to God, as to the supreme and original "Cause of all; and by consequent the denying of supernatural "operations: I have, I confess, applied my self, by my examples, "which in this case do more than any reasoning, and (the Autho-"rity of the holy Scriptures laid afide) are almost the only con-"vincing proof. And Mr. Glanvil is so consident (I might justly fay impudent) that he styled his Book , A Blow at modern Sad- Preface. ducism, which, I confess, is so weak a blow, and so blindly levell'd, and so improperly directed, that I am sure it will kill or hurt no body: and tells us this boldly and roundly. "And those "that dare not bluntly fay, There is no God, content themselves, "(for a fair step and introduction) to deny there are Spirits or "Witches. Which fort of Infidels, though they are not ordinary "among the meer Vulgar, yet are they numerous in a little higher "rank of understandings. And those that know any thing of the "World, know that most of the looser Genry, and the small Pre-"tenders to Philosophy and Wit, are generally deriders of the be-"lief of Witches and Apparitions. And the whole delign of his Book is to prove those men to be guilty of Saddneilm, that deny the existence of Witches understood in his sense, and this we oppose, and the state of the question we lye down thus.

That the denying the existence of Angels or Spirits; or the Refurrection, doth not infer the denying of the Being of God; nor the denying of the existence of Witches (in the sense before laid down) infer the denying of Angels or Spirits; and that they do unjustly charge the Authors of this opinion with Sadducism, we shall

1. There can be no right deduction made, nor no right confequence drawn, where there is no dependency in causality, nor no connexion of dependency. For as in the Relative and Correlative, the denying of the one necessarily destroys the other, yet fundamentum Relationis non destruitur; so a father without a child, as a father, doth neither exist nor is known, and yet the foundation of those two terms, of Paternity and Childship, which is Man, doth remain. So he that denieth Creation, doth destroy the Relative, which is Creator; yet the foundation, which is God, doth remain: and the denying of the Creation, doth not infer the necessary conclusion of denying the Being of a God, because there might be a God, though there were no Creation, because God is supposed to be, both in respect of causality and duration, before Creation. So what relation can Mr. Glanvil feign betwixt the Being of God and the Being of Angels or Spirits? For they both belong to the Predicament of Substance, and not that of Relation; and there is less relation betwixt the Being of a Witch and the Being of Spirits: fo that the denying of the one doth not infer the denying of the other. And though there were relation (which Mr. Glanvil cannot shew) the foundation of that Relation (which is so necessary, that Relatives cannot subsist without it) might remain, though the Relatives were taken away: and therefore the denying of the existence of Angels or Spirts, doth not infer the denying of the Being of God; and therefore the Authors of this opinion are wrongfully and fallely charged with Atheim: and the denying of the existence of a Witch (in the sense specified) doth not infer the denying of the Being of Spirits; and therefore Scot, Osburne, and the like, are falfely and wrongfully charged with Sadducifm.

2. Though it be a true Maxime, that de posse ad esse non valet argumentum, yet on the contrary, the possibility of that can never be rationally denied, that hath once been in effe. But it is apparent, that the Sadducees denied the Resurrection, and that there were either Angels or Spirits, that is, they denied that Angels or Spirits, whether good or bad, did separately exist, and that they were nothing but the good or bad motions in mens minds: yet these men were no Atheists; for though they denied the Resurrection, and held that there were no Angels or Spirits, yet they held and believed there was a God, and did allow of, and believed the five Books of Moses, else would not our Saviour have used an argument, whose only strength was drawn from a sentence in the third Chapter of Exodos, the lixth verse. So that even the denying of the Existence of Angels and Spirits, doth not infer the denying of a God; much less doth the denying the Existence of a Witch, infer the denial of the Being of Angels and Spirits; and therefore the charge of Atheism and Sadducism is false, injurious, and scan-

3. Those things that in their Beings have no dependence one Argum. 3. upon another, the denying of the one doth not take away or deny the being of the other; but where the being doth meerly exist in dependency upon another superior Cause, there take away or deny the being of the first Cause, and thereby you take away and deny the being of all the rest that depends upon it. So he that denies the Being of a God, doth necessarily deny the Being of Angels or Spirits; but not on the contrary. For he that denieth the Existence of Angels and Spirits, doth not therefore necessarily take away or deny the Being of a God, because the Being of a God is independent of either Angel or Spirit, and doth exist solely by it felf. And therefore if Wierus or Scot had denied the Existence of Angels and Spirits (which they did not) yet it would not have inferred that they were Atheists; and therefore are falsely accused by Dr. Casanbon and Mr. Glanvil. And though they should have denied the Existence of Witches (which they did not simpliciter, (ed tali modo) yet it would not have inferred, that they were guilty of Sadducism, because Spirits or Demons have their Exi-

Rence without any dependence of the being of Witches; and therefore it is but a poor fallacia consequentia to say, he that denies a Witch, denies a Demon or Spirit.

4. The denying of the Existence of Spirits, doth not infer the Argum. 4. denying of the Being of a God, because in the priority of duration God was when Spirits were not, for they are not immortal à parte anté. So likewise the denying of the Existence of Witches, doth not infer the denial of the Being of Spirits, for in the priority of duration Spirits were existent before Witches; for Adam and Eve could not be ignorant that there were Spirits, both good and bad, and yet then there were no Witches. So that a Spirit having, in respect of duration, a Being before that a Witch can have any; the denying the Existence of the latter, doth not infer the denying of the Being of the former, but is meerly inconsequent, agreeable to no Rules of Logick, except that of Logger-head Colledge. 5. Many properties or proper adjuncts may be ascribed unto a Argum. 5. substance, the denying of which adjuncts, doth not infer the denying of the being of the substance. So that to deny that a Horse hath fins like a fifb, or wings like a bird, doth not infer the denying of the being of a Horle. Therefore it is injurious and scandalous in Dr. Casanben and Mr. Glanvil, to charge Dr. Wierus and Mr. Scot with Atheism and Sadducism, when indeed (as we shall prove hereafter) their own Tenents tend to blasphemy, impiety, vanity, and uncharitableness.

Another thing that we oppose is, that Apparitions are no warrantable

rantable ground for a Christian to believe the Existence of Angels and Spirits by, but the Word of God, which these cogent reasons do sufficiently prove.

Argum. 1. 1. For to say that the Apparitions of Spirits, good or bad, do prove their Existence, is but petitio principit, a begging of the question, that first is in doubt, and ought to be proved. For how come we to be affured, that the Apparitions that are made, and really by unquestionable Witnesses attested for truth (not to speak of melancholy Fancies, and Fables, Knacks of Knavery and Impofture, and other ignorant and groß mistakes, which are often believed to be Apparitions, when they are no such matter) that they are made by good or bad Spirits? for that is the thing in doubt, and so is but a circular way of arguing by way of begging the question, or proving ignotum per ignotius; for Apparitions do not prove the Being of Spirits, except it be first proved that those Apparitions be made or caused by Spirits.

Argum. 2. 2. There are many Apparitions that are produced by natural and artific i Causes, and need not be referred to supernatural ones, as are all the e Idola, Images, or Species that we fee in Glaffes, which cannot be denied to be Apparitions, and yet arise from natural Causes. So the Apparition of Comets, new Stars, and many other fort of Strange Meteors, as sometimes three Suns, the Rain bow, Halones, and the like, that have natural Causes to produce them, and are no proof of the Being of Spirits. Nay as the best and most credible Historians have left upon Record, and hath been known to be a certain verity in divers parts of these three Kingdoms, within the space of these forty years, trange and various Sights have been seen in the Air, both of Men, and Horses, and Armies fighting one with another; and yet were these no proof of the Existence of Spirits, because they may (and doubtlessly do) proceed from other causes. and not from the operation or efficiency of Angels or Spirits, either good or bad.

3. It is not certainly known what diversity of Creatures there may be that are medie nature betwixt Angels and Men, that may fometimes appear, and then vanish: so that if it be granted, that there be Apparitions really and truly, yet it will not necessarily follow, that these are caused by good or bad Angels, because they may be effected by Creatures of another and middle Nature; and so Apparitions no certain ground for the believing of the Existence Ja, Drufii Pra. of Angels or Spirits. For the most learned Drufine gives us this ac-

" quod incipit, Sedet in occulto Supremus. And if this be a truth, here are orders and numbers enough of several forts to make Apparitions, and yet be neither the good or bad Angels. And if there may any credit be given to the relation that Cardan gives of D. Subil. Light his Father Facius Cardanus, which he had from his own mouth, and also had lest it in writing; then "there are mortal Demons, that " are born and do die as men do, that can appear and disappear, "and are of such most tenuious bodies, that they can afford us "neither help nor hurr, excepting terrors, and spectres, and know-"ledge. And if there may be credit given to Plutarch (so highly magnified by Dr. Cafanbon) the God Pan of the Heathens must have been one of these mortal Demons, because he tells us upon the credit of Epotherfes (a Tale of hear fay) "That Thamus was by a Di Nymph. lib. "voice thrice calling upon him, commanded that when he came to pag. 389. " Palodes, he should tell them, that the great God Pan was dead. And that there are such mortal Demons, is strongly asserted by Paracelfus, and by him called Nymphe, Sylphi, Pygmei, and Salamandre, and that they are not of Adams Generation, and that they have wonderful power and skill. And to this opinion do the Schools both of the ancient and later Academicks wholly incline. and seems to be favoured both by Dr. Moor and Mr. Glanvil himfelf; and if there be any fuch matters, doubtless from thence did arise all the strange stories and gests that former Generations have told and believed concerning the Apparition of these kind of Creatures, which the common people call Fagries: of which the Reverend and Learned person Bishop Hall giveth us this touch : The invisible "The times are not past the ken of our memory, fince the fre- World, fect. 6. "Fayries, and Goblins, wherewith many places were commonly "haunted, the rarity whereof in these latter times, is sufficient to "descry the difference betwixt the state of ignorant Superstition. " and the clear light of the Gospel. And whosoever shall seriously read and confider that little Piece that was printed some few years fince, though written long ago, and by some (that pretend to no small share of Learning) cryed up exceedingly for a most convincing Relation, to prove the Existence of Spirits, called, The Devil of Mascon, may easily gather, that if the thing were truly related, as to the matter of fact, that it must needs be some Creature of a middle Nature, and no evil Spirit, both because it was such a sportful and mannerly Creature, that it would leave them, and not disturb them at their devotions; as also (as far as I remember, for I have not the Book by me because it denied that it was a Devil, and professed that it hoped to be saved by Christ.

4. That the Scriptures contain in them all things necessary to Argum. 4. Salvation, is so clear a truth, that none but those that are wilfully blind can deny it; for Christ taught his Disciples all things that Joh 14. 14. he had learned of the Father, and the Father fending him to be the Saviour of the World, and to preach the Gospel of eternal Salvation, was not defective in declaring all things that were necessary to accomplish the work and end, for which he was sent forth of the Father. And the glorious Apostle St. Paul tells the Disciples and Breihien , That he had not founned to declare unto them all the Act. 20. 27. counsel of God, which must of necessity be abundantly sufficient for their Salvations. And he telleth Timothy, That he had known 2 Tim. 3. 15, the Scriptures from a child, which were able to make him wife unto Salvation. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for dottrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righscoulnels: That the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works. Nay the Woman of Samaria had so much knowledge and faith, that the believed that when the Meffias was come, he would tell them all things. Now to the obtaining of Salvation, there is nothing more necessary than to know what enemies men have to fight against in their Christian Warfare, which Eph.6.11,12, the Apostle tells in these words: For we wrestle not against sless rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places : Wherefore they are to take unto them the whole armor of God, muserias in Oil, that they may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil, unbering in Sunstan: and that made the Apostle say in another place, We are not ignorant of his devices or crafts, voluda. Now the Scriptures being able to make us wife to Salvation, it hath sufficiently declared the natures, powers, knowledge, and offices of both the good and bad Angels, and is a fure word of 2 Pet. 1. 19. Prophecy, unto which it is good to take heed, and not unto old wives fables of Apparitions and Goblins, such as Mr. Glanvil would perswade us that they are tydings of another World, when we are Luk. 16.29,30, taught by unerring testimony of Truth, That those that have Moses and the Prophets, and do not bear them, neither will they be per-finaded, though one rose from the dead. And therefore we must be bold to tell Mr. Glanvil, that the Sacred Scriptures do with infallible certitude teach us, that both good and bad Spirits have most certainly an Existence, and therefore we need none of his feigned nor forged stories of Apparitions; which if they were certainly known to be true and real, by undeceivable matters of fact, yet he that doth not believe what is written of the Being of Spirits by Moses and the Prophets, will not believe Apparitions, no not of a man, if he came from the dead. And therefore I will conclude with Sup. Gin. ad lit. that precious and pithy Sentence of St. Austin, who saith: Major est hujus Scriptura anthoritas, quam omnis humani ingenii perspicacitas. And believe not them that fay, If you would know the power of Devils and Witches, go to the Writings of Dr. Calas-bon, Mr. Glanvil, and to the rest of the Demonographers and Witchmongers, that amass and heap together all the lying, vain, improbable, and impossible stories that can be scraped forth of any Author, ancient, middle, or modern, when we are commanded to go

16.8.19,20. to the Law and to the Testimony, if they Beak not according to this word, it is because there is no truth in them. And so I shall shut up this Chapter, wherein (I suppose) I have sufficiently proved, that the denying of such a Witch as I have described, doth not infer the denial of the Being of Angels or Spirits, and that Apparitions are no sufficient grounds for Christians to believe the Existence of Angels and Spirits by, but the Word of God; which was the thing undertaken to be proved.

That the Scriptures and found Reason are the true and proper Mediums to prove the Actions attributed unto Witches by, and not other improper ways that many Anthors have used. And of the Requisites necessary truly to prove a matter of Fact by.

As we have in the former Chapter proved, that Apparitions (though true) are no sufficient warrant to ground our belief upon, for the Existence of Angels or Spirits, but the Word of God: To here we shall endeavour clearly to manifest, that the Sacred Scriptures are the only Medium, joyned with sound Reason, of deciding this point of the power and operation of Demons and Witches, and not other improper Mediums brought in by divers Authors, and first we shall answer the Objection of Mr. Glanvil, that runs

"That though the New Testament had mentioned nothing of Objett. 1.

1: He falleth into a common mistake in making the Proposition Responsative values of the versatur in universalism, when it ought but to be particular: To for him to say, that no silence of Scripture is argumentative, is too universals for its silence in point of Geography, as in describing America, and the people thereof, nor in discovering the Magnalia Nature & Artis is not argumentative; and we do not say, that all silence of Scripture is argumentative,

CHAP. IV.

2. The Scriptures were not written to teach Naural Philolophy, Arts or Sciences, humane Policy, or the like; but were given, that the man of God might be perfett, furnished for every good work : and it is by them that we have the doctrine of eternal Salvation reyealed unto us, and we politively affirm the fufficiency of the Scriptures unto Salvation, which thing no Orthodox Divine (we suppose) will deny, and Bellarmine himself did confes in these words: Prophetici & Apostolici libri sunt verum verbum Det, ac stabilie regula fidei. Aud if it be a certain Rule of Faith, and the true Word of God, then whatfoever it is filent of, we ought not to believe, and fo its filence is argumentative in that point. The Scriptures are utterly filent concerning Purgatory, and therefore it is a good argument to affirm there is no fuch place as Purgatory, because the Word of God is filent as concerning it ; but if it had been necessaty to have been believed, then there would have been mention made of it.

3. And as the Scriptures are fufficient in matters of Faith, and 3. And as the scriptures are tunneled in the state, and circa credenda, and what they are filent in six not to be received as Articles of our Faith, but to be rejected, as having ho truth of Existence: So likewife what Worldip Ood requireth of his beople, is fully revealed in his World, and therefore Than to reject the worthipping of Mahomet with the Turks, or Images, and praying to Saints with the Papifts, because I have neither precept nor prefident in the Word, but it is filent in fuch matters ; nay tells us, That be is the Lord our Goll, and him only we ought to ferve.

4. Though Mr. Glanvil fay, that God hath given no account of the that of the other World, but only that general one of the hap-pines of some, and the misery of others; yet Am'l to believe as Mr. Glanvil somewhere in his Book affirmeth; that same Soul was raised up by the Woman at Endor, and that those that he feigneth to make Luagues and Contracts with Witches, are the Souls of fuch as had been Witches when they lived, and asketh, Who faith that happy Souls were never imployed in any ministeries here below? Or am I to believe that both the Souls of the godly and wicked, do rove up and down here upon earth, and make Apparitions, because the Popilin Teachers do hold it to be for I hope not, and therefore I shall in part give an answer here to fome of these, and handle that of the Woman of Endor in another place! "1. The Word of God doth particularly teach us the state and condition of the Souls after death, that they shall be like the Angels in Heaven; and all other things necessary to move and draw us to believe the immortal Existence of Souls', as that most able and learned Divine Dr. Stillingfleet hath afferted in thefe words : "The Scriptures give

"the most faithful representation of the state and condition of the "Soul of Man "The World (he faith) was almost lost in Disputes 6.6.9, 608. A Sentence truly pious and orthodoxal. 2. Hath not God in the holy Scriptures amply and plainly taught us the state of the other World, in deferibing unto us firch a numerous company of Seraphims and Cherubims, Angels and Archangels, with their leveral Orders, Offices, 'Ministeries, and Imployments ? and this is more than a general account; as may be feen at full in that learned and godly Piece of Bithop Halls, called The invisible World: And hath he not given us a particular account of the very Kingdom of Darkness, telling us of the Devil and his Angels, and precifely in this enumeration? For we wrestle not with stell and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against fietiMal wiekednofe in high places. And this is more than a general account; and we tauft needs fay , that what he holds is very derogatory to the wisdom and goodness of God, and the sufficiency and truth of the Scriptures. 3: Mult d believe him that the fouls of the Saints do rove and wander here below ? when as Bithop Hell thirth, where he is speaking against the opinion of those that hold, that Souls do fleep until the Day of Judgment : "In- Invitib. Sure if the Souls departed be with Christ where he is and do behold his glory, then it is a Popith Fable of Mr. Glanvil, to feign their coming upon Messages higher. The faying of Str Bernard is remarkable in this case: Adverptfie tree effe fantturum fatue unimarum , primum videlicet in -coopere voreaptibili, secundum fine corpore; tertium in corpore jam glorificator : Primum vie militia, foundum in requie, tertium in chentitudine confimmates hand if the second state of holy Souls -be without a body; and be at peace and reft, then it must necesfamily be a truth I that they do not wander here, nor run upon Ertrands 30 For the fouls of the righteom are in the hands of the Lord, Wild. 2. 1. handshere fhall no somens souch them And our Saviour told the Thefupon the Croft, This day thou shalt be with me in Paradife, Luk. 23. 43. -that is, as Der Frammond giveth the Paraphrafe : "Immediately after "thy death thou shalt go to a place of blis, and there abide with " me, a Weinber of that my Kingdom which thou askelt for. Now If the fouls of the godly, after their death, be immediately in a place of blifs, and abide with Christ as Members of his Kingdom, then they do not wander up and down here, as Mr. Glanvil and the Papifts vainly fancy and believe; for as Chryfostome faith upon that place of Lazarus his being carried by Angels into Abrahams bosome, "What is it then that the Devils say, I am the Soul of such contio finali "a Monk? Truly I therefore believe it not, because the Devils say "it, for they deceive their Auditors. 4. Or must I believe that the fouls of the wicked do wander, and make Apparitions here, because Mr. Glanvil and the Popish Writers tell me so? I hope not; Luk. 15.22,23. for the Text telleth us plainly, that the rich man presently after his death was in Hell in torments, and could not come hither unto earth again to warn his brethren, otherwise he would not have prayed Abraham to have sent Lazarm. And whether it be taken for a real History of things done, or but a Parable, yet the spiritual meaning of our Saviour must be infallibly true, that immediately after death the fouls of the godly are by Angels carried into Abrahams bosome, and the wicked go down into Hell, from whence there is no redemption; and therefore do not wander up and down here, nor make any Apparitions: for I imagine that the authority of holy King David, a Prophet and a man after Gods own heart, is to be preferred before the authority of a thousand Popish Writers, and he tells us, when the child was dead : But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast ? can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but be Shall not return to me. And Job tells us : As the cloud grave, shall come up no more, he shall return to more to his house, neither fall his place know him any more. And therefore it was a vain argument of Bellarmine when he faid : "Apparitiones animavalitioni 2.1136 "rum ex Purgatorio venientium idem testantur. To which the Protestants answer: "But who shall bear witness of these Appari-"tions, that they were not either feigned fables, or Satanical illu-"fions? They were men, and might be deceived, even the best of "them, with whom doth rest the faith of these Narrations. 5. And whereas he audaciously asketh, "Who faith that happy Souls were "never imployed in any Ministeries here below? I shall tell him who they are that fay, that happy Souls departed are never imployed here in any Ministeries; and they are all the learned Divines of the Reformed Churches, and all those that were true Sons of the Doctrine of the Church of England, such as were Bishop Jewel, Bishop Hall, Dr. Willet, Dr. Whitaker, Mr. Perkins, and many more such, the authority and reputation of the least of which is Homil. fell. 16. far above the simple question of Mr. Glanvil. And therefore saith the latter Confession of Helvetia: "Now that which is recorded " of the Spirits or Souls of the dead fometimes appearing to them "that are alive, &c. we count those Apparitions among the delu-"flons and deceits of the Devil.

3. And as the Scriptures are sufficient both in respect of matters of Faith, and concerning divine Worlhip, that their filence in those two particulars are fully argumentative, to deny whatever is not contained in them, as unfit to be received to either purpole. So in respect of a Christians warfare, all things for the obtaining of a perfect and compleat victory, and for standing and perseverance, are in them fully declared, and what they mention not is to be rejected, as wanting the feal of Divine Authority, whether it be in regard of eschewing what is prohibited, or in following what is commanded. And therefore we affirm, that what the Scriptures have not revealed of the power of the Kingdom of Satan, is to be rejected, and not to be believed, and what weapons we are to use against the wiles of the Devil, we are to be furnished withal, but have need of no others but what the Holy Choft in the Scriptures hath made known unto us, the rest are to be cast off, as fables and lyes, or humane inventions, because the Scriptures are silent of any fuch matter, and that for these weighty grounds and considera-

I. We shall take the Concession of Bellarmine himself, who faith: Nullum est vitium ad quod sanandum non invenitur in Scriptura aliquod remedium. And again: Illa que sunt simpliciter omnibus necessaria, Apostoli consucuerunt omnibus pradicare : 📀 aliorum qua funt omnibm utilia. And to the same purpose is the saying of St. Austin : Titubat sides, si divinarum Scripturarum va. Di Dolliin. cillet authoritas : porrò fide titubante, etiam ipsa charitas langue-Git. Therefore if there be no fault for which the Scripture doth not yield some remedy, then surely to make a visible League with the Devil, or to have carnal Copulation with him, either must have no verity at all in it, or that the Scripture hath provided no remedy for it, for of such things there is no mention. And if Faith must stumble, where the authority of the Scriptures is wanting, then furely the belief of all rational men must needs be staggering. to believe what these common Witchmongers affirm of the Witches visible League and carnal Copulation with the Devil, when there

2. The Scriptures do fully and abundantly inform us of the Devils spiritual and invisible power, and against the same declares unto us the whole Armor of God, with which we ought to be furnished, as the Apostle saith: Put on the whole armor of God, that Eph d. 11,12, ge may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wre- 13. file not against sies and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and betting done all, to fland. And the Apolite St. Peter telleth us: Be sober, he vigilant, became your adversary the devil, 1 Pa. s. 4, 9. like a roaving tion, walketh about seeking whom he may devour; whom resset fledsist in the saith. CHAP. IV.

1. We are to consider the nature of this Warfare, that it is spiritual and against spiritual wickedness in high places, and not against flesh and blood; and the Holy Ghost could not be wanting nor desective, but superabundantly full in describing the nature of this warfare, that it is spiritual, not carnal; and therefore we are to prepare our selves against all spiritual assaults: but as for any visible, carnal, or bodily, there is not, nor can be any such, because the Apostle that declared by his Preaching and Writings the whole counsel of God, hath revealed no such thing as the visible appearing of Satan, much less of his making of a visible League with the Witches, or the sucking of their bodies, or the having carnal Copulation with them, which must of necessity be lyes and figments, because the Holy Ghost hath not warned us of any such, which we ought certainly to believe he would have done, if there had been any fuch matter. And the holy Apostle, who was not ignorant of the devices tolquals, notions or intentions of Satan, would not have omitted to have warned the godly, if there had been any fuch matter as a visible League, sucking of their bodies, or carnal Copulation, the thing being of so great weight and concern. For as one said well: Grave est de vita & bonis periclitari , sed multo gravins insidiantem habere Satanam. And he that so often hath given us warning of the wiles, devices, and mares of the Devil, if there had been any such dangerous snare as this, would without

2. We are to confider the end of this Warfare, that it is for no less than a Crown, and that not a terrestrial, but a celestial one, not a fading one, but an everlalting one, a Crown of eternal life, of immortal glory, even for an house given of God, eternal in the Heavens. Therefore this being a thing of the greatest concern that belongs to a Christian, the Apostle would not doubtlest omit any thing that had been necessary to the obtaining of such an inestimable prize, and such an important Victory; and therefore cannot in reason have concealed or omitted such a weighty matter as a visible League, and the like, if there had been any fuch thing.

3. We are to consider that this Armor prescribed for the Souldiers of Jesus Christ, is the whole armor of God, marenalar, the compleat armor of God (as Dr. Hammond renders it) perfect both for defence and offence. And therefore the Apostle describes it fully by a Metaphor, taken from such Arms as the Roman or other Na-Eph. 6.14, 15, tions in his time did ufe, laying: Stand therefore, having your 16, 17, 18. loyns girt about with truth, and having on the breast-plate of righteonsness: And your feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace. Above all taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the belimet of faluation, and the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God. Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all Saints. And as it is a compleat and persect Armor, both in respect of defence and offence; so it is a spiritual, not a carnal, corporeal, or bodily armor, because the warfare is not against slesh and blood, but against spiritual wickednes in high places, against spiritual enemies, not against corporeal and carnal ones; for as the enemies are and the warfare, so are the armor and weapons. From whence we truly urge, that the Apostle led by the Holy Ghost, and the Wisdom of the Father, and knowing the whole counsel of God (especially in this point) hath omitted nothing that is fitting armor for a Christian either of desence or offence, whereby he may be inabled to get the victory against Satan, and all his spiritual Army. And therefore that either Satan hath not power, or doth not affault Christians after a visible, carnal, and bodily manner, or else that the Holy Ghost hath been defective in prescribing armor against fuch affaults, and confequently that the armor of a Souldier of Jefus Christ is not compleat, or else there is no such bodily assaults of Satan at all, as to tempt visibly, to make a corporeal League, to fuck upon the Witches bodies, nor to have carnal Copulation with them. But we affirm, and that (as we conceive) with found reafon that the Scriptures in this particular of a Christians armor, and the compleatness of it, is abundantly sufficient against all spiritual affaults whatfoever, and confequently that there is no other kind of affaults but meerly spiritual, and therefore the Word of God, the most proper Medium with found reason, to judge of the power of Spirits and Devils by. 3. That the Scriptures and found reason are the only true and proper Medium to decide these Controversies by, is most undeniably apparent, because God is a Spirit, and the invisible God, and therefore best knows the nature and power of the spiritual and invisible World, and being the God of truth, can and doth inform us of their power and operations, better than the vain lyes and figments of the Heathen Poets, or the dreams of the Platonick School, either elder or later, nay better than all the notional and groundless speculations of the School-men, of whom it may truly be said that, Rivulo divina Scriptura relicio, in abyfos vanarum opinionum inciderunt. Nay these can better inform us in this point, than the Writings of all Mortals besides, and therefore whatsoever may be faid to the contrary, may receive its answer from the Father: Quod de Scripturis saris authoritatem non habet, câdem sa Green superioritate contemnitur, qua probatur. Therefore he being the King Tim. 1. 17. eternal, immortal, invisible, and the only wife God, of none can we fo truly and certainly learn these things, as of him who hath plentifully taught us in his Word all things necessary to Salvation, that the man of God may be perfett, throughly furnished to every Heb. 12. 9. good work. Nay he is the Father of Spirits, and therefore truly

4. The Scriptures (especially the Writings of Moser) considered only as Historical, are of more antiquity, verity, and certainty both as to Doctrine, Precepts, matters of Fact, and Chronology, than via one for all other Hiltories what loever, whether of the Phenicians, Egypti-1.1. 1.1. p. 15. ans, Chaldcans, or Grecians, as the learned person Dr. Stilling fleet hath sufficiently proved. Now if there had been such an one as a Witch, that made a visible League with the Devil, and upon whose body he fuckt, and with whom he had carnal Copulation, something of that nature would doubtless have been recorded in the Scriptures, of which notwithstanding there is not the least tittle or mention. And Moles who was fo perfect a Law-giver, as in a manner to omit no kind or fort of fin or evil that men possibly could commit, but to foibid it, and make a Law against it, could never have left out such an horrid, unnatural, and hellish wickedness as carnal Copulation with the fallen Angels, if there had been any fuch matter. For he faith, after he had forbidden all forts of Fornications, Adulteries, and Incests: Thou shalt not lye with mankind. as with womankind: it is abomination. Neither shalt thou lye with any beaft to defile thy felf therewith : neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lye down thereto: it is confusion. Defile not your selves in any of these things: for in all these the nations are defiled, which I cast out before you. Now it cannot be rationally imagined, that > lation and Sodomy, would have left out that which is the most horrid and execrable of all others, to wit, carnal Copulation with Devils, if there had been any fuch thing either in possibility or act. And therefore we may conclude according to the rules of found reason, that there is no such matter, and that the Scriptures are the most fit Medium to decide these Controversies. 5. The Scriptures and found reason are the most fit Mediums to determine these things by, because there is nothing that any hath written upon this Subject (though the Authors be superfluously numerous) but if it agree not with the principles of right reason, and the rules of the Scriptures, they ought to be rejected. For what is not confonant to right reason, ought not to be received by any that truly are rational Creatures; and what agrees not with the Word of God, ought not to be entertained by any that are or would be accounted good or true Christians. And if all the gross fables. lyes, impossibilities, and nonsensical stories that Demonographers and Witchmongers have related and accumulated together, were brought to the test of the Scriptures and found reason, they would foon be hiffed off the Stage, and find few believers or embracers of them. But alas! all (nay few men) have the right use and exercife of their rational faculty, but men to fee to are in themselves as beafts; and therefore we may all pray with the Apostle to be delivered from unreasonable men, or men without reason, or absurd

men, that make no right use of reason, aronar articonare 6. The Scriptures and right reason have declared all things concerning Spirits either good or bad, as also all forts of Diviners (or Witches, if you will have them called so) and the nature, power, operations, and actions of them, more than any other Book that was written before the time of our Saviours Birth (the dreams and whimsies of the Platonists only excepted) or for the space of three hundred years after, and therefore are the most fit Medium and Authority to determine these things by. 1. For first it is manifest, that all things are ordered by the wisdom of the Almighty, who hath done whatfoever he would both in Heaven, and he doth Dan. 4.35. according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doft thou? And these things God doth not by a naked prescience, but by his divine will, providence, and ordination, as a learned Divine hath taught us in these words: Est hoc inprimis necessarium & salutare Christiano nosse, quod Deus nihil prascit contingenter, sed quod omnia incommutabili & aterna, infallibiliq; voluntate & providet, & praponit, & facit. So it was only his will, decree, and determination, that Christ should not be born, or affume humane nature visibly, but at that precise time that he had appointed, according to the evidence of the Apostle. But when the Gal. 4. 4. fulness of time was come, God sent forth his son made of a woman, made under the law. And when that fulness of time was come that he sent him, then did the divine Wisdom and Providence ordain all means, objects and occasions, whereby the fulness of the Godhead that dwelt in him bodily, might be made manifest, by working of miracles, both by himself and his Apostles, therefore were there so many several forts of Demoniacks, blind, lame, dumb, deaf, and diseased, not by chance, but by the providence of the Father, and only and chiefly that the work of God might be manifest in them, for the Evangelist tells us: And as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which Joh. 9. 1, 2, 3: was blind from his birth. And his Disciples asked him, saying, Mafter, who did fin, this man or his parents, that he was born blind ? Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents, but that the works of God should be made manifest in him. Upon which place Dr. Hammond doth give this clear Paraphrase: "And some of his followers asked him, saying, Sir, was it any sin of his "own, when his foul was in another body, or was it some sin of his parents at the time of his conception, which caused this blind-"ness in him? Neither his own, nor his parents sins were the cause " of this blindness of his, but Gods secret wisdom, who meant by "this means to thew forth in me his miraculous power among you. And though the Doctor would bring in the opinion of Pythagoras of the Transmigration of Souls (of which vain traditional fancies he is almost every where guilty) as received and imbibed in by some of the Jews that then followed him : yet it appeareth plainly, that it was not interrogated by the Jews, but by his Disciples, il Mathila, and therefore it is a wonder the Doctor should be so grofly miftaken; and Theophylatt tells us thus much plainly : Neg; enim Apostoli Gentiles nugas receperant, quo anima ante corpus in alio mundo versans peccet, ac deinde pænam quandam recipiat in corpus descendens. Piscatores cum effent, negy audiverant tale quiddam, quia hec Philosophorum dogmata erant. And so declareth, that the Disciples having seen Christ heal the man that had thirty eight years been impotent and lame, and had said unto him, Behold thou art made whole, sin no more lest a worse thing come nato thee, did conceive, that this man being born blind, it had been a punishment upon him, either for his own fins, or the fins of his pa-17th. from A. rents, and so doubting asked the question. And so also do St. Auquin. caten. sur. fin and Chrysoftome expound the place, which is both found and rational. And of our Saviours responsion, That neither had this man sinned, nor his parents, the learned Father giveth a satisfactory answer, saying : Nunquid vel ipfe sine originali peccato natus crat. vel vivendo nihil addiderat ? Habebant ergo peccatum, & ipfe & parentes ejus, fed non ipfo peccato factum est ut cacun nasceretur. Ipse autem causam dicit quare cecus sit natus, cum subdit : sed ut manifestentur opera Dei in illo. And to the same purpose Gregory hath this notable passage : Alia itaq; est percussio, qua peccator percutitur, ut fine retractatione puniatur : Alia qua peccator percutitur, ut corrigatur: Alia qua quisq, percutitur, non at praterita corrigat, sed ne ventura committat : Alia per quam nec præterita culpa corrigitur, nec futura probibetur. Sed dum inopinata salus percuffionem sequitur, salvanth virtus cognita ardentiùs amatur. From whence it is manifest, that as the Father in the fulness of time. by his Decree and Providence sent out the Son, in whom dwelt the fulness of the Godhead bodily, with a purpose to manifest the same by his great and wonderful Miracles: so in his divine Wisdom he had ordered fit subjects and objects upon whom that power might be made manifest. And therefore were there such strange diseases offered, especially in Demoniacks, that can hardly be parallel'd in any one Country of that small compass, and in so short a time, and all that the works of God might be manifest by that ever-bleffed Saviour of Mankind, Jesus Christ. And though there were so many persons, so many several ways perplexed and afflicted both in their minds and bodies, as some made deaf and dumb, fome torn and contorted in their members, fome thrown on the ground, some into the fire, some driven to live amongst the graves and monuments, and yet all these cured by our blessed Saviour: Yet is there no mention made of any that had made a visible League with the Devil, nor upon whose bodies he suckt, nor with whom he had carnal Copulation, nor whom he had transubstantiated into Wolves, Dogs, Hares, Cats, or Squirrels; to have cured which would have been as great a miracle as any of the rest, but there were no such matters; and therefore we may safely conclude, there never were, are, or can be any such matters, whatsoever may be faid to the contrary.

2. In the New Testament there is mention made of several sorts of deceiving Impostors, Diviners, or Witches, who were all discovered and conquered by that power that Christ had given unto the Apostles; as for instance: Simon, which before time in the Same city used sorcery, and bewitched payeous is itself the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one. To whom they Ad. 8.9,10,111. gave heed from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God. And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with forceries ; rais payelous its canton withe, seducebat populum suis magicis prastigits, faith Tremellius; and Beza, Exercuerat artem magicam, & gentem Samaria obstupefecerat; who when he would have bought the gift of the Holy Ghost Ad. 13.8. with money, was rejected by Peter as an Impostor and Counterfeit, and declared, that he was in the gall of bitterness. Such another was Elymas the Sorcerer (for fo is his name by interpretation) s uly G, who was stricken blind by St. Paul. Such an one was the bid. 16.16,18. Damsel that was possessed with a Spirit of Divination, which St. Paul cast forth. And such were the Jewish Exorcists, that took upon them to call over them which had evil Spirits, the Name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth. Ad. 19. 13,16. But the man in whom the evil firit was, leapt on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded. But amongst these several sorts of Diviners, Impostors, or Witches, there were none that had made a visible League with the Devil, nor upon whose bodies he suckt, nor that had carnal Copulation with him, nor were changed into Cats, Dogs, or Wolves: but if the Devil had had any fuch power, or had there been any such fort of Witches, the divine Wildom and Providence would have ordained some of them then to have been made apparent, that his power by Christ and the Apostles, might have been shewed as well in the greater as in the less: and that for the more full manifeltation of the Works of God, as for a more triumphant declaration of the power of Christ in conquering him and his Kingdom, and for a more ample warning and instruction to the Children of God to avoid the mares and wiles of the Devil; but there being no such, then we must rationally conclude, that there now is not, nor ever was, or can be any such matter, but the vain believing of such figments and forgeries, is only the cunning and delution of Satan, who works by lying and deceiving wonders rigger feeders, of which St. Chryfostome faith thus : Hoc eft, omnem chryfost in loc. ostentabit potentiam, sed nibil veri, verum omnia ad seductionem. Et prodigiis, inquit, mendacii. Aut ementitis ac ludificantibus, aut ad mendacium inducentibus. Having now sufficiently proved, that the Scriptures and sound Reason are the proper Mediumi to decide these difficulties by, we shall in the next place shew the invalidity of some ways used by

"this being matter of fact, is only capable of the evidence of au-"thority and fense: and by both these, the being of Witches and "Diabolical Contracts, is most abundantly confirmed. To which we shall give this smart Reply. Not to make the Proposition universal, generally to deny the evidence of authory and sense; no, far be it from me to run into that wild and sensless absurdity, which were in a manner to destroy the credibility of all humane testimony: But we shall here speak of the evidence of authority and sense with this restriction and limitation, to these Particulars. 1. Those Authors that write of Apparitions and Spirits. 2. Those that treat of Diabolical Leagues and Contracts. 3. Those that mention the Devil sucking of the Witches body, carnal Copulation with them, their being changed into Hares, Dogs, Cats, and Wolves, and the like. These Authors we say are to be read with caution, and their relations not to be credited, except better proof be given to evidence the matters of fact, than hitherto hath been brought by any, and that for these especial reasons and necessary cautions.

1. The Authors that have recorded stories of this nature, are to be scriously considered, whether they have related the matter of fact by their own proper knowledge, as eye and ear-witnesses of it, or have taken it up by hear-fay, common fame, or the relation of others: and if what they relate, were not of their own certain knowledge or abrolla, then is it of little or no credit at all; for the other that relates it, might be guilty either of active or passive deception and delusion, or might have heard it from another, or by common report: of all which there is no certainty, but leaveth fufficient grounds for dubitation, and is sufficient to caution a prudent person altogether to suspend his assent, until better proof can be brought. There is a story related by Plinius Cacilius to his Friend Sura, of a House in Athens that was haunted by a Spirit in so terrible and frightful a manner, that it was left utterly forsaken. and none would inhabit in it, until that Athenodorse the Philosopher adventured upon it, and abode the coming of the Apparition or Phantalm, and upon its figns followed it to a place below, and then it vanished: he marked the place, and went to the Magistrate, and caused the place to be digged up, and found the bones of a person inchained or fettered, and caused the bones to be buried, and so the House remained free afterwards. It is a wonder to think how many Authors have swallowed this relation (nay even Philip Camerarius himself, who though a very Learned man, yet in things of this nature too extremely credulous) and urged it for proof, as a matter of great credit and authority, when we cannot discern that it affords any credible ground to a rational man to believe it. not only because the very matter it self, and the circumstances of it, do yield sufficient grounds of the suspicion of its verity; but chiefly because Pliny doth but relate it by hear-say, exponan ut accept, and of it and the rest he desires the opinion of his Friend Sura, from whom we do not find any answer. The story taken from Plutarch (a grave Author, if he be confidered as an Heathen Didnestoracide and a Moralist) yet of no authority to decide such points as these p. mihi 700. are) of the voice that called upon Thamus, and commanded him to declare when he came at Palodes, that the great God Pan was dead, which he performed, and that thereupon followed a great lamentation of many: the story at large is related by many, and urged as a matter of great weight and credibility, when indeed there is no ground sufficient to perswade any that it was true. For if it had been related by Plutarch as an ear-witness of it, yet was he but an Heathen, that we know believed many fond, lying, and impossible things, especially of their Gods; and therefore in this case to a considerate Christian could be of no great authority. And if his authority had been great, or of weight in such matters as these, yet was he but fingularis testis, which is not sufficient in these things to be relied upon. And lastly (to our present purpose here) he doth not record it as a thing of his own certain knowledge, but of hear-say from Epitherses, who was but a single Relator, and a man of no certain veracity; and therefore we can have no rational ground to believe the truth of the story, but it may be rejected with more reason, than it can be affirmed by. Of no greater credit can his story be of Brutue his malue Genius ap- Plutarchin vit. pearing unto him, because he received this by meer Tradition and hard. man. hear-say, neither could it have any other rise, but from the relation of Brutus himself, whose guilty conscience, and troubled brain, fancied such vain things; for those that were near Brutus neither faw nor heard any such matter, and therefore must have been a deception of Phanie, and no real Apparition ad extra.

2. And as evidence of the matter of fact recorded from the relation of others, is of no validity to a judicious person: so if the matter of fact be witneffed but by one fingle teltimony (though an eye or an ear-witness) it is not sufficient, because one single person may be imperfect in some senses, or under some distemper, and so be no proper Judge of what it fees or hears; and the Word of Truth tells us. That in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word hall be established; and therefore we are not (especially in such abilituse matters as these) to trust the evidence of one single testimony. To make clear this Particular, we shall relate a story or two from the credit of the Reverend and Learned Bilhop Hall, The invisible joyned with his judgment of such weak and feigned Tales, one of World, p.245, which runs thus: "Johannes à Jesu Maria, a modern Carmelite, 246, 247. "writing the Life of Theresia (Sainted lately by Gregory XV.) tells "us, that as the was a vigilant Overfeer of her Votaries in her life, " so in and after death she would not be drawn away from her care "and attendance: For (faith he) if any of her Sifters did but talk in "the fet hours of their filence, the was wont by three knocks at the "door of the Cell, to put them in mind of their enjoyned tacitur-"nity. And on a time appearing (as the did often) in a light-

We Citizens of Heaven, and ye exiled Pilgrims on Thurs, ch. 3 "earth. ought to be linked in a League of love and purious series." "earth, ought to be linked in a League of love and purity, &c. "Methinks the Reporter (faith the Bishop) should fear this to be "too much good fellowship for a Saint ; I am sure neither Divine "nor Ancient story had wont to afford such familiarity: and many " have missoubied the agency of worse, where have appeared less "causes of suspicion. That this was (if any thing) an ill Spirit "under that face, I am justly consident; neither can any man "doubt, that looking further into the relation, finds him to come " with a lye in his mouth. For thus he goes on; [We Celestial "ones behold the Deity, ye banished ones worship the Eucharist, "which ye ought to worship with the same affection wherewith "we adore the Deity] fuch perfume doth this holy Devil leave "behind him. The like might be instanced in a thousand Appa-"ritions of this kind, all worthy of the same entertainment. This is a story from one single person, a lying Carmelite, one that for interest, and upholding of Superstition and Idolatry, had seigned and forged it; for in it self it appeareth to be a meer falsity and figment, as any rational man may easily discern, and so are a thou-fand stories of this kind worthy of the like entertainment, that is, The invisible to be condemned for most horrid lyes. Another he tells us: " Aworld, p.30% "mongst such fastidious choice of whole dry-fats of voluminous "relations, I cannot forbear to fingle out that one famous of Mag-" dalen de la Croix, in the year of our Lord Christ 1545, &c. The third from the mouth of another lying Fryar named Jacobus de Pozali, in his Sermon, "That St. Macarius once went about to "make peace betwixt God and Satan, &c. Now what soever credit this Learned man (who in things of this kind appeareth to be as vainly credulous as any) doth feem to give unto thefe, or what use soever he would make of them, it is undeniably manifest to all impartial judgments, that they were but absolute forgeries and knacks of Imposture and Knavery, and (according to his own opinion) may justly be ranked amongst those thousand Apparitions of this kind, all worthy of the same entertainment, that is, to be rejected for abominable lyes or forgeries, and that for these reasons. 1. Because they are not attested by any sincere and uncorrupt ear and eye-witnesses, but by reports and relations, and that of those that were corrupt and partial, or Accomplices to bring to pass the fraud and impolture. 2. If they be run up to their first Author or Venter of the Tale, he will but be found a fingle Witness, which is utterly insufficient in evidencing truly a matter of fact. 3. The Relaters of them did publish them for interest sake, and upon defign to advance falle Doctrine, Worship, Superstition, and Idolatry, and therefore are not of validity and credit. 4. In themselves (if ftrictly confidered) they will appear to be lying, ridiculous, contradictory in themselves, and contrary to the authority of Divine Writ, and diffonant to found and right reason, and therefore ought to have no other entertainment, but as abominable lyes and for-

3. But if matters of fact be witneffed and attefted by many or divers persons that were ear and eye-witnesses, yet may their testimony bear no weight in the balance of Justice or right Reason, because they may be corrupt in point of interest, and so have their judgments mil-guided and biaffed by the corruption of their defires and affections, or relate things out of spleets, envy, and malice; and so may not in these mysterious matters be sit authority to rely -upon, nor competent evidence in these particulars, as Dr. Casanbon is forced to confess in these words: "In the relation of strange of Credul, and "things, whether natural or supernatural, to know the temper of iss." "the Relator, if it can be known: and what interest he had, or "might probably be supposed to have had, in the relation, to have "it believed. And again, whether he profess to have seen it him-"felf, or taken it upon the credit of others. And whether a man "by his profession in a capacity probable to judge of the truth of "those things, to which he doth bear witness. Every one of these particulars would require a particular confideration. For if there be interest in point of Religion, then all authorities, all colour of reason is drawn in to make good this interest, and verity is com-monly stifled in this contest for selfness and interest, and the adverse parties stigmatized with all the filthy lyes and enormous crimes that can be invented, as is most manifest in these instances. The Popilh party finding themselves hindred and opposed in point of the highest interest, have forged a thousand false stories and tales to make good the interest of their Party, and have left no dirt and dung unfcraped up to throw in the faces of their Opponents; and so have each Party done against other, where religious interest was the quarrel, as Bishop Hall hath truly observed in this passage, where he is shewing the abominable corruptions of the Church of Rome: "A Religion that cares not by what wilful falf- A ferious Dif-"hoods it maintains a part; as Wickliff's blalphemy, Luthers ad fwafive from Popery, pag. Nay where interest hath a share, truth can hardly be expected, though it be but in more trivial things, as even but for aery fame and vain-glory, as may be manifest in Hierome Cardan, who was a Inquininto vulman of prodigious pride and vain-glory, which led him (as the gar Erroun, learned Dr. Brown hath noted) into no small errours, being a great Pas-34-Amasser of strange and incredible stories, led to relate them by his meer ambition of hunting after same and the reputation of an universal Scholar. And of no less pride and vain-glorious ambition was his Antagonist Julius Tosar Scaliger guilty, of whom it may truly be said, that he was of the nature of those of the Ottoman Family, that do not think they can ever raign safely, unless they strangle all their Brethren; so he did not think that he could aspire to the Throne of being the Monarch of general Learning, without stilling the same and reputation of Cardan and others, against whom he hath been most sell, and impetuously bitter. But when

and that they are changed into Hares, Dogs, Cats, or Wolves, and the like, was soon after the thirteenth hundred year of Christ. when as Frederick the Second had made a Law temporal, for the burning of Hereticks. And not long after that, was the Inquifition fet up in Rome and Spain, and then did the Inquisitors and their Adherents, draw in from the Heathen Poets, and all other Authors, whatfoever might carry any colour of authority or reason. the better to countenance their bloody and unjust proceedings, where they drew thousands of people into the snare of the Inquisition for pretended Witchcraft, which they made to be Herefie. And what soever these have written concerning these things, such as Delrio, Bodinus, Romigius, Springerus, Niderus, Spineus, Grillan. dus, and a whole rabble besides not necessary to be named, are nothing but lyes and forgeries, and deserve no credit at all for these reasons. I. Because as many of them as either were Inquisitors themselves, or those that had any dependence upon them, or received benefit by their proceedings, are all unjust and corrupt Authors and Witnesses, as writing and bearing witness for their own ends, interest, and profit, having a share in the Goods and Estates of all that were convicted and condemned: and the Wolf and Raven will be fure to give judgment on the Serpents fide, that he may devour the man, though never fo innocent, because they hope to have a share of his flesh, or at least to pick the bones. 2. These Authors that were the first Broachers of these monstrous stories of Apparitions and Witches, and are so frequently quoted by others. (that ought to have been more wary, and might have feen reason enough to have rejected all their feigned lyes and delusions) were not only sharers in the spoil of the Goods of the condemned (who were judged per fas, & nefas) but also had another base end and interest, to wit, to advance the opinion of Purgatory, praying for the dead, fetting up the vain Superstitions of the virtue of the fign of the Cross, holy Water, and the like. And therefore they did forge so many stories of Apparitions, and Souls coming forth of Purgatory, and recorded so many false, lying, and impossible things from the forced, extorted, and pretended confessions of the Witches themselves, which were nothing else but an Hotch-potch of horrid and abominable lyes, not to be credited, because the Authors only invented them, to promote their own base ends and wretched interefts.

Again, where Authors are engaged for interest sake, they fall into heat, passion, malice, and envy, and what they cannot make out by strength of arguments, they labour to make good by lyes and scandals, as is most apparent in this one Example we shall here give. Henricus Cornelius Agrippa, a person in his time well known to most of the Learned in Europe, and admired for his general and universal skill in all kind of Learning, having published a Piece which he styled, A Declaration of the incertitude and vanity of sciences and Arts, and the excellency of the Word of God? wherein amongst

men fall out about professional interest, then the stories that through malice they invent and forge one against another, are incredible. as is manifest in many Examples; but we shall but give one for all, which is this. When Paracelsus, returning from his Percerina-17th. vit. Gor. tion of ten years and above, was called to be Physical Lecturer at Ball, where he continued three years, and more, having by his strange and wonderful Cures drawn the most part of Germany, and the adjacent Countries into admiration; so that he was, and might (notwithstanding the envy and ignorance of all his enemies) justly be ftyled, Totim Germania decus & gloria : yet this was not fufficient to quiet the violent and virulent mind of Thomas Eraftus, who coming to be fetled at Bafil, and finding that he could not outgo nor equal Paracelfus in point of Medicinal Practice, and being strongly grounded in the Aristotelian Philosophy, and the Galenical Phylick, did with all poylon and bitterness labour to confute the Principles of Chymical Physick that Paracelsus had introduced, and lest his arguments might be too weak, he backt them with most horrible lyes and scandals, thinking that many and strong accusations (though never so falle) would not be easily answered, nor totally washt off: which after were greedily swallowed down by Libanius, Conringius, Sennertus, and many others: fo apt are men to invent, and fuck in scandals against others, never considering how falle and groundless they are, or may be: for that he wrongfully and fallely accused him in many things, will be manifest to any unbiassed person, that will but take pains to read his Life, written by that equitable Judge Melebior Adams, and that large Preface the learned Physician Fredericus Bitte kius hath prefixed to his Works printed at Geneva 1648.

4. But if the Authors that report matters of fact in reference to these four particulars that we have named, were ear and eye witnesses, and not single, but a greater number, and were not swayed by any corrupt or felf-interest whatsoever; yet all this is not sufficient to give evidence in these matters, except they be rightly qualified in other things, that are necessarily requisite to capacitate a person rightly to judge of these nice and difficult matters, some of the chief of which we shall here enumerate. 1. The perfons that are fit to give a perfect judgment of these matters, ought to be perfect in the organs of their fenfes, otherwise they may eafily be deceived, and think the things otherwise than indeed they are; so some defects or distempers in the cars, eyes, or the rest of the sensories, may hinder the true perception of things acted or done. 2. They ought to be of a found judgment, and not of a vitiated or distempered Phantasie, nor of a melancholick Temper or Constitution; for such will be full of fears, and strange imaginations, taking things as acted and wrought without, when they are but only represented within. These will take a bush to be a Boggard, and a black sheep to be a Demon; the noise of the wild Swans flying high upon the nights, to be Spirits, or (as they call them here in the North) Gabriel Ratchets, the calling of a Daker hen in the Meadow to be the Whistlers, the howling of the female Fox in a Gill, or a Clough for the male, when they are for copulation, to be the cry of young Children, or such Creatures, as the common people call Fayries, and many such like fancies and mistakes. 3. They ought to be clear and free from those imbibed notions of Spirits, Hobgoblins, and Witches, which have been instamped upon their Phantasies from their very young years, through ignorant and superstitious education, wherewith generally all mankind is infected, and but very few that get themselves extricated from those delusive Labyrinths, that parents and ignorance have instilled into them. From hence it is, that not only the stolid and stupid Vulgar, but even persons otherwise rational enough, do commonly attribute those sleights and tricks that our common Jugglers play, unto the Devil, when they are only performed by Leger-de-main, or fleight of hand, Boxes, and Instruments aptly fitted; and will not flick to believe, and strongly to affirm to others, that they have seen the Jugglers Familiar or Devil, when it was but a poor Squirrels skin stuffed with hair or mos, and nimbly agitated by the hands of the Juggler: which makes me call to mind a very lepid and pertinent Accident that once in my younger years happened in Burrow bridge upon a great Fayr holden History 1. there upon St. Barnabas day: I being in Company with divers Gentlemen, whereof two were Malters of Arts, and walking in the Horse-Fayr, we copyed a great crowd and ring of people, and drawing near, there was a person commonly known through most of the Northern parts of Tork shire by the name of John Gypsie, being as black as any of that Tribe, with a Feather in his Hat, a filk flasht Doublet, upon a fair Holland Half shirt, counterfeiting himself half drunk, and reeling to and fro, with a fine Tape or Incle-string tyed fast together at the two ends, and throwing it, (as it were) carelelly two or three times about a smooth Rod, that another man held by both ends, and then putting the bout of the Tape upon the one end of the Rod, and then crying, It is now fast for five shillings; but no sooner reeling and looking aside, the man that held the Rod did put off the bout of the Tape again, and still Folm Groffe, would cry and bet that it was fast, then would there come two or three, and bet with him, and win, and go away (as it were) laughing him to fcorn, yet still he would continue, and pray the Fellow that held the stick not to deceive him, and plainly shew the people, that it would be fast when the bout was put on, then would the Fellow that held the stick still put off the bout when John Gypsie looked away, whereby the people believed that he was in drink, and so deceived by him that held the Rod, and so many would come and bet with him, and lose: so that he used to win much money, though the bout was put off every time, and none could discern any alteration in the string. This strange Feat (which I confess, as he handled and acted it, was one of the neatest that ever I faw in all my life) did so surprize all my Companions, and in part himself, that some of them were of opinion, that he had some stone in the Ring upon his singer, by virtue of which he performed the Trick. But the most part concluded, that it could not be done but by the power and help of the Devil, and resolved to come no more near John Gypsie, as a man that was a Witch, and had familiarity with the Devil. But I that then was much guilty of curiofity, and loth to be imposed upon in a thing of that nature, then also knowing the way and manner how all the common Jugglers about Cambridge and London (who make a Trade of it) did perform their Tricks, I flipt away from my Company, and went to the place again where I found him still playing; and thrusting in. I defired to hold the stick, which he refused not; and so in a short time I perceived how it was done, and so returned to my Company, and shewed them the sleight and mystery of it, which made them very much ashamed of their folly and ignorance. They may deride this story that list, and yet it may serve for instruction to the wifest, and there are hundreds yet living that knew this perfon, and where he was born, which was at Bolton-bridge near skipton in Craven, and have seen him play this trick of fast and loose, as I have related it: fo that if a man meet with a crafty cunning Fellow, he commonly by way of Proverb calls him John Gypfie. 4. They ought to be free in their judgments as in aquilibrio, and not to be radicated nor habituated in the belief of those things a for then they will hardly be disswaded from their opinions, but pertinaciously adhere unto them, though never so absurd, and will be apt to ascribe all effects, that they understand not, unto Devils and Witches, as is manifelt in the Jesuit Roberti Foster, Sennertus, and many others, who attributed the effects of the Hoplocrism or Weapon salve, and the Sympathetick Powder unto the operation of the Devil and Witchcraft, when they are but meerly natural. Which makes me call to mind a pretty story that happened when I was but a young Boy. For where I once learned at the School. there was one who was Rector of the Church, who was a very godly man, a good and constant Preacher, accounted very learned, and Bachelor of Divinity: this person being informed, that I and some other Boys could play some odd Feats of sleight of hand, especially to put a Ring upon our Cheek, and to throw it unto a staff holden fast by both the ends; this he by no means did believe could be done but by Diabolical means, and did advise and threaten us to desist from such practices, as devillish and damnable. So ready even the otherwise Learned may be, when once settled in these fond and absurd opinions of the too great power of Demons

and Witches, to ascribe that unto them, which is performed by

CHAP. V.

That thefe things now in question are but barely supposed, and were yet never rationally nor sufficiently proved: And that the Allegations brought to prove them by are weak, frigolous, and absolutely invalid. With a full Confutation of all the four Particulars.

TAving in the preceding Chapter proved that the Scriptures and sound Reason, are the proper Mediums to decide these difficulties by, and also laid down the necessary qualifications requisite in an Author or Witness that would evidence these things as matters of fact: We shall here once again repeat the four Particulars, which we are about to confute, which are these. 1. That the Devil doth not make a visible or corporeal League and Covenant with the supposed Witches. 2. That he doth not suck upon their bodies. 3. That he hath not carnal Copulation with them. 4. That they are not really changed into Cats, Dogs, Wolves, or the like. And these four Particulars we affirm were never matters of fact, nor ever had a being, except only in the fancy as meer Chimera's, nor that they ever were or can be proved to have been brought to pass or acted; and de non apparentibue, & non existentibus eadem est ratio, saith the great Maxime of our Law. But in the first place let us hear what the Patrons of this wretched and execrable opinion have to say to prove that they are matters of fact, or were ever acted or performed. And first we have Mr. Glanwil arguing at this rate: "All Histories are full of the exploits Pag. 5, 6. "of those instruments of darkness; and the testimony of all ages, "not only of the rude and barbarous, but of the most civilized and polisht World, brings tidings of their strange performances. We "have the attestation of thousands of eye and ear-witnesses, and " those not of the easily deceivable vulgar only, but of grave and "and wise discerners; and that when no interest could oblige them "to agree together in a common lye: I say we have the light of "all these circumstances to confirm us in the belief of things done "by persons of despicable power and knowledge, beyond the reach " of Art and ordinary Nature. Standing publick Records have "been kept of these well-attested Relations, and Epocha's made of "those unwonted events. Laws in many Nations have been ena-"Red against those vile practices; those among the Jews and our "own are notorious; fuch Cases have been often determined near "us', by wise and reverend Judges, upon clear convictive Evi-"dence, and thousands in our own Nation have suffered death for "their vile compacts with Apostate Spirits. And a little after he faith: " And I think those that can believe all Histories are Ro-

"mances; that all the wifer World have agreed together to jug-"gle Mankind into a common belief of ungrounded Fables; that "the found senses of multitudes together may deceive them, and Laws are built upon Chimera's; that the gravest and wifest Jud-" ges have been Murderers, and the lagest persons Fools or design-"ing Impostors. Bishop Hall maketh the like Objection, saying: "Neither can I make question of the authentick Records of the Bodis. Damone . Examinations and Confessions of Witches and Sorcerers in feveral Property of the World, agreeing in the truth of their horrible pacts with Satan, of their fet Meetings with evil Spirits, their beaftly Homages and Conversations. I should hate to be guilty " of so much incredulity, as to charge so many grave Judges and " credible Historians with lyes.

These Objections at the first view seem very plausible, and to carry with them a great splendour and weight of truth and reason; but if they be looked into, and narrowly weighed in the balance of found reason, and unbiassed judgment, they will be found too light, and will soon vanish into Rhetorical sumes and frothy vapours: which that it may be more clearly performed, we shall rank them into the number of three, in which all their feeming strength lyes, and these are they.

1. They pretend that these things are sufficiently proved by Historians of unquestionable credit and reputation.

2. That the Confessions of Witches themselves, in divers Regions, at feveral times and places, who have all acknowledged thefe particulars, are sufficient evidence of the truth of these perfor-

3. That so many wise and grave Judges and honest Juries could not have been deceived, to put to death such great numbers of thele kind of people, called or accounted Witches, without fufficient proof of the matters of fact. To all which we shall give a full response, in respect of the sour particulars, mentioned in the beginning of this Chapter, and shall commix and adjoyn such posttive Arguments as will be cogent to all rational persons, whose corrupt wills have not perverted their judgments.

1. It is much to be admired, that Mr. Glanvil (but especially Bishop Hall, a very Reverend and Learned person) should lye any great fires upon such a weak foundation: For there is none of these three Objections that will amount to a necessary Proposition, but only to a contingent one, which will infer no certain and necessary Conclusion, nor bring forth any certitude or science, but only bare opinion and probability. Propositio contingens eft, que se vera oft, ut falsa esse possis : and at the best the strength of all these are but testimonia humana, which are but weak, and no sufficient ground for a rational man to believe them to be true, because humanum est errare. And the weight of these matters is not a contention de lana caprina, vel de umbra afini, sed de pelle bumana, for the lives and estates of many poor Creatures, and they professed professed Christians too, and therefore doth require stronger Arguments than contingent Propositions, to establish a firm ground for the belief of this opinion.

2. It is one thing barely to affirm, and another thing to prove sufficiently and fully: For though they boldly alledge, that these things are sufficiently proved by Authors of unquestionable credit and verity, we must return a flat negative, and that for these reafons. 1. Let them shew us any one Author of credible veracity, that ever was ear or eye-witness of the Devils making of a visible and corporeal League or Bargain with the Witches, or that he ever suckt upon their bodies, or that he had carnal Copulation with them, or that by the experience of his fenses ever certainly knew a man really transubstantiated and transformed into a Wolf, or a Wolf into a man, and we will yield the whole Cause. But we must affert and truly affirm, that this pretence of theirs, that these things are sufficiently proved by Historians of good credit, is a meer falfity, and a lying flourish of vain words. There are (we confels) a multitude of vain and lying stories, amassed up together in the Writings of Demonographers and Witchmongers of strange and odd Apparitions, Feats, Confessions, and such like; but never any one politive proof of any of these four particulars by any Authors of credit and reputation; and this we dare boldly aver to the world. 2. Let them produce any two Witnesses that were of honesty and integrity, found understandings and ability, that ever were prefent, and ear and eye-witneffes of a visible, vocal, and corporeal League made betwixt the Devil and the Witch; or let them tell us who was by, and watched, and really and truly faw the Devil fuck upon some part of the Witches body; or who were the Chamberlains, Pimps or Panders, when the Devil and the Witch committed carnal Copulation; or who were ever present when a Witch was changed into a Cat, a Dog, an Hare, or a Wolf. If they can but bring forth any two credible Witnesses to prove these things by, then we thall believe them; but we must affert that never any fuch two could be produced yet: and therefore cannot but wonder at the shameless impudence of such persons, that dare affirm these things that never were, nor can be proved, and yet have not blushed to vent and trumpet forth such execrable and abominable lyes to the World. Mr. Glanvil confidently affirms these things to be matters of fact, and affirmanti incumbit probatio, let him produce his Witnesses, and if they be persons of judgment, veracity, and impartiality, then we shall accept their proof; but it is not figments, supposals, weak presumptions, or apparent falsities that will perform it; for that which never was acted, can never truly be proved, and things that appear not, are as though they were not; therefore he must produce his testimonies, or lose both his cause and credit, and must be taken for an Assertor of never-proved that deal truly are his delight.

Fables. Lying lips are abomination unto the Lord : but they Prov. 12.22.

Now

Now we know they use to do in this case, as Souldiers use, who when they are beaten forth of some Out-work or Trench, they then retreat into another that they think more strong and safe. And being driven from their weak Hold of a bare affirmation without proof, that these things are verified to have been matters of fact and really performed, both by authority and the evidence of fense. which are both utterly falle, then they flye to this affertion: That the Confessions of so many Witches in all Ages, in several Countries, at divers times and places, all agreeing in these particulars, are sufficient evidence of the truth of these matters. To which we shall rejoyn, that the Confessions of Witches, however confidered, are not of credit and validity to prove these things; but are in themselves null and void, as falle, impossible, and forged lyes. which we shall make good by these following Reasons.

1. The Witch must be taken to be either a person in sana, vel sane mentie; and if they be insane mentie, their Confessions are no sufficient evidence, nor worthy of any credit; because there is neither Reason. Law, nor Equity that allows the testimony or confession of an Idiot, Lunatick, mad or doting person, because they are not of a right and found understanding, and are not to be accounted as compotes mentie, nor governed by rationability. For as by the Civil Law mad Folks, Idiots, and Old men childish. Bond-flaves, and Villains are not capable of making a Will to difpose of Goods, Lands, or Chattels: so much more are all these forts of persons excepted for giving evidence by confessions, or otherwise in matters concerning life and death, which are of far greater weight and concernment. And that these persons are of unfound understandings, is manifest in all the points that they confels, and therefore are no proof, nor ought to be credited : and that for these reasons. 1. Because the things they confess are not attested by any other persons of integrity and sound judgment, and they must of necessity be lyars, because the Bond-slaves of the Devil, whose works they will do, and he was a lyar from the beginning. 2. Because they confess things that are impossible (as we thall prove anon) and confiteri impossibilia infanientie eft. 3. There is no good end wherefore they make thefe Confessions, neither do they receive any benefit by them, either spiritual or temporal, internal nor external. And this doth sufficiently shew, that they are deluded, melancholy, and mad persons, and so their Confessions of no credit, truth, or validity.

2. Their Confessions will be found null and falle, if we consider the impulsive cause that moves them to make them, and the end wherefore they declare such falle and lying matters, and that in thele particulars. 1. The moving cause is not, nor can be the Spirit of God, which is a Spirit of truth and righteousness, nor any motion of true remorfe for their fins, or any thing flowing from repentant hearts, because they are persons forsaken of God and his Grace, and given over to reprobate minds and fenfes, and therefore the truth of the Word of God is fulfilled in them: Because they 2 Theff 4:107 received not the love of the truth, that they might be faved, there- 11,12. fore God hall find them firong ultiusion, that they might believe a lye... That they all might be damned, who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousiness: 2. Neither is the end for the glory of God, or their own Salvation, because they are the Vasials and Bond flaves of Satan, being kept Captive at his will, and are Rebels and Traitors against God and Christ, his Church and Truth, having renounced the Faith, and become Apoltata's to the truth. 2 Tim. 2. 26; 3. The impulsive cause and chief end wherefore they make these and such like consessions, is sometimes, and in some persons meerly to eschew torture and bodily pains, and sometimes the quite contrary folely to escape the present miseries of a poor, wretched, and troublesom life; and therefore these confessions not at all to be credited, as being vain and feigned. 4. Sometimes they are by force, waking, craft, and cunning, in hope of pardon and life, to make such confessions as the bale ends and corrupt intentions of the Inquisitors themselves, or their Agents, have insused into them, for the advancement of falle Doctrine, Superstition, and Idolatry ! fuch were the most (if not all) recorded by Delrio Bodinan, and the rest of the Witchmongers, to which no credit can be given at all. 5. But the chief end that Satan hath (who is the Forger, Contriver, and Devifer of these Confessions, if voluntarily and freely made, the principal Agent in all these matters) is to set forth the power and glory of his own Kingdom, thereby to lead men into and continue them in lyes and errors ; for when he fleaketh a lye, he speaketh of his own, for he is a lyar, and the sather of it, joh 8.44and the Witches are his Children, and the works of their Father the Devil they will do, and he was, and is a Murtherer and Lyar from the beginning. And thus far we acknowledge a spiritual and mental League betwirt the Witch and the Devil, by virtue of which they confess these horrible and abominable lyes, of the glory of him and his Kingdom; but other League or Covenant there is none, neither is there any the least spark of truth in all that they say or confess, because their sole end in making of these confessions, is to advance the credit and power of Satan. 6. The impulsive cause that often makes them to utter such confessions of strange and impossible things, is the strong passive delusion, that they lye under, contracted by ignorant, unchristian, and superstitious education, which they have fuckt in with their milk, heightned with an atrabilarious temper and constitution, and confirmed by the wicked lyes, and teaching of others, which makes them confess these execrable things, which they in their depraved and vitiated imaginations, do think and believe they have done and fuffered, when there was never truly acted any fuch matter ad extrà, but, only in their mad and deluded Phantalies: and so no more credit to be given to them, than to the maddest Melancholist that ever was read or heard of.

3. That there is not any jot of truth in these Confessions, is manifest, if we consider the subjective matter of them, as is plain by these ensuing grounds. r. For the most of them are not credible, by reason of their obscenity and filthiness, for chast cars would tingle to hear such bawdy and immodest lyes, and what pure and fober minds would not nauseate and startle to understand such unclean stories, as of the carnal Copulation of the Devil with a Wireh or of his sucking the Teat or Wart of an old stinking and rotten Carkais? furely even the impurity of it may be fufficient to overthrow the credibility of it, especially amongst Christians. 2. There are many things that have no verity in them at all, that notwithstanding have verisimilitude; but these are not only void of truth, but also of truth-likelines: for it is neither truth, nor hath any likelihood of it, to believe it for a truth, that the Devil should carry an old Witch in the Air into foraign Regions, that can hardly crawl with a staff, to dancing and banqueting, and yet to return with an empty belly, and the next day to be forced, like old Dembdike or Blizabeth Sothernes, and Alizon Denice, to go a begging with the four-milk Can: is this either probable or likely? would it not much more have advantaged the Devils interest and his Kingdom, to have furnished them with good and true meat and drink. and not with fuch imaginary Cares, which would neither fill the Romach, nor fatisfic the appetite? Had it not been more for the De-vile benefit to have furnished them with plenty of gold and filver, than to let them go ragged and tattered, begging their bread from door to door? ... As these confessions have no truth likeliness in them, to they are things that are fimply impossible to be per-formed by any created power, and therefore must needs be false and fictious relations; for no Creature can perform any thing but that for which by Creation it was ordered and defigned to a but the Devils by Creation have no generative power given them, nor members or organs to perform the act of copulation withal and therefore their having carral copulation with the Witches, is a most monstrous fiction, and an absolute impossibility, and can have nothing in it more than the stirring up of the imaginative faculty. and thereby to move titillation in the members fitted for the act of generation, which is a thing that happens to many both men and women, that are of hot constitutions, and abound with seed, which we call notinena prolutiones, of which the Divines and Cashifts make that great question, An notiurna prolutiones fint peceatum? And it is as simply impossible for either the Devil or Witches to change or alter the course that God hath set in Nature, as to transubstantiate a man or woman into a Cat, a Dog, or a Wolf; and therefore are these confessions meer impossibilities and monstrous lyes. 4. There can in found and right reason no credit at all be given to these confessions, because divers of them have been proved to be utterly falle, as is plain in the man that did confidently affirm, that he was a true Wolf, and that he had hair under his skin.

the woful tryal of which was his death, though a pregnent and undeniable proof, that the delution was in the Phantalie, and that there was no real change of the mans body into a Wolf; and therefore doth flatly overthrow the credibility of these vain and lying confessions. To the same purpose is the story related by Ca- Lib 1. of Promerarim from Johannes Baptifia Porta, a great Naturalist, and a good, person of competent veracity, which is this. "Once (shith he) life, and its life, a cap 13." the an old Witch, one of those that are said to eater houses in years." the night time, and there to suck the blood of little children ly-lilling is "the night time, and there to fuck the blood of little children ly-"ing in their Cradles. Having asked her a question of something, "the promifed forthwith, that within a while the would give me "answer. She puts forth of her Chamber all those that went in "with me to be witnesses of that which should pass. Having shut "us out, the strips her felf stark naked, and rubs over all her body "with a certain Oyntment, which we law through the chinks of "the door. The operation of the soporiferous juyces, whereof "this Oyntment was compounded, made her fall to the ground, " and brought her into a deep sleep. Upon this we open the door, "and some of us begin to strike and knock her well-favour'dly s "but the was to foundly affeep, that to ftrike her body and a stone, "it was all one. Forth we go again, in the mean time the Oynt-"ment had ended his working, and the old Trot being awaked,
"and having put on her cloaths, begins to tell tales of Robin Hood, "faying, That the had passed over Seas and Mountains, and then "gives us faile answers. We tell her, that her body had never "Itird out of the Chamber; she maintains the contrary: we shew "her the blows we had given her, the perfifteth the more stilly in "her opinion. By the testimony of this Author, who was an ear and eye-witness of this passage, and other persons with him, which manifelts it to be good and sufficient evidence, it appeareth, that the Witches are under a melancholy and pallive delution, promoted by the help of soporiferous Oyntments, whereby they fancy and think they are carried into far remote places, where they hear and fee strange things, and do and suffer that which is not at all performed, but only as in a dream, their bodies in the mean time lying immoveable, and so do but relate falsities and lyes, which is an unanswerable proof of the absolute falsity of their confessions, the thing that here we undertook to make good. And some late Learned men (with Mr. Glanvil himself) giving too much credit to the things related by the Witches in their confessions, to be true stories of things really performed at a great distance, have been forced to revive that old Platonical Whimfie, of the Souls real egrefsion forth of the body into far distant-places, and its return again, with the certain knowledge of things there done or faid, according to the relation that Pliny gives us in thele words: Reperimus (in- Hill. nat. 1. 7:

mato eo inimici (qui Cantharida vocabantur) remeanti anima ve-Int vaginam ademerint. To which notwithstanding he doth not feem to give credence. But these Relations of the Witches are meer lyes and forgeries, and are but taught them by the spiritual craft of the Devil, thereby to pretend to imitate the true Visions that the Prophets had from God: And though there may be some peculiar persons that have the way to fall into ecstasies, (as Helmont witnesseth of himself) and may thereby understand many mystical matters, yet in it there is no real egression of the Soul forth of the body, but a freeing or withdrawing of it from the Phantasie and Senses, and then (as the Cabbalists and mystical Authors (av) it is joyned to the intelligible World, and beholds things as present; and though there may be something of truth in it, yet few Authors of credit and veracity, have attested it upon their own experience, and there may be much fallacy and danger in it, and therefore we leave it to further fearch and inquiry. Anon ther apparent ground of the nullity of the truth or credit of these confessions, is that which a learned Divine in his Letter to Dr. Wierse gives us, the substance of which we shall give in English. which is this: "I have known (he faith) the year foregoing (he "writ his Epillie Anno 1565.) many foolish things from the pri-"vate confession of a certain old Woman, an Inchanter, who when " the had heard in my Sermon the place in the 19. Chapter of the "Ads explained, That many of the Ephelians, being of those who "had exercised curious Arts, had brought their Books, and burned "them openly, &c. She forthwith (he faith) came unto me with " a mind plainly troubled; and with tears pouring forth into my "bosom the secrets of her breast, did receive Christian instruction; "and when the had understood, by the bleffing of God, the vanity "of Diabolical Impostures, and perceived them with opened eyes, " she was easily converted to the light of truth, the smoak of lyes "being laid aside. She, truth being once received, hath most con-" stantly confessed, that it did appear to her more clear than the light "at noon day, that Satan did only deceive and blind the eyes of his "Vassals, and that there was nothing done in verity, and this the de-"clared with a detestation of her Diabolical Art. And so concludes it in these words : Uno verbo dicam, me sath experientia didicisse, bonam partem incantationum mera effe insomnia. And whosoever shall read, and seriously consider the Epistle of that excellent and learned Divine, will find the most of those vain illusions laid open and confuted: so that in all (or the most) of the things attributed unto Witches, we shall find no more of Diabolical operation in them, than an internal, mental, and spiritual delusion, in making the Witches to believe, and to draw on others to the same opinion. that the Devil hath a kind of omnipotent Power and Soveraignty. 111.10. 24. 24. Therefore did Aristotle well conclude: Incantamenta esse mulier-

Confessions is this: Is it possibly credible to a rational and unbiaffed judgment, that the Witches (though never fo many, at feveral times and places) having made themselves the Slaves and Vaffals of the Devil, both in foul and body, and being led by his lying and deceitful Spirit (though making large and voluntary confessions) can be conceived to have any touch of truth in them at all? Surely no more truth in these confessions, than there is in the Devil, who was a Lyar from the beginning; and therefore we argue thus. Such kind of will, affections and inclinations as are in the Devil himself, such kind are in his Children. But the will and affections of the Devil are against God, his Truth, and against all Gods people, and his laclinations tend to continual lying. Therefore the will, affections, and inclinations of his Children (such as the Witches are, and are granted to be) are against God, his Truth. and against all Gods people, and their inclinations tend to continual lying. The proof of the major and minor Proposition is the plain words of our Saviour, Te are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father the devil ye will do, Stall waller, and he was a Joh 8.44 murtherer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he feaketh a lye, he feaketh of his own : for he is a lyar, and the father of it. And again St. John tells us: He that committeth fin, ir of the devil; for the devil sinneth 1 joh. a. 8. from the beginning. So that it may truly be faid of them, They de-light in lyes, and their confessions are nothing but lyes. And if Fal. 62. 41 they object and say, that here we confess a League with the Devil and the Witch, otherwise the Witches could not be his Children, Vassals, and Bond-slaves, which elsewhere we deny, we answer, it is a gross mistake, in not observing the distinction we make betwixt a mental and spiritual League, such as the Devil and Judge made, and fuch as all wicked men make with him, and under this League we acknowledge all Witches to be; but a vifible and corporeal League we positively deny, and so the objeation is of no validity. And thus we suppose we have sufficiently proved, that there ought no credit at all to be given to the Confessions of Witches, no more than to Devils, who are all lyars.

Now let us proceed to their third main Objection: That for many wife and grave Judges and honest Juries could not have been deceived, to put to death such great numbers of those kind of people, without sufficient proof of the matters of fact. Against which we oppose these following Reasons.

I. It is but an Argument at the best to drive the other Party in- Reas. 1. to an ablurdity, which is not of any fuch dangerous confequence, as may be supposed; for it would but conclude, that many grave and wife Judges and Juries have been imposed upon, and deceived, which is but argumentum ad homines, and doubtless many might, and have been. And do not we Christians hold, that the gravest and wisest Judges amongst the Turks and Persians have been, and are deceived, and have done unjustly in persecuting and putting Christians to death, because they would not submit to the Religion of Mahomet, and yet we account it no absurdity or injustice to pass that censure upon them? And do not the Idolaters in all those large Empires and Kingdoms of Tartary, China, the Moguls Country, and the rest of those Countries in the East of Assarber persecute and put many to death, for not worshipping their Idols, or embracing their Religion; and do we think it absurd to censure and condemn them of injustice, though in their own Countries they be accounted grave and wise Judges? Surely we do not, and there is the parity of reason in both the Arguments, for all are but men, and so may erre.

2. But as for the grave, learned, and wise Judges, and understanding and honest Juries within His Majesties Dominions, we affirm they are clear and innocent from these imputations, and that for diversand fundry found reasons. 1. Our Judges and Juries have no fuch finister and corrupt ends, to wrest the Laws, or wring forth and extort feigned and falle Confessions, because they have no such ends as to uphold and maintain idolatrous and superstitious Tenents, as praying to Saints, magnifying of Holy-water, or fetting up of Purgatory, as had the Popilh Inquisitors, and the Demonographers, and Witchmongers that writ for those ends. And therefore it is no absurdity to say or think, that they dealt unjustly in their proceedings, which our learned and pious Judges are not, nor can be guilty of. 2. The Inquisitors and their Agents had benefit by the death of Witches, having a share in their Goods, and therefore no absurdity to conclude, that their proceedings were unjust. partial, and corrupt, of which our Judges and Juries are clear, as having no profit at all by the death of these wretched and deluded people. 3. Our Judges are but sworn to the due execution of the Laws made, and the Juries sworn to bring in their Verdicts according to their best evidence: now if the Witnesses forth of malice, envy, ignorance, or mistake swear to matters of fact, for which death or other punishments are allotted by the Law, both the Judges and the Jury are absolutely excusable, and if there be any guilt in the Witnesses, or falsity in their Evidences, it lyes at their own doors, and upon their own consciences, and the Judges and Jurors are clear, and not to be blamed, for no humane prudence can altogether prevent, that Witnesses may not erre or swear falsely.

3. Have there not been many thousands of true and faithful Martyrs, that have suffered and been condemned in many Ages, in many and several Countries, at many different and distinct times? And some of these have been condemned by such as were called and accounted General Councils, Parliaments, High-Courts of Justice, and other places of great Judicature, before Judges that were accounted wise, grave, and learned, and by Juries of honesty and understanding: were there therefore no true Martyrs, and were they all justly condemned and put to death? or is it absurd to be guilty of such incredulity, as to think and hold, that so many grave and wife Judges, and knowing Juries were deceived, and did unjuftly? Let Mr. Glanvil or any other folve this Argument, and carry the cause; or else we must necessarily conclude, that opinio qua à se non propellit absurda, per absurda non premit adver-

Now having given a full and satisfactory Answer to their main and strongest Objections, and deseated the whole force of their first and most furious Charge, we shall proceed to overthrow their main Battel, in proving the four Particulars mentioned in the beginning of the Chapter, to be salle and impossible. And in doing of this, we shall handle the three first promiscuously and all together, and the fourth about Transubstantiations or Change of Witches into Cats, Hares, Dogs, Wolves, or the like, we shall handle by it case.

1. And first we acknowledge an internal, mental, and spiritual League or Covenant betwixt the Devil and all wicked persons, fuch as are Thieves, Robbers, Murtherers, Impostors, and the like, whereby the temptations, fuggestions, and allurements of Satan. spiritually darted, and cast into the mind, the persons so wrought upon, and prevailed withal, do affent and confent unto the motions and counfels of the evil Spirit, and so do make a League and Covenant with the faid evil Spirit, as faith the Text : According to Eph. 2.2. the Prince of the power of the air, that now worketh in the children of disobedience. He doth not only rule over them, but also worketh in them; for men are either the Temples of God, or the Temples of Satan and Antichrist, who sitteth in the Temple of God, and 2 Thest. 2. 4. opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God or worsuch a spiritual League or Covenant as this did Judas make with the Devil, whereby he agreed to betray his Master Christ. Then entred Satan into Judas : not that effentially of Luk. 22. 2. personally he entred into Judas, but that he put it into his heart, BIBANNITO, to betray him : which wrought so effectively in him in a spiritual manner, that he took up that Diabolical resolution to betray his innocent Master: and this was entring into a spiritual League with the Devil. For as Theophylat faith upon the place. Hoc enim significat, spospondit, boc est, persettam promissionem & patium secit. And another saith: In Judam Satanas intravit, non confin Luc. impellens, sed patulum inveniens ostium : nam oblitus omnium que 22.3. viderat, ad solam avaritiam dirigebat intuitum. And again i Joh. 13.2. Miffio ifta fpiritualis suggestio est, & non fit per aurem, sed per cogitationem : diabolica enim suggestiones immittuntur, & humanie

2. We acknowledge that this spiritual League in some respects and in some persons may be, and is an explicit League, that is, the persons that enter into it, are or may be conscious of it, and know it to be so, for when a person resolves to murther, he cannot but know that he then maketh a League with the Devil, who was a Murtherer from the beginning. And it is manifest, that in this

League, and in no other, were all the Priests that belonged to the Oracles, who knew well enough that the Idols or falle Gods they worshipped, did give no answers at all, but the responsions given were only of their own deviling and framing, to uphold their credit; and more colourably to cozen and deceive the people, they did pretend that they had answers from their Gods or Idols, and thus far the Devil was in all their impostures and jugglings. And so all the several forts of the Diviners or Witches mentioned in the Old Testament, were under a spiritual League with the Devil, and did very well know, that what they did, was not by the finger of God, but either by the help of Art, Nature, Leger-de-main, Confederacy, or such like impostures and cheats: and yet they pretended, as did simon Mague, and gave out that they were some great men, thereby to deceive others, when explicitly they plainly knew that themselves were but dissemblers and lyars, and that for gain, credit, and vain-glory they pretended to do those things, which they could never truly perform. And under this spiritual League. explicitly confidered, are all our Figure-flingers contained, who take upon them (far beyond the Rules of the true Art) to declare where stollen Goods are, and to cause them to be brought back again, and many other such vain and lying matters, which they well know they have no power to perform, but that they willingly and knowingly take upon them to pretend to do these things for vain-glory and filthy lucre fake. And of this fort are all our pretending Conjurers, Diviners, Wizards, and those that take upon them to reveal things by looking in Crystals, Beryls, and the like. (of which we may perhaps speak more largely hereafter) that indeed know well enough they do but deceive and cheat others; of all which we could recite very lepid and apposite stories, certainly known unto us, or discovered by us; but Mr. Glanvil would account them but filly Legends and old Wives Fables, and therefore we shall supersede here, and leave them to a fitter place.

3. There are others that are under this spiritual League, though implicitly, as are all those that we have granted to be passively deluded Witches, those that by ignorant and irreligious education. joyned with a melancholy temper and disposition, to which they have added Charms, Pictures, and other superstitious Ceremonies, which they learned by Tradition. By all which they become fo deluded and besotted in their Phantasies, that they believe the Devil doth visibly appear unto them, suck upon them, have carnal copulation with them, that they are carried in the Air to feaftings, dancings, and such like Night-revellings; and that they can raise tempelts, kill men or bealts, and an hundred such like fopperies and impossibilities, when they do nor suffer any thing at all, but in their depraved and deceived imaginations. And so do blindly and implicitly believe that the Devil doth perform all these things for them, when indeed and truth he doth nothing but dart and cast in these filthy and fond cogitations into their minds agreeable to their wicked wills and corrupted defires, and so are fast bound in this spiritual and implicit League. And under this spiritual implicit League are also comprehended all those that are Witchmongers, and believe the verity and performance of these things, and think that the Devil can both hurt and also help, and that there is a bad and a good Witch, or with Mr. Perkins, a black and a white one, by which wicked opinion, the seeking unto Witches, Wizards, Mutterers, Murmurers, Charmers, South-layers, Conjurers, Cunning-men and women (as we speak here in the North) and such like, is still upholden by the Authors and Favourers of this opinion, contrary to the direct counsel of the Holy Ghost, who saith: And la. 8. 19, 20. when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto Wizards that peep and that mutter; should not a people feek unto their God? for the living to the dead. To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them. And therefore faith one: Admonet etiam, nos adversus impios cultus & superstitiones tutos calvin in loc. fore, si in lege Domini acquiescamus. The League or Covenant betwixt the Devil and the Witch, is that which is visible and corporeal, where he is supposed to appear in some bodily shape unto the Witch, and to have oral and audible conference with him or her, and so to make a League or Covenant; and this is the thing that we deny, and the consequents thereof, that he doth not suck upon their bodies, nor hath carnal copulation with them, nor carries them in the Air, nor for them, nor by them doth destroy or kill man or beast, raise tempests, or change them into Cats, Hares, Wolves, Dogs, or the like; and this we oppose with these following Reasons.

I. Whatsoever the Devil worketh, it is to bring advantage to Reas. 1. his own Kingdom, or otherwise he should act in vain. But whatfoever he worketh by a visible Covenant, is not for the advantage of his own Kingdom: and therefore it is in vain. The major is plain from the Text: Be fober, be vigilant, because your adversary 2 Pet, 5, 8, 9. the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour, whom resist stedfast in the faith. The minor is manifest in these two particulars. 1. Satan is that old Serpent, that was, and Rev. 12. 9. is more subtile than any beast of the sield, which the Lord God hath created: which notwithstanding the vain Cavils, and seeming Arguments of Pererise, must be understood of Satan the Adversary of Mankind, and not of the natural Serpent, which is not the most fubtile beaft that God hath created, there being many others more fubtile than the Serpent 3 and the Scripture tells us of his cunning and wilines: for the Apollle faith, We are not ignorant of his 2 Cor. 2.11. wiles or devices volpula. And the Apostle in another place calls them miles, bis wiles, which are so great, that if it were possible, Eph. 6. 11. they might deceive the very elect. So that he wants no cunning nor subtilty to know how to bring a sinner into his snare, and to hold him fast, and when he is fast, he knows he need do no more, and therefore acts not in vain. 2. Before he need attempt a visible apparition to the Witch (if any fuch thing could be) he knows that the Witch is fure and fast in his snare by a spiritual Covenant already entred into, and therefore knows he need do no more, and he is too cunning to act to no purpole, and therefore doth St. Paul warn Timothy, That a Bishop must have a good report. lest he fall into the snare of the devil, all sins being the snares of the Devil, and when men are fast taken in them, they are in Satans fetters, and he labours no more but to keep them there. And fo the same Apostle speaketh of those that oppose the Gospel, that they must be instructed in meekness, that they may recover themfelves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will. So that fins keep men in the spiritual snare of the Devil. and so are all those that are accounted Witches, in that spiritual fnare, holden fast enough by their own consents and corrupt wills, and need no bodily apparition to make them furer: and fo this visible League falls to the ground, as having no ground nor end why it should be made. And for the Devil to appear like a Dog or a Cat, and speak, would fure not only fright and startle an old Witch, but even the boldest and most stout-hearted person.

2. The Witches by visible apparitions of the Devil (if any such thing could be) in any shape, could have no more affurance of Satans performances, than they have already, by mental perswasion, and the dominion of him in their hearts, who is the Prince of the air, and worketh in the children of disobedience, because by that visible appearance there is not brought any Hostages or Witnesses. which are absolutely necessary to confirm such a League or Covenant. And these representations being made in their imaginations and fancies, wherein they think they fee, do, and fuffer thefe delufive Visions, they are most firmly and pertinaciously confirmed in the belief of them, that any Apparition externally must needs be vain and superfluous.

3. If the Witches be not superlatively mad (and if so, then so to be judged of, and all that in this point is believed of them either in doing, fuffering, or otherwise, must be judged extreme folly and madness) they will not make a League with the Devil, knowing him to be the Devil, because they cannot but know that he was and is a Lyar and a Murtherer from the beginning, and hath deceived many before them, that were of the same way and profession. And a vilible appearance can afford them no certain security, but that he may and will deceive them still, and that he continueth a lyar and a deceiver. But while the delusion is internal, and the imagination deprayed, and led by the suggestions and motions of Satan, they then are so blinded, that they see not, nor understand the danger they run into, nor the certainty of the deceit they lye under, which a visible Apparition would sooner shake and overthrow, than any way confirm, and therefore is faile and needless.

4. But how come the Witches certainly to know that the Devil can perform such things as they would have done? Surely by no means, but either by traditional hear fay or inward delusion; the one they know not, but that it is a lye, and the other concludeth their passive delusion, to neither of which a visible Apparition like a Cat or a Dog, and speaking unto them, can bring any confirmation, except the Devil should bring them good store of gold or filver, or work some strange feat before their eyes, as to kill some men or beafts, or the like ; but none of these things are ever proved to be performed. And therefore it is not rational to believe that Witches do make a visible and corporeal League with the Devil, because by it they can have no certain knowledge, that he either can or will accomplish such things for them, as they defire,

The Devil cannot by his own power or will, either appear Reaf. 5. visibly in what shape he please, neither can he when he will, nor as he will, perform these strange tricks, because he is under restraint, and can act nothing but as the will of God orders and determines: fo G od sent an evil Spirit upon Saul, otherwise he could not have | Sam. 16. 14. troubled him; and the Devils could not enter into the herd of Mat. 8. 31, 32. Swine, until leave was given them by our Saviour 3 neither could he afflict Job, until that Gods hand was laid upon him, and God Job 1. 10, 11. ordered him to be an instrument in that affliction. And though the Devil be said to walk about like a roaring lion, seeking whom 1 Pet. 5. 8. he may devour, yet must that walking about be only understood (and is so taken by all sound Expositors) of the evil and wicked intention of his will, according to which he is always ready feeking whom he may devour, if he be so ordered or permitted of God Cordering and permission in this point, being but all one act of the divine Will and Providence) and not in regard of his power or liberty to act or execute what he please, and when and as he list; for the same Apostle and also St. Jude telleth us, that be is kept in a Pet. 2. 4. chains of darkness to be reserved unto judgment, and by those chains Jude 6. he is kept, that he cannot hurt or destroy, when and where he list, but as he is sent and appointed of God, either to tempt or afflict the godly, or to punish the wicked; and therefore the sentence of St. Austin is much to be weighed and considered, who saith: Dia- Aug. Super Psale bolue plerumg, wult nocere, & non potest, quia potestar ifta est sub potestate: nam si tantum posset nocere Diabolus quantum vult, aliquie justorum non remaneret. And therefore I cannot but transcribe here the opinion of that pious and learned person Bishop Hall up- of evil due. on this very particular, which is this: "Could Samfon have been fit. 3, 146-279, "firmly bound hand and foot by the Philistine cords, so as he could 280. "not have stirred those mighty limbs of his, what Boy or Girl of "Gath or Ascalon Would have feared to draw near and spurn that "awed Champion? No other is the condition of our dreadful ene-" mies, they are fast bound up with the adamantine chains of Gods " most merciful and inviolable Decree, and forcibly restrained "from their defired mischief. Who can be afraid of a muzled and "tyed up Mastive? what woman or child cannot make faces at a

"fierce Lyon, or a bloody Bajazet lockt up fast in an Iron Grate? "Were it not for this strong and strait curb of divine Providence. "what good man could breathe one minute upon earth? The De-"moniack in the Gospel could break his iron fetters in pieces. "through the help of his Legion ; those Devils that possessed him "could not break theirs; they are fain to fue for leave to enter "into Swine, neither had obtained it (in all likelihood) but for a "just punishment to those Gaderene owners : How sure may we "then be, that this just hand of Omnipotence will not suffer these "evil ones to tyrannize over his chosen Vessels for their hurt? "How lafe are we, fince their power is limited, our protection in-"finite? So that if the Devil be thus chained and restrained by the omnipotent Decree and Providence, that he cannot execute any evil, but as he is ordered of God, and that God doth not let him loose but for just causes and reasons; then can it not be that the Devil doth visibly appear and make Leagues with Witches, nor work such strange things for them, because there is no just or reasonable end that can be assigned, why God should order him to do these things; and therefore a visible League with Witches is meerly false and fraudulent.

6. This pretended League must needs be a lye and a figment. because of the effects that are feigned to follow, as to have carnal copulation with the Devil, to raile storms and tempests, to flye in the air, and to kill men and beafts. For if these things be done, they are either performed by the Witches own natural power, or by the Devils. If by the Witches natural power, or the force of her resuscitated imagination and strength of will to work ad nutum (as Van Helmont seems to hold) then the Devil operateth nothing, but in playing the Impostor, and deceiving the Witch, and that he may easily do by internal and mental delusion, and needs no visible League to bring it to pass. And if the Witch kill men or beafts, or perform any of the fore-cited Feats by natural means or Agents, then where is the Devils power, or wherein is the Witchcraft or Fascination, or where is the effect of the League? And if the Witch kill by natural means, then the natural Agent is not simply evil, but in the use and application. As a Sword is a natural and lawful instrument for an honest man to use, to defend his life withal, in using of it with his natural power and skill; but if a Thief or a Robber, with his natural power and skill, use a Sword to kill and murther an honest man withal, it is wickedness in the use and end, but not in the agency of the Thief, nor in the effect of the Sword. So if the Witch by any natural means (though never so secret) do kill a man or child, it is murther; but wherein lyes the Witchcraft ? Is it any thing elle but Veneficium (as both the Greek and Latine words do import) to kill by some secret way of poyloning? Shew what Witchcraft there is in it befides. If the Devil by his own power kill a man, or perform the Witches carrying in the air, and the like, let us know how, or by what means he performeth the same? If what the Devil performeth in natural and corporeal matter, be (as the Fathers, School-men, and Divines most generally hold) by applying natural Agents, to fit passives, then the effect is natural, and so in killing any person, it is only wicked and diabolical, in regard of the end, which is murther, but what Witchcraft is there in the means and operation? And therefore Guiterrius strongly concludeth thus. "If there be no "natural Fascination, there can be no diabolical; but there is no "natural Fascination (as he thinketh he hath sufficiently proved) "therefore he concludeth there is no diabolical Fascination at all. There is no way to folve this Argument, but either in denying that the Devil worketh these things by natural means, and then it crosfeth the opinion of all the Learned in general, ancient, middle, and modern, or by proving that there is natural Fascination, and then diabolical is but in vain and needless.

CHAP. V.

7. How can the Witches (if not maniacal in the highest degree) Reaf. 7. believe, that the Devil who is a Lyar, and the Father of lyes, and whom they cannot but know hath in the like cases deceived many, that have (in their opinion) made contracts with him, will prove true in the performance of his promise? Or that he who is the enemy of all truth and goodness, and laboureth to deceive all Mankind, will be faithful to perform his promise, or to do them any good, either real or apparent? Or (if the Witches be not incredibly mad) can they believe that he will perform without Hostages, Bonds-men, or Sureties? when we find that the weakest and maddest of Mortals, if he make a Covenant with another of known loosness and deceit, though for a thing of a far less value, than either foul or body, will he not require sufficient Bonds-men and Security? Now what Bonds-men or Security can the Witches

8. And if the Witches be not beyond measure deluded and mad, Real. 8. must they not rationally know, that if the Devil deceive them (as he is fure to do) there is no recompence to be had, nor any that can compel him to perform bargains? Before what Judicature, before what Judges, by what Law must they call him to an account, or have him punished? So that in all reason and sound judgment we must conclude the Witches to be absolutely mad, and then all these things also madness, lyes and folly, or that there is not, nor ever was any such League or Covenant.

9. But if all this were granted, yet who are the Witnesses to this visible League or Covenant, can the Witches name or find any? Reaf. 9. The things that cannot be proved by sufficient Witnesses, are never to be believed, and we have proved the nullity, impossibility, and falfity of the pretended Confessions of Witches themselves, and therefore that no credit at all ought to be given unto them, and however no Law nor Equity ought to allow the Evidence of a Party, as in these cases all Witches are. And though some few of them have been so exceedingly mad to make such false and absurd Confes

Confessions, yet if the Records of all Ages and Courts were sought. it will be found that many hundreds of them have suffered that never confessed the least tittle of any such matter; and the supposed Witches of Salmesbury in the County of Lancaster, the tenth year of the Raign of King James, were so far from this confession, that they were cleared, and the acculation found to be falle, and all acted by the imposture of one Thompson, or Christopher Southworth. And I my felf have known two supposed Witches to have been put to death at Lancaster within these eighteen years, that did utterly deny any such League, or ever to have seen any visible Devil at all : and may not the confession of these (who both dyed penitently) be as well credited, as the confessions of those that were brought to such confessions by force, fraud, or cunning perswasion. and allurements? But if there be any such League or Covenant be. twist the Witches and the Devil, how cometh the truth of this matter of fact (if ever there were or could be any such thing) to be certainly known and revealed? Have any of the Pen-men of the holy Scriptures recorded, that there ever was, is, or can be any fuch League or Contract? Or was it ever attested by any honest rational men, that were ear or eye-witnesses of such a bargain and contract? Therefore we must once again conclude: De non apparentibus & non existentibus eadem est ratio.

10. As for the Witches either Males or Females, having carnal Copulation with Devils, either as an Incubas or Succubas, and their stealing of feed from a man, and conveying it into the vessels of the woman, it is in it felf so horrid, monstrous, and incredible, that I cannot well believe him to be a rational person, or same mentic. that believes it as a truth, and therefore cannot but think the rehearfal of it a sufficient consutation. Also herein I do appeal to all learned Phylicians, who do know the way that Nature breeds humane feed, the causes that make it prolifical, and the members fit for its generation and reception, who (I doubt not) will deride this Tenent, and condemn it, as falle and abominable. Moreover, the horrid absurdity of it hath been sufficiently demonstrated by Wierne, Dr. Tandlerne, Mr. Scot, Mr. Wagstaff, and others: and therefore all we shall say is this: "That Devils, whether conceived to be corporeal or incorporeal, and to assume bodies (for the "one it must of necessity be) were not created of God to gene-"rate, neither have they, nor can have any feed, or members fit " for generation; and therefore to copulate or generate is dero-"gatory from the glory of Nature, and blasphemous against God "and his Power. As for the Devils sucking the Teats, Warts, or such like excrescences of the Witches bodies, we should have passed it over as easily as the former, but only that Mr. Glanvil hath taken up the Cudgels to defend it : to confute which, we shall give these satisfactory Reasons.

1. There can be no rational end assigned, why the Devil should perform this action, for we must tell Mr. Glanvil that supposals are no proofs, and ex suppositis supposita consequentur, and in a thing of this nature, arguments to prove it probable are insufficient. And Pag. 18. if (as he confesieth) for their being suckt by the Familiar, I say, (he faith) "We know fo little of the Nature of Demons and Spi-"rits, that 'tis no wonder we cannot certainly divine the reason of "fo strange an action: Now if he knew so little of their Nature, it must needs be vanity and arrogance to take upon him to declare fo much: and if he could not certainly divine the reason of so strange an act, it was extreme folly and pride in him to bring in idle and vain conjectures and probability, where verity and certainty are expected. One while he supposeth them corporeal, which if granted, will not prove that they are recreated by the reeks and vapours of humane blood, because their bodies are of a more pure Nature, than to be nourished with groß, and sometimes (especially in metancholick old men and women) corrupted blood: for if every thing be nourished by its like, then they cannot be fed with humane blood, for they have no flesh nor bones such as ours, that have need to be nourished with blood. And for his next, perhaps, and may be, that it is a diabolical Sacrament, we shall believe it when he proves it, and not before. But he hath a third supposal, which to him seemeth most probable, viz. "That the "Familiar doth not only suck the Witch, but in the action insuseth " some poysonous ferment into her. If this had been most probable, why did he bring in the other two, that are less probable? furely he might have known that , finftra fit per plura , quod fieri poteft per panciora. And is his fucking now come to infusion and injection? furely these will not accord: but enough of supposals.

2. But we must know of Mr. Glanvil, how he comes to know Reas. 2. that the Devils sucking of the Witches bodies is a truth, or ever was proved to be matter of fact, who were by and present that were ear or eye-witnesses of it? A thing that never was proved ought never to be believed; and if he recur to the Witches confessions, that is fully overthrown before, and we are sure that in these late years that are past, when so many pretended Witch-finders were fet abroad in Scotland and Northumberland, they never manifested, nor could verifie any such thing, but were found and discovered to be notorious Impostors and Knaves, pretending to discover Witches by putting tharp Needles or Pins into the Warts History. and hollow Excretcences of divers persons, when the persons so dealt withal, did not fee nor know; and if the persons did not feel nor complain of pain, then (forfooth) they must be taken for Witches, and be burnt. So of many persons they got money and bribes, that they might not be fearcht or stript naked, and of others for finding Excrescences upon them that were hollow and fiftulous, and therefore when the Pin was thrust into the fiftulous cavity, that was skinned within, and so indolent, they were then accounted guilty, and were either forced to compound with these notorious pretended Witch finders, or to be prosecuted for their lives. By which wicked means and unchristian practices divers innocent persons, both men and women lost their lives; and these wicked Rogues wanted not greater persons (even of the Ministry too) that did authorize and incourage them in these Diabolical courses, as though this had been some way prescribed by God or his Word to discover Witches by, when it was an Hellish device of the Devil to delude Witchmongers, and bring poor innocent people to danger and death. Yet it had prevailed further, if some more wife Heads and Christian Hearts had not interposed, by whom the Villany was detected, and the Impostors severely punished; and that this is a most certain truth, hundreds yet living can witness and testifie. And the like in my time and remembrance happened here in Lancashire, where divers both men and women were accused for supposed Witchcraft, and were so unchristianly, unwomenly, and inhumanely handled, as to be stript stark naked, and to be laid upon Tables and Beds to be searched (nay even in their most privy parts) for these their supposed Witch-marks; so barbarous and cruel acts doth diabolical inftigation, working upon ignorance and superstition, produce.

2. But as this was never really proved de facto, that the Devil did fuck upon the body of a supposed Witch, so the possibility of it likewise can never be demonstrated. For whether a Spirit be taken to be corporeal, or to assume a body, yet it neither hath nor can have such a body as our Saviour did appear in after his Resurrection, which was the same real and numerical body that he suffered in, and was by the sense of seeing and feeling distinguished from any bodies that Spirits can have and appear in, especially in solidity and tangibility; for a Spirit hath not fielh and bones, as he was felt and feen to have. And where there is no flesh and bones, there cannot be any animal fucking, and we speak not here of artificial sucking or attraction, of which there is a great question, whether any such thing be at all or not 3 but however the Spirits have no power to suck, because they have not flesh and bones.

4. That there are divers Nodes, Knots, Protuberances, Warts, and Excrescences that grow upon the bodies of men and women, is fufficiently known to learned Physicians and experienced Chirurgions. Some have them from their mothers wombs, some grow afterwards, some proceed from internal causes, some from external hurts, some are soft, some hard, some pendulous, some not, some fiftulous, and iffue matter, some hollow and indolent, and many other ways. And these are more frequent in some persons, by reafon of their Complexion and Constitution, in others by reason of their Age, Sex, and other accidents and circumstances, especially in Women that are old, and their accustomed purgations staid, or by reason of Child birth, and the like. Now if all these were Witch marks, then few would go free, especially those that are of the poorer fort, that have the worst diet, and are but nastily kept, And for their being indolent, it doth argue nothing but ignorance;

for many forts of Tumors and Excrescences are without pain, as well as fiftulous and hollow Warts. And it is a woful errour, to make that a fign and mark of a diabolical Contract, that hath natural causes for its production. And it is a strange kind of Logick to argue or conclude, that men or women are Witches, and have made a Contract with the Devil, because they have such Warts or Excrescences that are indolent when pricked into: where is the coherence, connexion, or just consequence? Let all wise men judge. As for that vain opinion, that Witches are, or can be really and effentially transformed into Dogs, Cats, Hares, and the like, or men transubstantiated into Wolves, it is largely by numerous positive ar- Pficholog. par. 24 guments, confuted by Casmannus, and by the Authors of that lear plate 53. 66. ned Treatise of Spirits and Devils, written in the Raign of Queen court, pag. 149, Elizabeth, as also by Wierus, Mr. Scot, and others; so that we shall on not bring all that others have written about this point, but note Wichcraft, i.s. fuch things as are most material, and have been less handled or regarded by others, and that in these Particulars. I. It is taken to be a great matter with some, because St. Augu- Di Civit. Dil, fin feemeth to favour this opinion of transformation, and tells us lib. 18. cap. 18. this: Si enim dixerimm ea non esse credenda, non de sunt etiam nunc. 145. 383. qui ejusmodi quedam, vei certissima andisse, vei etiam expertos se esse asseverent. And then saith: "And we, when we were in Italy, did "hear such things of a certain Region of those parts, where certain "Women that kept Inns, being skilled in these Arts (they did say) "were wont to give in Cheefe to Travellers that they could get to "take it, from whence forthwith they were turned into Juments, "and carried necessary burdens, and when they had done, did again "return unto themselves, but that while they had not a beltial, "bur rational and humane understanding. And yet concludeth: Hec vel falfa sunt, vel tam inustrata, ut merito non credantur. To which we shall return these short answers. 1. Though St. Austin were in many things a very Learned man, yet being but a man, might and did erre, not only in this point, but in many others. 2. His Reasons to prove it by are weak and groundless. 3. He speaketh nothing of his certain and peculiar knowledge, but by common fame and hearfay; and therefore the matters alledged to be done, are not credible. 4. He confesset that they are either falle, or so unusual, that they are not worthy to be believed. 5. And when he hath said all he can, he concludeth these Transformations (if any such were) to be but phantastical, that is, to seem so, but not really to be so, and what he meaneth by a phantastical appearance, is not easie to judge, whether it were a delusion of the Phantalie within, or of the senses without. 6. But in another place he telleth us this: Non est credendum, bumanum corpus De Spirit. anim. Damonum arte vel potestate in bestialia lineamenta converti posse 3 cap. 26. so that here is St. Austin contradicting himself, or else he concludeth nothing. 7. But his learned Commentator Ludevicus Vives doth not give credit to those vain and lying Fables, but confuteth them H'll. nat. l. 8. by the Authority of Pliny (who might have given St. Auftin fatis-6.22. p. 114 faction, if he had read him) who tells us roundly : Homines in lu. pos verti, rursumq, restitui sibi, falsum esse considenter existimare debemm, aut credere omnia que fabulofa tot seule comperimus. And further faith: Mirum est, quò procedat Gracia credulitas. Nuslum tam impudens mendacium est, ut teste careat. 2. For effential Transformations we have examples in the Sa.

cred Scriptures, but these not wrought but by a divine Hand and an omnipotent Power. And fuch was that of Lots Wife, who looking back contrary to command, was turned into a Pillar of Salt, & fuit in statuam Salte, as Arias Montanus renders it, which accordeth with the Hebrew exactly, the vulgar Latine and others lay, versa of in statum sale: and this by the divine singer was a real transubstantiation, especially in respect of her body, the substance of which was really changed into an absolute Pillar of Salt. without regression or returning back to what it was before, but

Antiq. Judaic. remained fo ftill, and was standing in the days of Josephus, if crehi. a.12. p.17. dit may be given to what he writeth. Another example we have in Moses his Rod, which God commanded him to cast upon the Exod. 4. 3, 4. ground, and he cast it upon the ground, and it became a Serpent. and Moses fled from before it. And the Lord Said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand. This Rod afterwards Aaron threw down before Pharaoh, and it became a Serpent.

Exod. 7, 9,10, and swallowed up the rods of the Wife men and Sorcerers, and it afterwards became a rod again, and Aaron used it in working some of the rest of the Miracles. So that this was so true a transformation, that Moses himself was afraid when he saw the Rod a Serpent, that he fled from before it; and that it was a real change, Exod. 9.20, 21. appeared in that it swallowed up the Rods of the Magicians, and still afterwards became a Rod again. So likewise all the Waters in Egypt were really changed into blood: And our Saviour did really change the Water into Wine at the Marriage in Cana of Ga. lilee. And all these were true and real transubstantiations, which neither Devils nor Witches can perform, as appeareth by these unanswerable Arguments.

1. All real Transubstantiations are wrought and performed by a divine and omnipotent Power: but Devils and Witches have no divine nor omnipotent Power. Therefore Devils or Witches cannot work or perform any real Transubstantiations.

2. All Beings that work real Transubstantiations, must work contrary and different from that order and course that God hath established in Nature: but Devils and Witches cannot work contrary and different from that order and course that God hath established in Nature. Therefore Devils and Witches cannot work any real transubstantiations at all. Let all the Witchmongers in the World answer these Arguments, if they be able.

3. We find also external Transfiguration, as of Christ in the Mountain; for the Text faith, in St. Matthews Gospel: And he Mat. 17. 2. was transfigured before them, and his face did shine as the Sun, and bis raiment was white as the light. And Mark faith: And he was Mar. 9.2, 3. transfigured before them, and his raiment became finning exceeding white as snow: So as no fuller on earth can white them. And St. Luke Luk. 9. 28. faith: And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered. and his raiment was white and glittering. The word used in those places for the transfiguring or altering of his face by St. Matthew and St. Mark is possessed , from pole trans, and poppe forma, figura, the outward form, shape, figure, or lineaments; and this word is also used for the change or transforming of the mind, will, desires, and affections: For so the Apostle saith: And be not conformed Rom. 12. 2. to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind. And again he faith: We behold as in a glass the glory of the Lord 2 Con. 3, 18, with open face: and are transformed into the same image from glory to glory. But St. Luke instead of this word expresent it thus: Luk. 9. 29. าง ดีรัติ คั้ง สมุขย์สาย เม่าจึ จังเอง. Tremellius renders it : Transformatus est aspectus vultus eins. And Beza: Species vultus eins alia, which is nearest the Greek. So Moses face, when he had been with Exod. 34-33 the Lord upon the Mount, the skin of it did shine, so that he put a 34,35 veil upon it, when he spoke to the people, and put it off when he went in to speak unto the Lord. So that these were external alterations of both Christs and Moses face, by appearing glorious, resplendent, and thining like the Sun, and this was wrought by a divine hand and power. From whence we may note,

1. That though Christ was thus gloriously transformed (for so the word doth bear) yet we are not to imagine, that Christ was effentially changed into some other substance or nature; no, but that he was rather made there most resplendent in glory.

2. And where the Apostle wisheth the Romans to be transformed: Is it to be effentially transformed into any other substance or natural thing? Nay not so, but effectively into some other more facred qualities, by the renovation of their inward mind. And again where he faith: And are transformed into the same image from glory to glory. His meaning is not, that we are effentially transformed into the very image of God; for so should he very threwdly confirm that foolish opinion of some, who hold that men are deified in God, and that God also is hominified in men : But his purpose is, that we (by the operation of the holy Spirit) should proceed and grow (by degrees) from glory to glory, until we be truly conformed unto the limilitude of that same glorious Image of God wherein we were first created; and so intendeth no effential transformation at all.

2. We are here to note the difference betwirt this Transfiguration, and that which may proceed from natural causes, as passions, affections, or diseases; and also from artificial or counterseited Transfigurations. For it is wonderful to behold, how anger and CHAP. V.

forrow, despair, and the like, in others, causeth horrible changes all over the external parts both of the face and body. Neither is any passion more prevalent than deep rooted fear mixed with despair, as hath been manifested in some, that in a short time, nay even in the space of one night have had their hair, that formerly was black, turned into gray or white, as is teltified by Authors of unquestionable veracity. And for diseases, it is almost incredible to think, what strange alterations Madness, Frenzy, the bitings of a mad Dog, Mclancholies (especially that kind which Physicians call Lycanthropia, which is fo wonderful, that it hath made many dotingly believe, they were really transformed) will produce and bring forth. Examples of which at large may be feen in Schenckius; of which we shall speak more fully anon, as also of artificial and counterfeited Transfigurations: and that Devils nor Witches can perform no fuch Transfigurations as this of Christ and Moses, is manisest by the Arguments laid down before, because these were brought to pass by a divine Hand and an omnipotent Power, which

Devils and Witches have not, and therefore cannot operate any fuch things. 4. Moreover in the Scripture there is mention of counterfeit, simulated, and hypocritical transformation, such the Apostle men-2 Cor. 11. 13, tioneth in these words, speaking of the false Apostles: For such are false Apostles, descriful workers, transforming themselves into the Apostles of Christ. And no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an Angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing, if his Ministers also be transformed as the Ministers of Righteousness, whose end shall be according to their works. The word there thrice used is from uslayapalita, which cometh from the habeo, postdeo, teneo, and from thence xius habitus: fo that the compound Verb properly fignifieth effingo, affimulo, and so of necessity must signifie in these three places. So the Apostle saith in another place: The form of this world, Aua, passeth away, that is, the fathion, condition, cultom, or usage of the world passeth away. This place of Scripture concerning Satans transforming of himself into > the meaning of the Text, we shall prove by these following Rea-1. The very fignification of the word here, doth not bear nor intend any effential transformation, but only feigning, pretending, most usually alledged by Witchmongers, to prove the Apparitions of Devils by: For thus they commonly argue; "If Satan can trans"form himself into an Angel of Light, much more (arguing à ma-

"jore ad minus) into any other shape, and so may easily appear in "the form of a Cat, Dog, or in any other shape whatsoever, and this they think to be an invincible Argument. This way of argument were of force, if the Apostle in this place had meant or

and assimulating, as when Judas pretended charity and love to the poor, when he faid: Why was not this syntment fold for three hun- Joh. 12. 4, 6. dred pence, and given to the poor? This he faid, not that he cared for the poor: but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein. Though Judas Iscariot hypocritically feigned and pretended this charity to, and care for the poor, yet was he not really a charitable man, or a lover of the poor, but a thief, and a most covetous wretch. So these false Apostles did pretend much zeal and picty to preach and promote the Gospel, but therefore were they not really transformed and changed into true Apoftles, but were Deceivers, Diffemblers, and Hypocrites. So Satan often pretendeth heavenly, angelical, and divine things, and to do as the holy Angels do; but it is in deceit, cozenage, fallity, and hypocrifie, and so he is by counterfeiting and diffembling said to be transformed into an Angel of Light, and not otherwise by any essential transformation at all.

2. The Text it self doth plainly manifest, that they were not Real, 2. transformed into true Apostles, for then St. Paul had had no cause to have written so bitterly against them; but that notwithstanding that thew, form, or pretence that they held forth, and though outwardly they seemed to personate the true Apostles of Christ, yet hat was but an external and hypocritical simulation; for really and ruly they were falle Apostles, 400/40060000, and deceitful workers, And fo Satan may make what shews or pretences he will of goodness, piety, and of heavenly things, and so may counterfeit, disTemble and lye, yet still he remaineth a very accursed Devil, and is never really changed from his damned and diabolical Nature.

3. Satan is so transformed into an Angel of Light, as his Mini- Reaf. 3. sters are transformed into the Apostles of Christ. But Satans Ministers are not essentially transformed into the Apostles of Christ. Therefore neither is Satan effentially transformed into an Angel of Light. For though Satans Ministers may pretend never so much Dialog. Difc. piety and zeal, and labour to personate and imitate the true Mini- Devils, p. 234. sters of Christ, yet notwithstanding that pretended transformation, they still really and essentially remain as they were, that is, Deceivers and Hypocrites. And Satan for all his feeming and apparent personating and imitating the Angels of Light, he still remaineth in his effence and nature an Angel of Darkness, and a lying and accurfed Wretch.

4. The Devil is never nor can be really and effentially transub. Reaf. 4. stantiated into an Angel of Light, for then he could (indeed and in truth) be no longer a Devil, but his diabolical Nature would of necessity cease. But all his transformation is, when he intendeth most deeply to circumvent and deceive the sons of men, then he pretendeth the most religious and the holiest shews of all. Pretending in all outward appearance the holy affections, fincerity, and zeal of the holiest Augels of Light. For as St. Außin faith: "Un-Mauß. de Civ. "les Dis. 1.2.6.26;

an Angel of light (though plain in it felf) hath been and still is

5. The best and most sound Expositors, both ancient, middle. and modern do expound the place as we have urged it, of which (ir) of, it is we shall name only two or three. St. Chrysoftom tells us this: Oberarit dolost: nam operantur quidem, sed revellunt ea que sunt plantata : nam quoniam sciunt se aliter non posse effe acceptos, per sona veritatis sumptà, erroris actum simulantes peragunt. And a little after he faith thus : Et multos Diabolus sic decipit, persona in se accepta. on non factus Angelus lucis : sic illi personam Apostolorum circumferunt, non ipsam potentiam, neg, fortes funt. Dr. Hammond gives the Paraphrase of this place thus: "For the truth is (he saith) "these men that come to insuse false Doctrines into you, behave "themselves as cunningly as they can, and do labour to imitate, "and seem to do those very things, that we true Apostles do. And "'tis no unusual matter for Deceivers and Seducers to do so; for "Sa an himfelf pretends to do those things that the good Angels "do, makes as if he meant you all kindnels, when he comes to de-"froy you. And therefore 'tis not any thing strange, if seducing "Hereticks, imployed by him, do imitate the actions of the Apo-"files of Christ; but according to the hypocrisie of their actions. " fo shall their ends be. See Theophylatt and Calvin upon the place. So that we politively conclude, that from this place of Scripture no real or effential transformations of Devils can be proved at all.

6. There are natural Transformations by progression to perfection, as is manifest in Insects, which at the first to our view do appear to be Worms, Maggots, Creepers, or Caterpillers, and yet afterwards do become several forts of winged Creatures, as Butterflies of many and various kinds, Flies, and the like; as that Creature, which here in the North Fishers do call a May-Fly, is first but a little Creeper inclosed in an Hull, as of pieces of straws, or the like: and so that which they call a Cod-bait, is like a yellow Maggot with a black head inclosed in a fandy crustaceous Husk, and yet towards the middle of August, or the beginning of September. becometh a fine yellowish Fly, which the Fishers use to bait withal, and these are but gradual progressions towards the perfection of the Animalcle, as the learned Author Johannes Swammerdanus hath declared in these words, as we find it laid down in the Philosophical Transactions: "First it lays down the ground of all natural "changes in Insects; declaring, that by the word Change, is no-

"thing else to be understood but a gradual and natural evolution "and growth of the parts, not any Metamorphofis or Transforma-"tion of them, and a great deal more of notable observations con-" cerning the most forts of Insects, as may be seen in the piece quo-"ted in the Margent. So likewise there are very many strange cent. 2. Hill. transformations wrought by petrifactions both of Vegetables and 100. 128. 319. Animals, or their parts, as may be seen by the Writings of many 17. PIC. 107. learned Authors, especially those noted in the Margent, to whom we refer the curious Inquirer. These being natural Transfigurations (for so they may be properly called) we cannot rationally suppose that any man of judgment will imagine, that any such can be produced by Devils or Witches, because they are brought forth by natural Principles and Agents, which Devils or Witches cannot over-rule, alter, nor hinder, else the whole and certain course that the Creator hath fet in the order of the production and generation of natural things, might be suspended, which is not possible to be performed without an omnipotent Power, which the Devils and Witches have not. Besides the most of these require a suitable time for their production and perfection, which must only be performed by the internal operation of Nature, or by Art accelerating the works of Nature, which Devils and Witches cannot

7. There are divers other Transformations (at least so accounted and called) which because they are not absolutely pertinent to our purpole, we shall only mention slightly. 1. External changes of the body in respect of diseases, and some by an extraordinary power, as that of Mofes, to whom the Lord faid : Put now thine Exod. 4.6,7. band into thy bosom. And he put his hand into his bosom: And when he took it out : behold, his hand was leprous as snow. And he faid, Put thine hand into thy bosom again: And he put his hand into his bosom again, and plucked it out of his bosom, and behold, it was turned again as his other flesh. Here we fee that the same hand was made leprous white as snow, and was again restored as his other flesh. And this was done by a divine Power, such as neither Devils nor Witches can perform. So Gebazi of whom it is faid: The leprose therefore of Naaman shall cleave unto thee, and 2 King 5. 27. unto thy feed for ever. And he went out from his presence a leper as white as fnow. And here the judgment was permanent, and no restauration, and was a great Miracle, which Devils and Witches cannot perform. 2. There is feigned, and artificial transfigurations. So of David, of whom it is said : And be changed his behaviour 1 Sam. 21. 13. before them, and feigned himself mad in their hands, and scrambled on the doors of the gate, and let his spittle fall down upon his beard. And all this he prudently feigned, that he might escape from Achish the King of Gath, of whom he was fore afraid: So many Persons of Worth have disguised themselves strangely, that they might escape the hands of their enemies, or not fall into their power, and yet these were not done by the Devils Art, nor by Witchcraft. So a Stage-player transfigureth himself, sometimes to personate one person, and sometimes another; and though his outward habit, speech, and action be changed, yet he remaineth the same in Nature and Person that he was before those changes, and so maketh nothing for Witcheraft at all. 3. There are knavish Transfigurations and Counterseiting for deceitful and wicked ends, as in those we call Gypfies, that discolour their faces and skins, to be more fit to cheat D. Mon H. 1.24. and cozen. So likewise do many other vile and wicked persons 6.18, p. 365.

counterseit Sores, Ulcers, Leprosie, Dropsie, and such like diseases. as may be seen at large in Ambrose Paraus Book of Monsters. and we have seen and detected divers; and all this done only to deceive and abuse mens goodness and charity: But no more of Devil in any of these, but the wickedness of the mind, and the evil of the end and intention. Of a more wicked grain and temper are those, that for wicked and devilish ends counterfeit themselves to be possessed, and labour to make the World believe, that the Devil doth move in divers parts of their bodies, and doth speak in them, when it is nothing but only their own devilish cunning in lying and counterfeiting, as we shall have occasion to shew more fully hereafter. 4. There are also divers kinds of sportive and de-Iusive Transformations, performed by those that use the Art of Leger-de-main or Juggling, wherein they pretend and feem to transubstantiate one thing into another, when by the agility of their hands, and the gesture of their face and body, they do but draw your eyes and attention another way, while they do but nimbly convey another thing in its place. And he that taketh thefe for Conjurers or Witches, and their Tricks for diabolical or Witchcraft, are furely under a devilish delusion, and are most strangely bewitched. And as for the changes wrought by Pharaohs Magicians, we shall particularly handle it in another place.

8. There are other Transformations mentioned in the Scripture. of which we shall now speak. 1. That transformation that the Grace and Spirit of God doth work inwardly in the minds and hearts of the Godly, which is not by changing their Nature or Persons, but by transforming their minds, and altering their wills and affections from finful and earthly things, to those that are holy and heavenly : so the Apostle willeth the Romans, that they be transformed by the renewing of their minds, and so they come to be changed from glory to glory, and this were blasphemy to say, that either Devil or Witch could perform it. 2. There is a transformation wrought in the minds of the wicked by the just judg. ment of God; for the Text saith, speaking of Antichrist: Revealing even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power and signs and lying wonders. And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish 3 because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be faved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusions, that they should believe a lye. That they all might be damned, who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. So in the case of saul the Text faith: s Sam. 18. to. And it came to pass on the morrow, that the evil spirit from God came upon Saul. These therefore are inward judgments for wickedness, sent by God by the ministry of Satan, of which we shall speak more hereafter. 3. We lastly come to the main point, that is, concerning the transformation of Nebuchadnezzar, which the

tion, which are this: And they shall drive thee from men, and thy Dan. 4. 32,33, dwelling shall be with the beafts of the field, they shall make thee 34, 36. eat grass as oxen. The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar, and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like Eagles feathers, and his nails like birds claws. And at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lift up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me. At the same time my reason returned unto me. And a little before: Let his heart will vers. 16. be changed from mans, and let a beafts heart be given unto him. From this place they commonly frame an argument to this purpose. That Nebuchadnezzar being really and effentially changed from a man to a beast or an ox, much more may Satan effentially transform himself into the shape of any Creature, and consequently that he may really change the Witches into Hares, Dogs, Cats, and the like. But we shall unanswerably prove that the assumption is falle, that Nebuchadnezzar was not transubstantiated, or effentially transformed at all: And if he had been really so, yet that the consequence is invalid, and of no force, and that by these Arguments.

I. Because that being driven into the field, and eating grass as Argum. I. oxen, and having his body (it was his body, not the body of an oxe, and therefore no corporeal nor real change) wet with the dew of Heaven, do not at all conclude or infer, that his body was really and effentially changed, nor in the external figure of it altered from what it was before; for he might go upon all four, and cat grass, and yet that doth argue no real change of his bodily shape at all; for so have divers persons done, that being young, have been lost in Woods and Defarts, and have been brought up with Bears or Wolves. To which purpose take one story for all from Philip Camerarine, that learned Counsellor of Norimberg, a Hill. medic. 1.4. man of great credit and reputation, in these words. "In the year " 5. P. 239. " 1543. there was in the parts of Heffe a Lad taken, who (as he "reported afterwards, and so it was found true) when he was but "three years old, was taken away, and afterwards nourished and "brought up by Wolves. These Wolves, when they got any prey, " would always bring the best of it to a Tree, and give it to the "Child, which did eat it: in Winter and time of cold, they would "dig a pit, and strew it with grass and leaves of trees, and there-"upon lay the Child, and lying round about it, preserve him from "the injury of the weather: after they would make him go upon "all four, and run with him, till by use and length of time, he "could skip and run like a Wolf; being taken, he was compelled "by little and little to go only upon his feet." He would often " fay, that if it had been in his power, he could have taken more "delight to have conversed among Wolves, than among men: he " was carried to the Court of Henry Lantgrave of Heffe to be feen. And in the same Chapter he relateth another story to the same purpose of one that he himself had known and seen, that was of N 2 admirable agility, and more to the same end. Now must we conclude, that because this Boy did live and lye in the open air, was fed with raw flesh, and went upon all four, that therefore he was really and effentially charged into a Wolf? no, that would be inconsequent and ridiculous; and so would it be, if because Nebuchadnezzar lay in the open field, was wet with the rain and dew. and did eat grass as an ox, to conclude, that therefore he was really changed into a beaft; the absurdities are both alike. This is as mad a kind of inference, as if we should say, Conies and Geese do eat grass like an Ox, therefore they are Oxen or Asses, when notwithstanding they still retain their essential beings and shapes.

without any effential transformations at all. 2. Because the hairs of his head (as the Text saith) were grown like to an Eagles feathers, and for that also the very nails of his hands and feet were like the claws of a bird: yet it doth not prove that he was really changed into a beaft, and that for thefe Reasons. 1. Because it would be more consonant to conclude. that he was rather transformed into some bird, having feathers and claws, than into a beaft that hath horns and hoofs, though there was in him no corporeal transformation at all, but only a changed mind. 2. The Text is not according to the Hebrew Phrase used when there is real transubstantiaton, as in Lots Wife ; Et fuit ftatna falie; but as Tremellius renders it : Ufquedum pili ejus ut Aquilarum plume crevissent, & unques ejus ut avium. And Arias Montanus thus : Donec capillus ejus ficut Aquilarum crevit, & ungues ejus ficut a. vium: which is exactly agreeable to the Hebrew. So that the affertion is not, that his hairs were changed into Eagles feathers, nor his nails into birds claws, but that they were ficut as the feathers of Eagles, and as the claws of birds; the hairs by being grown ruffled, fqualid, and rugged, and the nails by being grown long, hard, and crooked for want of cutting, drefling, combing, and ordering; and more change than this the words or fense do not bear. 3. There was no other change, but what was by natural growth; for the Hebrew word na! doth properly fignific multus fuit, succrevit in multitudinem : so that the hairs were increased naturally in multitude and length, and the nails in magnitude and length, and to there was no effential change at all, but only an excessive augmentation of them both, he having lost the use of reafon, whereby he could not use means to cut, cleanse, and order them. So that they did but grow fqualid and ill-favour'd for want of using means to order and make them comely, even as many that have been loft, or left in Desarts, and desolate places, have after fome length of time been found to be overgrown with hairs and ugly nails, that they have scarce been taken for men, but have appeared as favage and feral Monsters.

2. His restauration doth plainly testifie what kind of change it was; for that which was restored unto him, did bring him into the same condition that he was in, before this transformation; and that was his knowledge or understanding. Now therefore if his knowledge or understanding did reduce him to the right use of reason, and brought those conditions and qualities that he had before: Then it is most plain, that it was only his knowledge or understanding that was taken away or changed; and so there was no other transformation, but what was internal in the mind, judgment, or imagination, by altering his will, defires, cogitations, condition, and qualities, and so no effential transformation at all, nor no change of his external shape, but what grew naturally in regard of his hair and nails or skin, for want of due ordering and decent dreffing. And that this is an unanswerable truth, the words in the Text do sufficiently testifie, which are in our English: And mine Dan. 4. 34, 36. understanding returned unto me, and at the same time my reason returned unto me; therefore it was only his understanding and reafon, that had for a time been turned from him, and at his restauration they returned, or came again. Tremelline renders the former Verse: Et mente mea ad me reversa Excelso benedixi. And in the latter : Mente mea reversa in me. In both Verses Arias Montanus renders it: Cognitio mea super me reversa est; for the Hebrew word there wied yan feivit, restituit, cognovit, agnovit, proprie est mentie & intellectus, as Avenarise faith. And the Septuagint in Aumar. Dilliboth the Verses do agree with the Hebrew, at offices me in initiating on page 313. engar. And to this purpose doth the French, Italian, and Luthers Translation render it, only the vulgar Latine gives it by the word sensue, & figura mea reversa est, which is altogether vicious. So that from hence we may fafely conclude, that this transformation was only internal and mental, and no effential change at all: of which a most learned Divine tells us thus much : Sunt nonnulli, inter quos Palon. in loc. est Johannes Bodinus, qui putant humanam siguram reverà suisse ei ademptam. Ac san't Dem pro sua omnipotentia miraculum hoc in rege isto impio facere, & humanam ejus naturam in bruti animalis essentiam mutare potuit : sed verisimilius est regem alienatum mente, vel etiam maniacum factum, adempta ei divinitus mente, ut patet ex sequente vers 34. & in furorem versum, sive per iram, sive per dolorem, ob acceptam ignominiam, quod regià dignitate effet orbatm. 4. That this was only a mental and internal transformation, as Argum. 4. are many forts of Melancholy, especially that which Physicians call Lycanthropia, or Melancholia lupina, Rabies canina, and the like, is most manifest by comparing it with some of these that we have named; of which (though we have related some before) we shall give some few, from Authors of credit and veracity. 1. And first concerning the effects of that Madness caused by the biting of a mad Dog, we have a most sad and deplorable story recited by Phi- Obser. medic. lip Salmuth, that experienced Physician of Anhalt, which we shall p. 57, 580 here give in English: "Many (he faith) do verily think that the "force of this poylon will break out, and appear within a few

"months or years. But experience doth altogether testifie the "contrary. As certain learned Authors do commemorate, that "it hath laid hid in some the space of seven years, but in others it "hath broke forth in the twelfth. Guainerius also mentioneth a "certain person, to whom the Hydrophobia did happen the 18. " year after he was bitten by the mad Dog. Moreover (he conti-"nueth) a most Noble person of Hagen hath told me, that a certain "Noble man was bitten in the face by a little pretty Dog, which "he much delighted in , and that the feeds of that poylon, as it "were nourished in his bosom for a long time, at the last did sud-"denly break forth. For after that for some years feeling no mo-"lestation nor trouble from that bite, he addressing himself to a "Virgia did marry. And the nuptial Supper being ended, and the "Bride brought to the Marriage-bed, her Kinsfolks a little after do "hear her complaining and lamenting. At which they laughed and " jested, thinking it but to be the Venereal sport. But that howling "continuing late, they by force do break the barred doors of the "Chamber, and enter, and find that the Bridegroom had bitten " with his teeth, plainly after the manner of a Dog, the face of the "Bride, and also the shoulders and arms, and the fleshy places, and "ftill did not give over the same fort of biting. Being much afto-"nished with this sad spectacle and cruel wickedness, they with an "ireful and provoked mind do forthwith flay him: and the new "Bride also died the same day. Though this he had but by relation, yet it was from a person of great quality; and if he had not been reasonably assured of the truth of it, he would never have writ it down amongst his Medical Observations. But this is also attested by other Authors of sufficient credit, of divers of this fort of persons, that have both barked and bitten like Dogs, and this is Di Hidrop. L. 1. tellified by Scribonius Largus and Rhases; as Baptista Codronchus hath cited them; and learned Sennertus tells us this: "That some (if bitten with Dogs) do bark like Dogs, and flye at whomfor-"ver they meet, and that against or besides their will. For (he Summert, de Hy. " faith) Gentilis relateth in his Comment upon Avicen, that a cerdrop. p.28.417. "tain young man troubled with this rabiousness, did exhort his "Mother, that the should not come near him, for he could not con-"tain himself but bite those that came near him. 2. As concerning Wolf-melancholy, we shall only give a short relation or two, the first from Donatus ab alto mari, who confesseth that he had mob. c.9. p.97 feen two: of the one of which he faith: "This person (he faith) "having formerly known me, did one day meet me when he was holden with this diftemper; but I truly fearing went afide, and he looking at me a little went away. There was with him a multi-Hiftory 3. "tude of men, and he did bear upon his shoulders a whole thigh "and, a leg of a dead man: At last being cured he was well, who "afterwards when he met me again, did ask me, if I had not been "afraid, when he found me in fuch a place when he was mad: by "which it is manifelt, that in him the memory was not vitiated. Another Another take from that able Physician of Delfe Petrus Forestus in obser. medic. English thus: " A certain Country-man was in the Spring time 1. 10. 1. 440. "seen at Alemaria with an horrid look, and mad, to stay about "the Church-yard, and after to enter the Church, and did leap "upon a Seat or Plank (as we have feen him) only climbing up. History 4. " wards, and another while downwards with great fury, and never "resting in one place. He carried a long staff in his hand, but did "strike no body, but did with it beat off the Dogs; for he had "his thighs and legs black and ulcered with black crusts or scurff "by the biting of Dogs. His whole body did appear squalid, very "black, and melancholick, but pale in the face, and his eyes ex-"ceeding hollow. From the foresaid signs (he saith) I did judge " the man affected with the Lycanthropia or wolfish Melancholy. He "never used any Physician that I know of. And this both this Author. Schenckins and Sennertus do sufficiently confirm from Paulus, Actius, Avicen, and the like. From all which it is clear and manifest, that Nebuchadnezzars distemper was but as some kind of Melancholy, whereby the imagination was corrupted, and the use of reason and right understanding for the time taken quite away, as faith the Text: Let bis heart be changed from mans, and let a beafts heart be given unto him. That is, let his thoughts, desires, and affections be made brutish; for by the heart in Scriptures the cogitations, will, and affections are understood, as, my fon give me thy heart, that is, the love and affections of thy foul and heart. So that when it is said, Let a beafts heart be given him, that is, let his mind, thoughts, and affections be made bestial; and so there was a change of the conditions and qualities of his mind and heart, but no real or effential change of his natural heart at all. And in this sense Tremellius doth take it, saying: Obbrutescat, nibil humanum Vid. Polan. fapiat, and fo doth Polanus, Rollock, and others understand it; for Rolloc. & alios Polanus faith: Debuisse animum ejus prorsus obbrutescere, & men- v. 16. tem judiciúma, animi humani amittere : non enim intelligendum hoc de metamorphosi aliqua in corpore faïta , sed de animo tantum obbrutescente. So that from these examples it appeareth, that many persons, by reason of Melancholy in its several kinds, have been mentally and internally (as they thought, being depraved in their imaginations) changed into Wolves and other kind of Creatures, and have acted their parts, as though they had been really fo, when the change was only in the qualities and conditions of the mind, and not otherwise. And so only was the change of Nebuchadnezzar, which notwithstanding Bodinus, the Popish Writers, and Witchmongers have falfely and ignorantly taken it to be a real transubstantiation, when it was only mental: so apt are men to mistake and urge things amiss, when it lyes for their own gain or interest. But if these persons that thought themselves really changed into Wolves, had been covered with a Wolfes skin fitted to their bodies, and gone upon all four, and so have acted the parts of that way neither had there been any change of substance, but only a counterfeit and cunning disguisement : of which we shall here insert (for diversion sake) a pleasant story from the Pen of Vincent le Blanc of Marseilles, and leave it to be judged of according to the credit of the Author, which runs thus: "As concern-The World furveyed, path "ing the Anthropolychi, I have not heard (he faith) of any thing 2. (19. p. 270. "O ftrange, as that the Governor of Bagark, related once to me. Hillory. "He cold me that going with Governor of Life." He told me, that going with some of his Company from Lionac " to Montpelier, they overtook an old man with a Sack on his shoul-"ders, going a great pace towards the same Town, a Gentleman "of the Company out of charity told him, if he would, one of his "Servants, to ease him, should carry his burden for him : at first "he seemed unwilling to be troublesom; but at length accepted " the offer, and a Servant of the Commanders Chamber called Ni-"cholas took the burden, and being late, every one doubled his "pace, that they might get in in good time, telling the good old "man, they would go before, and he should find them at the White "Horfe. The Servant of the Chamber coming in with the first, had "a curiofity to see what was in the Sack, where he found a Wolfes "skin, so properly accommodated for the purpose, that he had a "ftrong fancy to disguise himself in it : whereupon he got it upon "his back, and put his head within the Head-piece of the Skin, as "'twere to shew his Masters a Masquerade ; but immediately a furv " feized him, that in the Hall where they supped, he made straight "to the Company at Table, and falling on them with teeth and "nails, made a dangerons rude havock, and hurt two or three of "them, so as the Servants and others fled to their Swords, and " so plyed the Wolf with wounds, that they laid him on the ground, "and hurt in several places. But as they looked upon him, they "were amazed when they saw under the Skin a poor Youth wal-"lowing in blood. They were fain to lay him presently on a Bed, "taking order for his wounds and hurts, whereof he was recovered; "and was long before he could be cured: But this cured him of "the like curiosity against another time. The Company by this "means had but a bad seasoned Supper, and many of them were "fick either of hurt or apprehension. For the old man Wolf, 'twas "not known what became of him; but 'tis probable, that hearing "of this tidy accident, he was cautious to appear. Now if this relation be true, as there is nothing in it that seems either impossible or improbable, but that it might, then from it we may observe these two things. 1. To consider for what end the skin of the Wolf was so sitted and prepared, which might be to act some part of a Tragedy or Comedy in, or in sport to fright some persons withal; but then it is not likely, but that the old man would have appeared and fought for it again, which he might have done without fear or danger. But I rather conjecture it was for some more pernicious purpole, as in that disguise to fright Travellers and Passengers, that thereby they might (for without doubt the old man had other Companions) more securely rob them, and so escape, and not be discovered or apprehended, which might make him afraid to be seen, or to seek it again. 2. We may note the curiosity of the young man, and the strength of his fancy, being moved to see himself, so fitly to appearance, to be so like a Wolf, and not to the steams flowing from the Wolfes skin to work upon his imagination, which we leave to the inquisition of Naturalists, that live in Countries where Wolves are, to make tryal of.

So having sufficiently disproved their supposition or assumption, that Nebuchadnezzar was effentially transformed into a beaft, we shall also shew the consequence that (if it had been true) they would draw from it, to wit, that if Nebuchadnezzar were really transformed into a beast, much more may the Devil transform himfelf into the shape of any Creature, and may change Witches into Cats, Dogs, Hares, and the like, which can by no true Rules of Argument be good, because it stands upon divers, or rather contrary efficients, namely God and the Devil. The one having of himself an absolute and indeterminate power, and therefore of himfelf able to work what he will, where, when, and howsoever best pleaseth himself. And so by consequence he might (if it had so feemed good in his wisdom) have effentially transformed Nebuchadnezzar into an ox. The other (the Devil I mean) he hath only a finite and limited power, and therefore utterly unable of himself to accomplish any one work beyond the bounds of that power: and so by confequence he cannot possibly transform him-felf effectially into any Creature whatsoever, without a special power from God. Lastly we shall conclude all with this binding Argument: what transubstantiations soever are wrought, the thing transformed ceases to be what it was before, both in nature and properties, as Lots Wife being transubstantiated into a Pillar of Salt, did cease to be flesh, blood, and bones, as the was before, and lost all the properties of humane Nature. So if Devils or Witches be transubstantiated into other Creatures, they cease to be what they were before both in Nature and Properties. And then by consequence the Devil should cease to be a Devil in Nature and Properties, and the Witches should cease to have humane Nature and Properties in them.

Having laid down these positive Arguments, we shall in the next place shew the horrid absurdities of these Tenents, to wit, of holding a visible Contract, that the Devil sucks upon the Witches bodies, that they have carnal Copulation together, or that they are effentially changed into Cats, Dogs, or Hares, or that they can flye in the air, or raise storms or tempests, and kill men or Cattel, and the like, and that in this order.

I. These Tenents do derogate from the Wisdom and Power of Absurd. I. God in his Government of the World by divine Providence, because by these it is supposed that the Devils and Witches do operate what, when, and howfoever it pleaseth them, and so the life and estate of all Creatures should be in their power to afflict, torment, or to destroy when they please, which is both false and blasphemous. For the Devils and wicked men are enemies and rebels against God, but yet conquered, and imprisoned, and chained close up by his Almighty Power, that they are not able to act any thing at all (except the evil of their own wills) nor put that into execution, but as far as God doth license and order them; which we shall make plain in these two particulars. I. The Devils are kept in chains of darkness unto the judgment of the great day, that is, though their wills be corrupt, wicked, and evil, and that they have a continual defire, like a roaring lion, to feek whom they may devour; yet are they restrained from acting this evil, by the mighty Power of God, and can execute nothing at all, but only as far as God doth order and command them: so the Devils could not by Man 8, 31,324 their own power enter into the herd of Swine, until Christ gave them leave: neither could Satan hurt Job either in his goods or body (though he strongly and earnestly desired it) until he had leave Job 1. 11, 12. and commission given him from God. No more can Devils for Witches perform these things that are pretended; for it can never be proved that ever God did, or will give them order or leave to perform any such filthy or wicked thing, for which there can be no reason or end assigned why God should order such things to be

dom, and Providence. 2. Nor can wicked persons act what they please, but God doth bridle and restrain them as he pleaseth; for

to condemn Christ, or to let him loose, yet our Saviour tells him : Joh. 19. 11. Thou couldst have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above. Upon which place learned Dr. Hammond faith thus: "So that thou halt neither right non power to inflict any "punishment one me, were it not that God, who is my Father, " hath in his great Wildom and divine Counsels, for most glorious "ends, for the good of the World, determined to deliver me up "into thy power to suffer death under thee. Of which another Rolloc. in loc. faith thus: Verba hac duobus modie accipi possunt : partim quia omnie potestas est à Deo , & divina ordinatione ; partim quia qui cum potestate cft, nibil plane potest, nist ex Dei efficaci difpensatione as providentia. So this is manifelt in the excellive pride and boalting of Sennacherib of his own power, and taking no notice of Gods inevitable Decree in his Providence, that it was he, even the Lord of Hosts that had done it, and of ancient times had formed it, without which Sennacherib could have done nothing ; but because he despised Gods Power and Providence, therefore saith the Lord: Therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou cameft, which was performed by the flaughter of his Army, and the fend-

ing him back into his own Country: so little do mens purposes and counsels prevail, when the Lords will and purpose are against

2. These Tenents do divert and obstruct the power and practice Absurd. 2. of Godliness: For while the Saints of God are taught, that they are to fight the good fight of Faith; and if they intend to be crowned, they must fight stoutly, and gain the victory, knowing, that they fight not against sless and blood, but against spiritual wickedness in high places, and that therefore they are to take unto them the whole Armour of God: Therefore they knowing that this warfare is spiritual, and against spiritual enemies, and that the weapons both offensive and defensive are also spiritual; therefore they ought always spiritually to watch and stand upon their guard, lest their subtile and cruel enemy the Devil take them unawares, or by his Stratagems surprize them. For he is that old crafty Serpent, that hath innumerable wiles, and while he intendeth one thing, he pretendeth another; and like a cunning Enemy, gives a false Alarm at the one fide of the Camp, while he affaulteth another, or making false fires or shews he seemeth to march away, when in the dark of the night he intendeth to fall on. So lest the Christian should be watchful and prevail, he laboureth by false Teachers, which are the Magicians and Sorcerers in the Mystery, to draw them from their vigilancy, by possessing their minds with these lying Tenents, that the Devil comes in the shape of a Cat or a Dog to a Witch, and bargains with her, and the rest, that whilst they are set at gaze to look for him in a bodily shape, they are made negligent in their spiritual watch, and so are diverted from the spiritual combate, and thereby the power and practice of Godliness is diverted and obstructed. Therefore we are to give heed unto the counsel of the Holy Ghost; to resist the Devil in his spiritual assaults with the spiritual weapons that God bestows upon us, and not to give heed to old Wives Fables, or the falle Doctrine of Witchmongers, that make us watch for the Devil where he is not, and in the mean time not to relift him where he is, and that is within effectively in a spiritual manner, for he worketh in the children of disobedience, and therefore a Devil within us is more to be feared, than a Devil without us.

3. These Tenents do uphold that horrid, lying, and blasphemous Absurd. 3. opinion, that our bleffed Saviour did cast out Devils by Beelzebub the Prince of Devils: For when they could not deny, nor disprove the plain and open matters of fact, that our Saviour did really cast out Devils, then they devilibly invented and vented, that though he did so, yet it was but by the help of the Prince of Devils, with whom he had a compact, and so wrought by the greater power to over power the less. Concerning which Mr. Glanvil is pleased to Confiderat a tell us this: "In his return to which he denies not the supposition craft, pag. 94, " or possibility of the thing in general, but clears himself by an ap- 96. " peal to the actions of their own children, whom they would not "tax fo severely. But by Mr. Glanvils leave we must affirm, that

1. They supposed that the Devils had a Prince or a Ruler than was able to cast out Devils that were his Subjects, and inferior unto him, to which his answer is: Every Kingdom divided against it self to brought to desolation, and every City or house divided against it self cannot stand. And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself, how shall then his Kingdom stand ? Upon which a most learned Author doth thus paraphrase: "If any King mean to uphold his Kingdom, he will not quarrel and fall out with his "own Subjects, and cast them out, which are doing him service; "fuch divisions and civil diffentions as these will soon destroy his "Kingdom, and therefore cannot probably be affirmed of any pru-"dent Ruler or Prince. And Satans casting out Devils which are "about his business (possessing those he would have possess) "would be such a civil diffention as this, and a breach. From whence he nècessarily concludeth, that either Satan doth not cast out Satan, or else that his Kingdom is divided, and cannot stand. but come to desolation. But Satans Kingdom is not destroyed nor brought to desolation; therefore it is not divided against it felf, and consequently Satan doth not cast out Satan. Of this Vid lot citat. Pallage Theophylats faith : Quomodo enim Demones feipfos efici. unt, quum magis inter se conveniant? Satan autem dicitur adversarime. And to the same purpose is that of S. Chrysoftom: 81 divisus eft, imbecillior factus eft, & perit : si autem perit, qualiter potest alium proficere?

2. Our Saviour faith further : And if I by Beelzebub caft ont devils, by whom do your children cast them out? For as the forecited Author faith: "Why may not I cast out Devils by the Pow-"er and in the Name of God, as well as your Disciples and Coun-"try-men, the Jews among you (who being evil are therefore "more obnoxious to suspicion of holding correspondence with Sa-"tans Kingdom) do, at least pretend to do. When they in the "Name of God go about to cast them out, you affirm it to be the " Power of God, and so do I. Why should you not believe that "of me, which you affirm of your own ? Si expulso (faith S. Hievid Histor in rom) Damonum in filit vestrie Deo, non Damonibue deputatur, quare in me idem opus non candem habeat & causam ? 3. Christ further urgeth: But if I caft out Devils by the Spirit of God, then the Kingdom of God is come upon you or unto you. " But "if it be indeed by the Power of God, that I do all this, then it is clear, that although you were not aware of it, yet this is the time "of the Messias, whose Mission God hath testified with these Mira-" cles, and would not have done so, if it had been a false Christ. So that he seemeth to conclude thus: "You Scribes and Pharifees seem "to acknowledge, that there are real possessions by Devils, and that they may be thrown out, either by the Power of God or the power of Satan. But I have shewed the absurdity, that Satan doth not cast out the Devils his obedient Subjects that are doing "his service; and therefore that what I do must be by the finger of God, and that must certainly denote unto you, that his "Kingdom is come, and that I am the Mellias.

bonfe, and spoil his goods? except he first bind the strong man, and then he will spoil his honse. "My dispositifing Satan of his goods, and turning him out of those whom he possesses, is an argument "that I have mastered him, and so that I do not use his power, but "that mine is greater than his, and imployed most against his will, "and to his damage. Quod enim (as faith a learned Father) non chrysell. in loc. potest Satanas Satanam ejicere, manifestum ex dicis est : sed quoniam negz alim potest eum ejicere, nisi priùs eum superaverit, omnibus eft manifestum : Constituitur ergo quod & antea, cum manifestiori abundantia. Dicit enim : Tantum absisto ab hoc quod utar Diabolo Coadjutore, quòd prælior cum eo, & ligo eum: Et bujue conjectura est, quod vasa ejue diripio. Et sic contrarium ejue quod illi tentabant dicere, demonstrat. Illi enim volebant oftendere, quod non propria virtute ejecit Damones. Ipse autem ostendit, quod non solum Demones, sed & corum Principem ligavit : quod manifestum est ab bis qua fatta sunt. Qualiter enim Principe non vitto, bi qui subjacent Damones direpti sunt ?

5. Lastly he concludeth: He that is not with me, is against me: And he that gathereth not with me, scattereth abroad. " And it's proverbially known (faith Dr. Hammond) that he that is not on ones fide, that brings Forces into the field, and is not for a mans " affiltance, he is certainly for his Enemy, engages against him, doth "him hurt; and consequently my casting out Devils, shews that I "am Satans declared Enemy. By all which arguments he flatly overthrows the falle supposition of the Pharisees.

4. These Tenents do overthrow the chief Articles of the Chri- Absurd. 4. stian Faith, to wit, the rational and infallible evidence of the Refurrection of Christ in the same individual and numerical body in which he suffered: and this we shall elucidate in these particular Considerations.

1. The whole strength of the Christian Religion consists in the certainty of Christs Resurrection in his true and individual body. For as the Apollie argueth: And if Christ be not rifen, then is our 1 Cos. 15, 14, preaching wath, and your faith is also wain: yea and we are found 15, 16, 17, 18. false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God, that he rai-sed up Christ: show he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ risen. And if Christ be not vision, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins. Then also they which are fallen asteep in Christ, are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. So that all these sad consequences must needs follow, and the whole Christian Religion be found a lye, if Christ be not truly risen from the

CHAP.

2. And though the Apostle do enumerate sufficient Witnesses of his Resurrection and appearance after death, and that he was feen of Cephas, then of the Twelve, after that he was feen of above five hundred Brethren at once, then of James , then of all the Apoflee, and laftly of himself: Yet all this Cloud of Witnesses will prove little, but dissolve into vapour, if there were or are either Angels or Spirits, that in their own or assumed bodies, may appear in his form, shape, and likeness, and to fight and tangibility be in all properties as his body was, to have flesh and bones, the print of the nails in the hands and feet, and to eat and drink.

3. That the Apostles held the opinion, that there was Apparitions and Spirits that did shew themselves in any form or likeness, is most plain and evident; for when they saw Christ walking upon the Sea, they supposed it had been a Spirit or Apparition, for the Greek is edilasus, and cryed out. That is, either being cruelly affrighted and amazed, their Phantalies did represent strange thoughts in their minds: or else (which doubtless was the truth) feeing Christ walking upon the Sea, which they thought was not possible for a man to do without finking or drowning, they in great fear cryed out, and forgetting his former Miracles, did vainly suppose it some Spirit that had made an apparition in his likeness. But it is most strange, that the Disciples that had seen and been eyewitnesses of so many Miracles wrought by him during his life, and those that accompanied him at his death, as the renting of the veil of the Temple from the top to the bottom, and the Earth-quake. Mar. 15. 38. and the renting of the Rocks, and the Darkness that was over the Land from the fixth hour unto the ninth; and that after his Refurrection the Graves were opened, and many bodies of Saints that flept arose, and came out of the Graves, and went into the holy City, and appeared unto many, of which they could not be ignorant a beyond all wonder, but that doubtless the heavenly Father had so ordained it in his infcrutable Wifdom, that the infallible certainty of his Refurrection might be more evidently and punctually proved. For at his next appearing, when they were all together, Je-luk 24-37 fus himfelf flood in the midst of them, and said unto them, Peace

It is (I say) most wondrous strange, that after all these they could

Spirit in his form and likeness. And most especially, considering that his Sepulchre was made sure, the stone sealed, and a Watch set to attend it, of which they could not be ignorant; and likewise the certain affirmation and evidence of the two Maries, from the mouth of the Angel, and their own fight who worshipped him, and held him by the feet, and Peters finding the Sepulchre empty, and his appearing to the two Disciples that went to Emman, and yet for all this at his next appearance, not to be fatisfied, but to be terrified and affrighted, and to suppose they had seen a Spirit, is be unto you. But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed they had seen a Spirit, there the word is wrothen. Now the cause of this supposing that they had seen a Spirit, doubtless was because as St. John tells us, That Jesus twice had stood in the midst of John 20.19,26. them, the doors being flut, because of the Jews, and therefore they could not possibly imagine, that he could have a body that could make penetration of dimensions, not considering that he had an omnipotent Power, and therefore nothing could be impossible unto him. Though it may well be conceived to be done without Vid. Rolloc. in penetration of dimensions, because by his Almighty Power he might Joh. 20. inperceptibly both open and that the doors, and to enter, and fuddenly stand in the midst of them, and no humane sense be able to discernit. But however it was, the Disciples did not then believe that it was Christ with his individual body in which he suffered, but either (as some of the Fathers believed) that it was his very Spirit that he yielded up upon the Cross, that appeared in his figure or shape, that was so pure, fine, and penetrable, that it could pals through any Medium, though never to denfe or folid: or fome other Spirit that assumed his form and shape, which is far more probable and found. But howfoever it was, they did believe that it was some Spirit in his likeness, and not he himself, in that very numerical body in which he suffered, as may be apparently gathered from the words of Thomas called Didymus, who strongly affirmed, faying: Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my fingers into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe. 4. To the grounds of all these doubts our Saviour gives a demonstrative and infallible solution, which we shall explain in these particulars. 1. He doth not at all deny the existence or beings of Spirits; neither that Spirits do not, or cannot make visible apparitions: but doth grant both. 2. But he restrains these apparitions to those inteparable properties that belong to Bodies and Spirits, that is a body (that is to fay an humane body) hath flesh and bones, but a Spirit hath neither, as Christs or humane bodies have; and therefore faith a learned Person upon the place: Docet se non esse Rolloc. ubi supri Spiritum hoc modo: Spiritue, inquit, non habet carnem & offa.

Ego verò, ut conspicitis, habeo carnem & ossa: Ergo ego non sum Spiritus. Vide igitur ex sensu & sensibilibus : sensu nimirum visus ; sensu tatius : ex visibilibus & tratiabilibus se corpus esse non autem Spiritum edotet. Per sensum enim sides & gignitur & consirmatur. So that whether Spirits be taken to be corporeal (and so appear in their own bodies) or to be incorporeal (and so to appear in assumed bodies) yet are they both to sight, and especially to feeling, not as humane bodies are that have flesh and bones. So that however they do, may or can appear (for it must be considered in that latitude, else our Saviours argument would not be irrefragable and convincing) they to the relifibility of touching cannot be as flesh and bones are, for they to the sense of touching do resist, and are folid, but so the bodies of Spirits in what appearance soever have not, nor can have, otherwise our Saviours argument falls to the ground, and proves nothing. 3. He confirmeth this by the Disciples own proof of feeling and touching the prints or scars of the nails in his hands, and the print of the wound in his side, and thereby manifelteth that it was he himself, and the very same individual body in which he suffered, by which Thomas his great unbelief and doubting was unanswerably satisfied, by putting his fingers into or upon the very prints of the nails, and by putting his hand into or upon the wound or fear upon his fide. And therefore though the same power that raised him from the dead, and rouled the fealed stone from the Sepulchre, could have perfected his body to be without prints or scars of the wounds; yet did the divine Wisdom referve them, thereby to cure the infidelity of his Disciples, and undeniably to confirm the truth of his Resurrection; to which Pid. catendo: purpose one said well: Ibi ad dubitantium corda sananda, vulnerum funt servata vestigia. And the further to establish and settle their Faith, he took a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honeycomb, and eat before them; all which concluded him to have a true body, and that he was not a Spirit: from whence we draw these conclusions.

1. That howfoever Spirits do or may appear, they have not. or can have such a body, that in respect of tangibility, is as slesh and bones. For slesh and bones are dense, solid, and make sensible refiltance to the touch; but the bodies of Spirits in their apparitions are not, nor can be fo. For as we deny not but there are and may be apparitions in any figure or shape, yet they can but be as the figures and shapes in the Clouds, which are often feen, and cause much wonder, though (we suppose) many of them may be rather attributed to the assimilation made in mens fancies, than to their real existence in those forms or shapes. So they may be as shadows, or the species of bodies that we see near or afar off, or as the images that we behold of our felves and other things in Mirrours or Looking-glasses: which though without doubt they be not non entities, for nullius entis nulla eft operatio, but these affect the senses, which is an operation or action; yet do they all casily yield to the touch, and have no firmness nor solidity, as flesh and bones have; and this is all that can be justly deduced from our Saviours argumentation.

2. Either we must believe that our Saviours argument is of no force and validity, which is blasphemous and horrid to affirm or imagine, he being the way, the truth, and the life, and in whose mouth there was found no guile, and thereby overthrow the whole foundation of the Christian Religion: or elle we must for certain believe that Spirits whenfoever they appear have no fuch folidity or relistibility as to touch, as flesh and bones have. And consequently that what strange things soever we may by sight and touch take to be the apparitions of Spirits, that to touch have the folidity of flesh and bones, we must conclude that they are not Spirits, but must be some other kind of Creatures, of whose nature and properties we are to inquire; for doubtles (as we shall manifest hereafter) there are many strange Creatures, that for their rarity or strange qualities, have been and are mistaken for the apparition of Spirits. For the Disciples doubts must still have remained unsatisfied, if Spirits could appear to have bodies to touch, of that folidity that fielh and bones are of, and then the truth of our Saviours Refurrection falls to the ground, and the Christian Faith is vain.

3. Therefore that Demons do appear in the shape of Dogs, Cats, and the like, and do carry the heavy bodies of Witches in the air, do fuck upon their bodies, and have carnal copulation with them, must suppose them to have bodies as solid and tangible as slesh and bones: and so overthrow the main proof of our Saviours Resurrection, and consequently the very foundation of the Christian Religion; For if Christ be not risen our faith is vain, we are yet in our fins, and are of all men most miserable, as having only hope in this life, and no further. And this is sufficient to shew the horrid and execrable absurdity of these opinions; which objection Mr. Glanwil calls spiteful and mischievous, but durst not undertake the solution, but with a plain shuffle leaves and over-runs it, as indeed being too hard a morfel for his tender teeth.

And if any do object (as we have heard some do) that three Angels did appear unto Abraham in the Plains of Mamre, as he sate Gen. 18. 1, 4. in the Tent-door, and did eat and drink, and washed their feet, and therefore that they had fielh and bones; to that we return

1. It is a very froward and perverse way of arguing, to make one place of Scripture to clash with another, when they ought all to be expounded according to the Analogy of Faith, and it is a perfect Harmony which we ought to labour to find out and reiovce in. 2. It is no perfect way of arguing from the Dispensations in the time of the Patriarchs and Prophets, to those that God useth now in the time of the Gospel; for so they might argue that God should answer by Urim and Thummim, because he did so in the time of the Levitical Priesthood, but that is now ceased, and the Apostle tells us: God at sundry times, and in divers manners spake in times past Heb. 1, 1, 2. unto the Fathers by the Prophets: But in these last days he hath foken by bie Son unto us. So though God did then vouchlafe to make himself manifest unto the Patriagens by the visible appearance of Angels: yet it is no rational confequence that he doth fo now in these days.

2. It is manifelt, that though they were in number three, yet it 1bid. v. 17. is true that it was Jehovah that appeared unto Abraham, and Jehovah said, Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do. Now we do not find that the word Jehovah is communicable to any Creature, but only to God himfelf; and therefore the best Expo-sitors do understand (notwithstanding what Pererius doth say to the contrary) that one of them was Christ the second Person in the Trinity, who after was to take humane nature upon him, and therefore did so appear.

4. However these Angels had with them the assistance of a divine and omnipotent Power, which cannot rationally be affirmed of the common and ordinary apparitions of Demons to Witches, and therefore doth conclude nothing against what we have laid down before.

That divers places in Scripture have been mif-translated thereby to uphold this borrid Opinion of the Devils Omnipotency, and the Power of Witches, when there is not one word that fignifieth a familiar Spirit or a Witch in that fenfe that is vulgarly intended.

Oncerning the words in the Hebrew and Greek, that are commonly alledged to prove these things, they have been wrested and drawn to uphold these Tenents by those Translators that had imbibed these Opinions, and so instead of following the true and genuine fignification of the words, they haled them to make good a pre-conceived Opinion, and did not simply and plainly render them as they ought to have been. Which hath been observed by wir. 1.2. p.89. divers, especially by Wierus, who got the learned Masins (a great Hebrician) to interpret them, of which he hath given a full ac-ACandle in the count, which was followed by Mr. Scot. As also Mr. Ady, who hath perfectly rendred them according to the Translation of Junius and Tremelline, and likewise Mr. Wagstaff hath prettily opened the most of them. So that our attempt here might seem to be superfluous and unnecessary, and may be condemned of arrogance and vain confidence. To which we reply, That it is far from us to compare our selves with those Learned men that were Masters of the Hebrew and Greek Tongues, being in comparison but a Smatterer in those Languagues, yet have in our younger years both studied and taught them to others, and as far as we undertake, we hope we need not fear the centure of the most rigid Critick; intending to note some things that others have omitted, and to handle them to the full, which others have but done briefly. And this we shall prosecute in this order.

1. We shall take the words in the same order as they are recited in Deuteronomy, and the first mentioned is in these words: There shall not be found among you that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire. Now here we shall not enter upon that great Dispute, whether they really burned and sacrificed by burning their children unto Moloch, or that they only dedicated them to that Idol, by making them pass through the fire; but examine the reafons, why those that practised this kind of Idolatry are ranked amongst the Diviners or Witches, and were to have the same punishment, seeing it is no where mentioned, that these used any kind of Divination at all, and these we conceive to be the chief.

1. The Lord had promised his People to raise them up a Pro- Reas. 1. phet from amongst their Brethren like unto Moses, and that therefore they should hear him, and not go after other Gods or Idols. And therefore he sent them many and divers Prophets, of whom they were to inquire: fo likewise they gave the Priest order to in. Vers. 14, 15. quire by Urim and Thummim, by which he gave answers, and therefore they were to hearken to his Ordinances, and not to follow after other strange Gods: For the Nations that he cast out had hearkened unto Observers of times and Diviners, but they were not to do fo. And though these that caused their children to pass through the fire unto Moloch, used not Divinations, yet it was a wicked and abominable Ceremony, and the use and end of it to lead the people to Idolatry, and therefore is reckoned amongst the rest.

2. They are solely condemned, because the end of all their Di- Reas. 2. vinations and their other Feats, were only to draw and lead the people to Idolatry, and to serve other Gods. For it is manifest, that all ways and forts of Divination were not in themselves evil and unlawful, for else Astronomy it self, that foretels the Entrance of the Sun and Moon into fuch Signs, and when Eclipses will happen, and the like, should be forbidden too, but they were not: so that the chief reason why they were condemned, was sub ratione fink, non medii, in regard of the end, and not of the means used, because all their Divinations, and other Arts, Crafts, or Feats, whether performed by natural or artificial means, or otherwise, had still for their chief and principal end the leading of the people unto Idolatry, and the serving of other Gods, which was above all things abominable and hateful unto God, who is a jealous God, and will not give his glory to graven Images. And therefore all Idol-Priests, or those that lead the people to Idolatry, are in the Scripture-sense Witches, Diviners, and the like. And that all Divinations were not forbidden, is most clear from that of Solomon, Prov. 16. 10. as Arias Montanas translates it : Divinatio Juper labits regis : and that of Isaiab, where the Lord threatneth to take away the staff 16. 3. 2. and stay of Jerusalem, that is, the mighty man, and the man of war, the Judge, the Prophet, and the prudent, Divinum, five Sagacem. For it is the same word, and from the same root Divinavit: For as Avenarim, Schindler, and others say, Est verbum medium, nam modd in bonam, modd in malam partem accipitur, of which Tremellius faith this: Sagacitas, id est, consultissima prudentia in rebm dijudicandie, pracavendie, & veluti addivinandis : nam vox

The Question

Hebrea media est sive anceps, que non tantum in malam partem ac-Exod. 22. 20. cipitur, sed ettam in bonam. Therefo e was the Law so strict, that if any facrificed unto any other God, fave unto the Lord only, he was utterly to be destroyed, much more those that lead and incited the people to serve and sacrifice unto other strange Gods, were to be rooted out.

2. Is the word we have named before, to wit, DDP, Kofem Ke famim , Divinans divinationes : which, as we have shewed before, was taken in bonam & malam partem, and is by the Septuagint fitly rendred malleviple mallen, vaticinans vaticinium, and is almost with all Translators rendred in that sense and propriety: so that we need not complain, that it is one of them that is mis-translated; but concerning it, we may note these things.

1. That there were and are almost innumerable ways, whereby men have undertaken to Divine and foretel things to come, some of which were by lawful means and ways, as all prudent, fagacious, and experienced men have done, and may do. Some by vain, trivial, foolish, and groundless ways, as by the flying of birds, their noise and motion, and so of beasts, by casting lots, dice, and the like, which have no causality or efficiency in them at all to declare things to come, but were meerly vain and superstitious, with which the Heathen World doth still abound, and they are not yet totally eradicated from amongst Christians. The most foolish of which was this, That when the Philistins had kept the Ark of the Lord seven months, they called the Priests and the Diviners, to know what to do with it, and they advised them not to send it away 1 Sam 6.1, 2. empty, but to fend five golden Emerods and five golden Mice, and to take a new Cart and two Milch-kine, upon which there had com'd no yoke, and to tye them to the Cart, and to bring their Calves home from them, and to lay the Ark in the Cart, and the Jewels of Gold to be put in a Coffer by, thinking that if they went up towards Beth-shemesh that was the Israelites Coast, that if they did so, then it was he that smote them, otherwise that it was but a chance that happened unto them. And this in respect of the Priests and Diviners was only a casual conjecture at Random, though God in his Providence did order it according to his Divine Wildom for the best. Like unto this was that mentioned by the Prophet, a Consulter with his staff, as also that of Exekiel: Ezek. 21. 21. For the King of Babylon stood at the parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination : he made his arrows bright, he consulted with images, (Teraphim) he looked in the liver. And besides these there were others that pretended Visions and Revelations from their Gods or Idols; but how far either Idols, or Devils. or their Priests could truly foretel things to come, is very doubtful and hard to determine, of which we shall have occasion to speak hereafter.

2. We are to note, that though there were never fo many ways of Divination used, and whether the means used to predict by,

were natural or supernatural, lawful or unlawful, frivolous and superstitious, or taken upon sound and rational grounds, yet were they all wicked and abominable, because they were used to withdraw the people from those Ordinances that God had appointed to give answers by, and to lead the people to inquire of vain and lying Idols, and their Priests, and thereby to commit Idolatry; and to whatfoever the means were, the end was wicked and damna-

2. Moreover, what answers soever the Priests forged and gave (for it is manifelt, that the Idols gave none at all 3 for they had Plat. 115,4,8c. mouths and spake not, ears and beard not, eyes and saw not, seet and walked not, neither was there breath in their nostrils) were nothing but lyes and conjectures of their own deviling, and there an Idol in the Hebrew is fometimes styled 717% nihilum, and therefore faith the Prophet: The Prophets prophesse lyes in my Name, I fent Jer. 14. 14. them not, neither have I commanded them. They prophesie unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart. Unto which the Apostle alludeth, when he saith : We know that an Idol is nothing in the world, and that there is 1 Cor. 8. 4. none other God but one. That is, that an Idol taken abstractively, without regard to the matter of which it was made, as gold, filver, stone, wood, or the like, which were natural substances, or respect to the figure or shape which was artificial, and the work of the PId. Dr. Hammond. in Inc. Work-man, it was plainly nothing, and had no real existence as a God or Idol, but only in the Phantasies and minds of the blinded Worshippers; for it neither could truly foretel, nor act any thing of it felf, but all that was done, was the lyes and inventions of the Priests that served them, and got their living by that villanous and lying trade. For God by the mouth of his Prophet doth fet down the true difference of the true God, that could infallibly foretel and declare things that were to come, from the falle Gods and Idols, and doth challenge them in this manner: Shew the things that are 16.41.23. to come hereafter, that we may know that ye are Gods: yea do good or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together. From whence it is plain, that the only relieur to distinguish betwist the Divinations that are given forth by the Spirit of God in his Prophets or Apostles is, that they are plain, certain, and infallible, and the event never faileth to answer the Prediction, but those that are given forth by Satan and his juggling and lying Ministers, are always ambiguous, doubtful, and perplex, and evermore deceive fuch as trust in them, as was manifest in Abab, when all the false Prophets bade him go up to Ramoth Gilead, and prosper, yet there was he flain. And as they never truly foretel things to come, fo neither can the Idols do good or evil: all that is, or ever was done, was performed only by the cunning, confederacy, and juggling of the knavish and deceitful Priests; and therefore the Prophet admonisheth Gods people not to be afraid of them; For they cannot let. 10. 5. do evil, neither also to it in them to do good.

4. We are to note, that if a Sign or Wonder foretold do come to pass, we have no Warrant to ascribe the bringing of it to pass either to Devil or Witch, for the Lord telleth us this: If there Deut.13.1,2.3 arise among you a Prophet or a Dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a fign or a wonder. And the fign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he fooke unto thee, Saying , Let us go after other Gods (which thou halt not known) and let us ferve them : Thou shalt not hearken to the words of that Prophet or that Dreamer of dreams : For the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether you love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your foul. So that what Divinations or Predictions soever be foretold by any, or what signs or wonders foever be brought to pass, if the persons that work or foretel them, perswade us to serve other Gods, or go to seduce us to Idolatry, we are not to follow them, but are to know that by them the Lord doth prove us, to try if we love him with all our heart, or not. And if there were no other means to distinguish a true Miracle from a false, yet were this infallibly sufficient to instruct and di-

5. We may note, that of all the several sorts of Divinations pretended, and of all the acceptations of this Hebrew word in all the Bible, there is nothing that doth imply any fuch kind of killing Witch, as is commonly imagined, nor none such as make a visible League with the Devil, nor upon whose bodies he sucketh, or hath carnal copulation with them, nor no fuch as are really changed into Cats, Hares, Wolves, or Dogs; which was the thing we under-

3. The next word we are to confider, is 130, which Avenarine, Schindlerus, Buxtorfius, and Mr. Goodwin do derive from 124 obnubilavit, nubem obduxit, item præstigie usus est. From whence we

i. That the most of all the Translators do some render it by one word, and some by another, that no certainty can be gathered from them at all, as though it did fignific divers and many forts of these kinds of Augury, Divinations, or juggling Feats, when in reason we cannot but suppose that it only comprehended some one fort, and not so many as the Translators do ascribe to it. The Septuagint render it for the most part and out the for the most part and out the fine of the gint of the gin and sometimes क्राक्टिक्सक्रिकारक, which are all of different derivations and fignifications; some others render it other ways, as, neg; auspi-Pid. Pogelot. cabimini, neg, observabitis horas, nevaticinemini, ne ominemini, nec observet somnia & auguria, nec qui exercet Astrologiam, &c. Now from such a diversity no man is able to draw a positive cer-

2. They do not keep to one word appropriate to the Hebrew. which if they had not forgotten themselves, they would have done, and not lest it uncertain. For Arias Montanus in the 19.0f Leviticus, versi26. renders it, neg; prastigiabamini, and in the 2. of Isaiah, vers. 6. translates it, augures ficut Philistim. In Isa. 57. 3.

he calleth them Filis Auguratricis. And in the 27.0f Jeremiah, v.9. Et ad Augures vestros. Also Micah 5. 11, he renders it Prastigiatores. Now what great difference there is betwixt any tort of Augury, and Juggling, or Leger-de-main, is known to any of indifferent reading. And the rest of the Translators are far more wild, and more wide. And Junius and Tremellius, who of all others, one might have thought would have been more circumspect, vet fall into the same incertitude; for in Deut. 18. 10. he renders it Planetariae, but in the place before-cited in Leviticus, they render it, neg; utemini prastigiis, though in the Margent they, mend it, with this note, neg; ex nubibue conjicite, wel ne temporis observationi plue aquo tribuite. And Ifa. 2.6. Et prastigiatores sunt ut Polischtæi.

3. But if there be any certainty in adhering to the primitive fignification of the Hebrew root, that plainly intendeth obnubilavit, that it is without question most fafe and genuine to translate it Planetarins, to which the most learned Andreas Masins (as he is quoted by Wierns) doth incline in these words: Veteres Hebrao- vid, To, wir. rum dicunt id verbum ad eos proprie pertinere, qui temporum mo- de mag. Jus. menta superstitiose observant, atq, alia fansta rebus gerendie, alia (1.1.91. Of Divin liba) infausta prascribuns. To which agreeth Mr. Thomas Goodwin, conto. p. 183. faying: But of all I approve those who derive it from 120, a "Cloud, as if the Original fignified properly a Planetary, or Star-

4. But however thus far there is no word found, that fignifieth 2 Witch in the sense we have laid down, nor any such person that hath a real familiar Spirit, either in them, or attending upon them, ready visibly to appear at their beck, this is not yet to be found out.

4. The next is שְׁנְיִנִישׁ from the root שׁמִים nichesch, auguratus est, observavit, angurium fecit, which our English Translators have erroneously rendred an Inchanter, which it no way figuifieth, nor hath any relation unto, having in the next verse named a Charmer, as though Inchanter and Charmer were not all one, when the word plainly (as Mr. Goodmin and the learned Massas do confess) importeth an Augur or Sooth-fayer: That is, such an one, who out of his own experience draweth observations of good or evil to come: of which we may note these things.

1. The most of all the Translations given us in the Plolyglot, do render the Hebrew word by auguratus eft, and so understand it to be an Augur or Sooth-fayer, a Conjecturer, or an Observer, from whatfoever it be that he taketh his observations, as from the flying noise or motion of birds or beasts, looking into their entrails, and the like, and from thence taking upon them to foretel good or evil to come, or what was hidden and secret.

2. The Hebrew word will, is by the Septuagint rendred aloudua, Augurium, Auspicium, that is, an Augur, an Observer, or a Conjecturer, which Lufber translatech : opn De bp Woegell gelebtep achte.

CHAP. And in the Low Dutch Bible it is rendred agreeable thereto; and the French render it aux Oifeaux, from the word Oifeau, Auk, Volucris; and the Italians render it Auguropifta, which are all to one purpose, and no difference at all, and so the gross mistake of our English Translators is most apparent, that make it to be an Inchanter or Charmer, to which it hath no relation at all.

3. This Hebrew word is taken in bonam partem, heedfully to consider, mark, or observe, as Laban said, when he laboured to stay Jacob from going from him: I have learned by experience that the Lard hath bleffed me for thy fake. So that though Labans heart was not upright toward Jacob, nor he a sincere Worshipper of the God of the Jews; yet so far had the Lord convinced him, by the faithful and industrious service of Jacob that he had experienced. and by tryal found that the Lord had bleffed him for Jacob's fake. And the same word is used, when Joseph said : Is not this the cup Gen. 44. 5, 15. wherein my Lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he divineth, or maketh tryal? And again: Know ye not, that fuch a man as I can certainly divine, or make tryal? And though Pererius hath made a large Dispute about this matter, and reciteth the Opinions of many Authors concerning it; yet it is manifest, that Joseph knew his Brethren before, and had caused the Cup to be put into Benjamins Sack, and that all this was but done in a just and prudent way, the better to prepare his Brethren for his revealing of himself unto them, and so had reference to no unlawful conjecturing at all, though it was plain, that he had the special gift from God of interpreting of Dreams, and foretelling of things that were to

4. It is too hard a task to enumerate all the several ways that the Heathens used, by observation to foretel things to come, and more difficult to declare all the subjects from whence they gathered the figns of their Predictions. The chiefest that the old Romans used, were Augurium quast Avigerium dicum, vel Avigarium, ab avium scilicet garritu quem auspicantes observabant : And so Auspicium, quasi Avispecium, ab avibus spectandie. And these observations were taken, either from the feeding, flying, or noise of the birds. So they had their Haruspices, Harioli, and Haruspicina, which was derived ab haruga, hostia, ab hara in qua concluditur & servatur.

5. But all these forts of Observations, Guessings, and Conjectures may be confidered these three ways. 1. Some of them are natural, rational, and legal; as is the Prognostick part of the Art of Medicine, Political Predictions of the change, fall, and ruine of Kingdoms, States, and Empires. Some Civil taken from the course and carriage of men, as when one feeth a rich young Heir that followeth nothing but vice, luxury, and all forts of debauchery, it is easie to foretel that his end will be beggery and misery. Some from the due observation of beasts and fowls, which live sub dio. may eafily conjecture the alteration of the weather. And so by obferving the change, or colour of the Stars and Planets, the Clouds and Elements, may easily foretel the change of weather. And we find that these predictions from the Signs gathered from natural causes, are not condemned by our Bleffed Saviour, who faith: When it ie Manth. 16. 2,3. evening, ye say it will be fair weather, for the skie is red. And in the morning, it will be foul weather to day, for the skie is red, and lowring. And again : When ye fee a cloud rife out of the West, straight. Luke 12. 54. way ye say, there cometh a showre, and so it is. And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, there will be heat, and it cometh to paß. 2. There are some conjectures that are falle, groundless, and superstitious, as were, and are all the predictions taken from the feeding, flying or noise of Fowls, or the figns appearing in the intrails of Beafts; for in all fuch like, there is no connexion betwixt the cause and effect, and they therefore are falle and vain, and this was one of the reasons why they were forbidden amongst the Jews. 3. There were some that in regard of their use and end were wicked and Idolatrous, and in this respect all divinations and predictions are wicked and unlawful, if they be used (as was and is yet among the Heathen) to lead the people unto, or confirm them in, the worship of Idols, and false Gods. And from all this it appeareth, that yet we can find no proper or fit word for such a kind of Witch whose existence we have denied and are disproving. 5. The next word in this place of Deuteronomy is TWO Umechascheth, which our Translators render a Witch, but in what sense or propriety, I think few can conjecture, for it comes from the Hebrew root, nus Coscheth, which Avenarine rendreth, Fascinavit, effascinavit, but Schindlerus translates it, Prastigias, maleficia ant magiam exercuit, mutavit aliquid naturale ad afectum oculi, ut alind appareat quam eft. And by Buxtorfine it is rendred, Preftigia, and the derivations from it through the whole Old Testament, which is the most certain propriety of the word, as these following confiderations will make manifest.

1. That the most of the Translators in rendering this word whether in this place, or in others, have been very inconstant, and one place not agreeing with another, as Arias Montanus in this place gives it maleficus, but in Exodus he makes it, Prastigiatores, 22 and in the 22 and 16 of the same Book he makes it Prastigiatricem; and in another place where the very same word is used in the He- Chron. 2. 33. brew, he faith of Manafeh, & Praftigite vacabat. And yet in ano- 6. ther place, he rendereth the very same word veneficia. So uncer- 2 Kings 9, 22; tain was this learned Man, and so inconsiderate in his versions, wherein he ought to have had a more special care. Now Tremelliw in all the places named before, doth use the words Prastigiatorem, and the words from the same derivation in the Latine, which sheweth certainty and constancy.

2. The most of all the translations in the Polyglott, do render this word doubtful and various: As maleficus, mague, prastigias faciens, Incantator, and the like, which are all dubious, and various, and no certainty can be produced from them. Only those we call the septuagint do keep close towords of the same signification, deducted all from sapuanes, which properly doth fignifie no more than venenum, poison, though the circumstances do manifest that they were but Jugling and Imposture. And the High-Dutch, Low-Dutch, French and Italian translations do all render it with the same uncertainty, so that nothing sure can be drawn from them.

3. But to leave these uncertainties, it is manifest that this word doth fignifie as Burtorfim and Schindlerm do render it, for they are best to be trusted, because they are not guilty of contradiction as the most of the others are; That is, a Jugler, or one that by himself, or the help of his Confederates, doth by fleight of hand, and fuch like conveyances perform strange things to the astonishment of the Mofes and Aa- beholders. "And therefore doth Mr. Goodwyn tell us this: A Witch. ron 1. 4. 6. 10. " properly a Jugler. The original (he faith) fignifieth fuch a kind of Sor-

"are. And these Dr. Willet saith (speaking of Pharaohs Magici-"ans) were Prastigiatores, whom we call Juglers, which deceived "mens senses. And though learned Masses (speaking of those that " Nebuchadnezzar called to interpret his dream) doth make this ob-" jection, that if this word be translated Prastigiatores, he doth not "see, anidilli ad explicandum somnium adserre sua arte potuissent, "qua tota fallax & deluforiaeft : Yet is this of little or no force at all, for the rest that were called, were as well Impostors as these if not more, and the King and those with him knew not certainly (as the event shewed) that they could perform any such matter, but was ignorant of the manner of their delufions and cheats, and was only led by common rumour and belief, grounded upon the vain and lying boalts that such fort of people are apt to give out of themselves, and the wonders they pretend to perform. So that from his and his Courtiers opinions of either the matter, or manner, of what they pretended to do, will no consequence be drawn, from what they truly could do, because belief and action are two dif-

4. But that this word doth bear this fignification is manifest from the things they performed, for in Exodus they are called and they in like manner cast down every man his rod and they became ferpents: not that their rods were really transubstantiated into true serpents as Aarons was, for that could not be done but by an Omnipotent and Divine power, which they had not; It was only done as Juglers do, seemingly, by sleight and cunning, and so had an appearance of true serpents, but were not so indeed; or elfe in making a flew to throw down their rods, they fecretly conveyed them away and threw down serpents in their stead, as vulgar, that those kind of deceivers can do strange things, but in trial and experiment they are found to be Cheaters and Impomight easily be done by sleight of hand, as we shall shew more fully

5. That this is the genuine meaning of this word is manifelt from the circumstances of some other places duly weighed, and compared together: for one text faith as our English Translators haverendered it, And it came to pas when Joram saw Jehn that he said, Is it peace Jehn? And he answered, What peace, so long as the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel, and her witchcrafts are so many? Now why they should translate it witchcrafts, cannot well be imagined, except it were to draw the Scriptures to speak according to their preconceived opinions, for the word used there is the same we speak of, to wit, וֹנְשֶׁפֶּוֹים , which though Arias Montanus rendereth, & venesscia ejus, that according to the Latine signification is but poylonings, or poylon making, which doth not intimate Witchcraft in that sense that is vulgarly understood, which Tremellius properly renders, & prastiga ejus: and Luther renders it by the words Toeberge, and to doth the Low Dutch: Though the proper High-Dutch word for praftigiator, a Jugler, be Bautfler, which is as Calepin tells us, that Prastigia funt incantationes, delusiones, cujusmodi sunt, que manuum quadam dexteritate alia apparent quam revera funt. Now what whoredoms or fornications had Jezebel committed? Spiritual whoredomes, and not Carnal ones; for she had her self gone a whoring after Idols, and strange gods, and as much as in her lay drew the people of I frael into the same whoredoms, and for this it was that so fearful a judgment fell upon her. And what Witchcrafts (if they must be so called) had she prachifed or followed? Was it any other than in fetting up, maintaining, and defending the Priests of Baal and of the groves, who prachiled several sorts of divination, jugling, impostures, and delufions, wherebythey were feduced and blinded to follow and worship the false god and Idols? And from this it is plain that all her Witchcrafts were only impostures and delusions whereby the people were led unto idolatry: and so the true signification of this word is a deceiver and an impostor, and intendeth no other kind of Witchcraft at all. And in the same sense must the word given by those we call the Septuagint which is The page dutile, Pharmacavel venena sua, her poysons, that is her deceits and delusions that the fet up by the lying Divinations, Juglings, and Impostures of the Priefts, by which the people were seduced, and blinded and poyfoned with the filthy Doctrine and practice of Idol worship. And in the same sense must the words be taken in the Revelation where the words ouquanda, ouquands, odquands are used. For the Text faith: And a mighty Angel took up a stone like a great milstone, and Chap. 21.8. cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great City 18, 23, 11, 9, 24, Babylon be theown down and shall be found no more at all. And after: For thy merchants were the great men of the earth: For by thy forceries were all nations deceived. These words are spoken mystically of spiritual Babylon, in which Antichrist ruleth, who (as the A-poltle faith) fitteth in the temple of God, and exalteth him felf against all that is called god; and this is he whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and figns, and lying wonders. So that it is plain that his working being by lying wonders, his Merchants must needs be lyers and deceivers, and it is these Sorceries, impostures and delusions by which all Nations are deceived, and caufed to err: and so is no other Witchcrast but meer lying, delusion and imposture. And to this purpose doth Dr. Hammond Paraphrase it in these words; speaking of the destruction of Babylon: "And "three eminent causes (he saith) there are of this; First, Luxurv "which inriched so many Merchants, and made them so great. Se-"condly, feducing other people to their Idolatries and abominable "courses by all arts of infinuation. And thirdly, the persecuting "and flaying of the Apostles and other Christians. And in the same

lusion by which people are led from the true Doctrine and Worship of Christ, to vain and lying Superstition and Idolatry, and not

6. Thus far we can find no such Hebrew word as signifieth any fuch kind of a Witch as Dr. Cafanbon, or Mr. Glanvill intend. or labour to prove, and therefore we may proceed to the next. Only we cannot but take notice of one other text, that our English Translators have erroneously rendered, and that is this: where sa. muel is rebuking Saul for sparing Agag and the best of the spoil, he faith. For rebellion to at the fin of witchcraft, and flubbornnes to at 1 Sam. 15. 23. iniquity and idolatry: Which Tremellim renders thus : Quin ficut peccatum divinationis eft rebellio: & ficut superfritio & Idola eft repugnantia. And Arim Montanue gives it thus : Quia peccatum divinationis eft rebellio, & mendacium vel Idolum, & Teraphim transgredi, which both are agreeable to the Hebrew word DOP, which figuifieth properly Divination. So that this place noteth, not rebellion against an earthly or temporal King, but against the King of Heaven; and to disobey his command, and to follow our own wills and judgments, and to persevere therein, is as odious and detestable, as to fet up lying Divinations thereby to follow Idols and fallegods: for the following the fancies of our own brains, is to follow the divinations of our own counsel, and to make an Idol. and a Teraphim of our own frail, weak and blind judgments, and to forsake the pure and perfect Law of the Lord, which ought to be a lantern to our feet, and a light unto our paths, and is spiritual rebellion, even as the divinations of Idol-priefts and Idol-worthin

6. The next word in this place of Deuteronomy is וֹחֹבֵר חָבֶּר ... tens incantatione, vel incantans incantatione, aut jumens junctiones, from the root 33 Sociatue eft, junctue fuit alteri, copulatue of, for fo Avenarian renders it. And Schindlerne faith, Incantator, vel qui consortium habet cum Damonibus, consurator, qui incantationibso tationibus multa animalia in unum locum consociat vel congregat, vel ne ladant affociat. From whence we may note thus much:

1. That it primarily fignifieth to joyn together, as in that of Gemesis speaking of the Kings that went to War, All these were joyned together in the vale of Siddim, which is the falt fee. And in ano-Chap. 14.3. ther place, And he coupled the five curtains together; and in the Exod. 36. 14. same sense in diverse other places: by all which it appeareth, that when it is used for incantation or charming, it is because of some conjunction or coupling together.

2. It is very remarkable that in all the translations in the Polyglot, there is no variance, neither do Arias Montanus, Burtorfius, or Tremellius differ at all, and the Greek Translators do agree with them, who render it, inadour inauthi, and the Germane, Low-dutch. French, and Italian Translators do accord herewithal, and it is likewife so rendered in Isa. 47.9, 12. and in other places. So that it is plain it fignifieth such as took upon them by strange words and charms to prevent venemous beafts to hurt, bite or fting, and many other wonderful things; but what they brought to pass, or effected, belides deluding and deceiving of the people and leading of them to Idolatry, is hard to determine, of which we shall speak in

3. There are divers opinions concerning this incantation or charming, why it should be accounted conjunction, or association; and fome, as Schindler as and Bithner, do judge it is because they associate or bring together many Serpents or noylom Creatures into one place, and then destroy them. But this is but a conjecture, for it is by the best learned strongly disputed on both sides, whether charms and inchantments can really and truly perform any such effects, and divers instances and examples brought both ways, some for the affirmative, some for the negative, so that the matter of fact is not certainly known or granted. Others by affociation do underftand, the league or compact made betwixt the Charmer and the Devil by virtue of which such strange things are brought to pass by them, and of this opinion was Mr. Perkins (if that Book of Witchcraft, that goeth under his name, be truly his) who strengthening his conceit with that verse in the 58 Pfalm thought that he had found out an invincible argument to prove the Compact betwixt Witches and Devils, and therefore it is necessary and expedient to examine that text to the bottom to fift out the true translation, and sense of that place, which we shall do at large as followeth in these particulars.

1. Our English Translators render it thus, speaking of the deaf Adder or Alp; Which will not hearken to the voice of the charmers, charming never fo wifely ; and in the margent, or be the Charmer never so cumning, wherethey take no notice of the conjoyning of conjunctions, and confequently none of fuch a league or com-

utentis incantationibus peritiffimi, which piece of Latine were very difficult to put into perfect Grammatical construction, because muffitantium is the plural number, but utentie and peritiffimi are of the lingular, which we shall leave to the censure of Criticks, and give the marginal note that is there added. Surde]id eft, calide agentis adversus incantamenta, ut sequentia exponunt, nam aurem utramq; ab ea obiurari, &c. Of the deaf Adder]" That is to say, that "acteth craftily against the incantations, as the following words do "expound: For the stoppeth both her ears, By fixing one to the "earth, and covering, and stopping the other with her tail; and that Hierome, Augustine, Caffiodorus, and others do fo expound the place. Whether this be true of the Asp or not is much to be doubted, for I find no Author of credit that doth averr it of his own knowledge, and the thing is very difficult to bring to experiment, and the Psalmist might speak according to vulgar opinion, of which there was no necessity that it should be literally and certainly true. Further he goes on and faith, muffitantium] "That is to "fay, pronouncing their incantations to charmher, whispering and "very low; which study of charming, lest any should think that "David doth approve of them in this place, he learnedly useth the "very words of the prohibition, which God laid down Deut. 18. "11. For (he faith) these fascinators in the Hebrew appellati-"on are faid to consociate society, because they apply the society "of the Devil to their arts.

3. Those we call the Septuagint do render it thus: "Hrick in it alice and spain in aftername in the eight Tome of his works princed at Basil 1525, gives two Latine versions to this, the one answering to the Septuagint which is this: Que non exandiet vocem incantantium & venefici incantantis sapienter. The other according to the Hebrew thus, Ut non auditat vocem murmurantium, nec incantatoris incantationes callides. So that this maketh the meaning to be, that the deaf Asp is so cunning in stopping of her ear, that she doth not hear the voice of those that murmur, and mutter charms, though it be a Charmer that uttereth the most cunning and powerful charms: So that here is no regard had to conjoyning or associating either of Serpents together, or of the society of the Charmer and fworn together (it may be that common error and opinion had prevailed fo far with learned Luther, as doth appear by his exposition upon the third Chapter to the Galathians, that he believed that the Witch, and the Devil were in compact, and sworn together) and that were most cunning in that art. But this doth but in a manner beg the question, not prove it, for all will but amount to this, that the Asp cannot be charmed, no not by those that have the greatest skill in the matter of incantation.

4 Luthere Translation of this place is remarkable, which is this, Dals sie nicht hoere die stimme dels Gauberers des Beschwerers der wol hese weren san. Which in English runs thus, That doth not hear the voice of the Magicians or Charmers, the Conjurors or Exorcists, that well conjure can. And agreeable to this is the translation of the Low-Dutch. So that the sense is, that the deaf Asp stoppeth her ear against the voice of the Charmers, those that have

5. The French Translators render it thus: Lequel n'écoute point la voix des enchanteurs, ni du charmeur fort expert en charmes. Which will in no point hear the voice of the inchanter, nor of the Charmer that is expert in charms. And this proveth nothing at all of joyning societies, nor of compacts. The Italian version giveth it thus, Accioche non oda la voce de glivoce incantatori, del venefico incantante incantationi di dotto. In English thus, Which doth not hear the voice of the inchanter, of the Witch (if that be the fignification of the word venefice, a poyloner) inchanting with the incantation of the learned: And this is most near the Hebrew of all the rest, and beareth thus much, That the Asp doth not hearken to the voice of the inchanter, of the Charmer which useth the charms that were framed and conjoyned by a learned Clerk: so that if asfociating be comprised, it must be understood of the framing and joyning of the charms, which doubtless was the composure of those that were very learned, especially if they work by a natural

6. But now we come to the Hebrew it felf, which Ariae Montanus renders thus, Que non audiet ad vocem mussitantium: jungentis conjunctiones docti. And in the margent thus, Que non obtemperabit voce incantantium, incantantis incantationes sapienter. Which we may thus English, Which hearkeneth not to the voice of the mutterers, of the learned joyner of conjunctions. And the other thus; Which obeyeth not the voice of the Charmers, of the person charming charms wisely. So that it may mean, that the Asp hearkeneth not to the voice of those that mutter or musticate the charms of the Charmer that doth wisely use them, or of him that is a wife Charmer. But it is needless and improper to make an half period at mussitantium, for then there will be no coherence in Grammatical construction betwire the former and latter part of the verse: and therefore according to the order of Grammar, it should be rendered thus: Que non andiet ad vocem mussitantium incantationes, doll incantantis. And fo the meaning is plainly this, that the Asp doth not hearken to the voice of those that mutter the charms of a learned Charmer. And so there is no intimation of association or compact either one way or another, but it doth meerly imply that the Asp doth resist and frustrate the charms of the mutterers that use them, though they be wise in the using of them, which doubtless is the most genuine rendring, and the true meaning of the place : or elfe it may be thus aptly translated : Qua non audiet ud vocem mussisum conjuntiones jungentis dotti; That is thus, Which hearkeneth not to the voice of those that mutter the Conjunctions of a learned Joyner. So this way the sense will be, that the resisteth the Charms, or Conjunctions of the learned Joyner or Framer of them, and consequently that it hath not respect, eithe r to the affociating or gathering of the Aspsinto one place, oran affociation or compact betwixt the Charmer and the Devil, which are both beg'd, and too far fetcht, and cannot be intended properly in this Metaphor. But it (if thus Translated according to Arias Montanus) referreth punctually and properly to the cunning and wise composure of the letters and words used in the Charm, that if they had been never so cunningly contrived, or joyned together by those that had the greatest skill of all others in framing and compoling of charms; yet were they utterly inefficacious against this kind of Serpent. And so we conclude this, having as yet found no such Hebrew word as signifieth a Witch in the vulgar sense and common acceptation.

7. Another word that followeth in this place of Deuternomy is אוב requirens Pythonem, which what it meaneth is more obscured, and erroncoully translated, than any of the rest. And this our English Translators have ignorantly or wilfully, but however erroneoully rendered in all the places where it is used, to be one that hath a familiar spirit. From whence note these things.

I. This word, as Buxtorfius, Schindlerus, and Avenarius observe, hath two fignifications, the one is, uter vel lagena, the other Python, and so faith learned Masius, significat vero vox Ob utrem vel lagenam; "From whence the Jewish Nation did call those Devils "which did give answers forth of the parts of Men and Womens "Bodies, Ob, and in the plural number Oboth; As it is only once for "bottles used in that of Job, Behold, my belly is as wine that hath no vent, it is ready to burft like new bottles. And to the same purpole fpeaketh Schindlerne in these words: "From thence it sem-"eth to be called NR Pytho, because those that had it, or were " possessed with it, being pust up with wind, did swell like blown "bladders, and the unclean spirit being interrogated did forth of their "bellies give answers of things past, present, and to come, from whence " alfo they were called infare luvben ventriloqui, speakers in the belly, or out of the belly. So that in the sense of these men, it was a Devil or Spirit that spoke in them, as though they had been essentially and substantially possess with a Demon; so prone were they to ascribe all things (almost) unto the Devils power, not considering that they had no other Devil, but that of Imposture and Delusion, as we shall shew anon with unanswerable arguments.

2. The most or all the translations in the Polygiott do render it Pythonem, vel spiritum Pythonis in this place of Denteronomy, and other places . But what is to be understood by Python, or the Spirit of Python is as difficult to find out, as the meaning of the Hebrew word Ob, because it must be digged forth of the rubbish of Grecian lies: For some will have it to be derived from the word ระที่ คับ สมเด็กเอร , à con sulendi & interrogandi u fu. But that they were called so rather from the Epithete given to Apollo, who (as the Poets fabled) did soon after Deucalions flood slay the Dragon Python, willer, fo called a willes, quod eft putrescere, because he was faid to be bred of the putrefaction of the Earth; and so he was called Apollo Pythius, and those that kept the Oracle at Delphos, and gave answers, were called Pythii vates, and the Oracles Oracula Pythia: as may be seen in Plutarch, Thucydides, and Lucian: and Suidas and Hefschius fay, Iller dicebatur etiam Damonium cujus afflatu futura pradicebant, & haibone, è ventre bariolantes : From whence Pythius Apollo came because of slaying the Dragon, nam aldena putrescere significat, ut est in bie carminibus.

-Sic inde precațus Apollo est: Putrescas tellure jacens campoq feraci. And from hence were the Pythian Games instituted : Neve operie famam posset delere vetustas,

Ovid. Meta

Instituit sacros celebri certamine ludos Pythia perdomita serpentis nomine dictos. Though, if we will believe Natalis Comes and some others, it was not a Serpent or Dragon that Apollo flew, but a man whose name Applicated 4. was Python, and his firname Draco, and from that Victory spollo 362 was called Pythius, and those that kept his Oracle at Delphos were called Pythios vates, Pythian Priests, or Diviners of Python. So that all that can be gathered from hence is, that to have the Spirit of Python, was to undertake such Divinations, as the Priests used at the Pythian Oracle at Delphos, and that was no more in truth and effect, but Cheaters and Impostors.

3. Those that we call the Septuagint expressing the manner of the performance of this kind of Impolture do (as Massus confesseth, and is true) constantly call them by the name of spaceutions, because they did speak forth of their Breatts or Bellies, that was by turning their voices backwards down their Throats, which some of the Latines imitating the Greek word have not unfitly called them ventriloques, that is, speaking in their Bellies. And that there were fuch in ancient times is witneffed by Plutarch, who faith, speaking of the cealing of Oracles, thus: "That it is alike foolish and or difference "childish to judge that God himself, as the Engastrimuthoi, (that 691, "is to fay, the Gents hariolating forth of the Belly) which in times past they did call Eurycless, now Pythones, hiding himself in the Bodies of the Prophets, and using their mouth and voice as instruments, should speak. From whence we may note these things. 1. That in Plusareh time who lived in the Reign of Trajan, there were of these persons that could speak (as it were) forth of their Bellies. 2. That though Plutarch was a very learned, sagacious person, yet he cither knew not, or else conceased the manner how thele ventriloquifts performed this speaking in their Breafts or Bellies, it being nothing but a cheat and artificial impo- 10 Profet. de fture, as we shall shew anon, of whom his learned Translator Adre- defil. orani.

anns Turnebus, and of these vanities speaketh thus. "Therefore "(he faith) we condemn all forts of Divinations which are not re-"ceived from the facred writings, and do judge them to have been "found out, either by the craftines of men or the wickedness of "Devils; but we rejoice to our selves that being Divinely taught, "we here see far more than the most learned Plutarch did, who be-"held but little light in this his disputation of the defect of Oracles. 3. We may note that these words (that is to say, the Genis hariolating forth of the Belly) which we have inclosed in a Parenthelis. are not found in the Greek written by Plutarch, but are only added as the conjecture of Turnebus. 4. Plutarch doth hold it childift to believe that God doth hide himself and speak in the belly of these couzening Diviners, and therein though an Heathen was wifer than many that profess Christianity now, who believe it to be some Spirit, when it is nothing but the cunning Imposture of those perfons, that by use have learned that artifice of turning their voices back into their Throats and Breafts. 5. As to matter of fact it is manifest that in the time of Plutarch there were those that practifed this cunning trick thereby to get credit or money by the pretence of Predictions and Divinations, and such an one doubtless was the Woman at Endor, and the Maid mentioned in the Alls of the Apofiles, of which we shall speak presently.

Also Tertullian a grave Author, affirmeth that he had seen such Women that were Ventriloquists, from whose secret parts a small Antiq. lett. 8. voice was heard as they fate, and did give answers to things asked. And so Caline Rhodiginne doth write that he often saw a Woman Ventriloquist at Rhodes, and in a City of Italy his own Country, from whose secrets he had often heard a very slender voice of an unclean Spirit, but very intelligible, tell strangely of things past or prefent, but of things to come for the most part uncertain, and also often vain and lying; which doth plainly demonstrate that it was but an humane artifice, and a deligned Imposture.

Hift. I.

"But most notable is that story related by Wierus from the mouth "of his Sons who had it from the mouth of Adrianus Turnebus, "who did openly profess that before-time he had seen at Park a "crafty fellow very like Euricles mentioned by Aristophanes, who "was called Petrus Brabantius, who as oft as he would, could feak from the lower part of his Body, his Mouth being open, but "his Lips not moved, and that he did deceive many all over by "this cunning, which whether it be to be called an art, or exerci-"tation, or the imposture of the Devil is to be doubted. And "further relateth that at Paris he deceived a Widow Woman. "and got her to give him her Daughter in Marriage, who had a "great Portion; by counterfeiting that his fo speaking in his Breast, "or Belly, was the voice of her deceased Husband, who was in "Purgatory, and could not be loofed thence, except the gave her "Daughter in Marriage unto him: By which deceitful knavery "he got her, and about fix Months after, when he had spent all

But while that he telleth him that he "ought rather to think of the Soul of his Father, than of his "Fame, or Death; upon the suddain while they speak together a "voice is heard imitating his Father's: Which voice although Bra-" bantins did give out of his Belly, yet he did in a wonderful man-"ner counterfeit to tremble: But Cornutus was admonished by this "voice, into what state his Father was faln by his injustice, and "with what great torments he was tortured in Purgatory, both for "his own, and his Sons cause, for that he had lest him the Heir of " so much ill gotten goods, and that he could be freed by no "means, unless by a just expiation made by the Son, and some con-"fiderable part of his goods distributed to charitable uses unto "those that stood most need, such as were Christians made Cap-"tives with the Turks. Whereupon he gave credit to Brabantins, "with whom he discoursed, as a Man that was to be sent by God-"ly persons to Constantinople to redeem the prisoners, and that he was "fent unto him by Divine Power for the same purpose. But Cor-"nutus, though a Man no way evil; and although having heard "these things, he understood not the deceit: yet notwithstanding "because of the word, that he should part with so much money, "made answer that he would consider of it, and willeth Braban-"tius to repair the day following to the same place. In the mean "time being staggered in his thoughts he did much doubt, in re-"spect of the place, where he had heard the voice, because it was "shadowy, and dark, and subject to the crafty treacheries of Men, "and to the Eccho. Therefore the next day he leadeth Brabants-"we into another open plain place, neither troubled with shadows "nor bulhes. Where notwithstanding thesame tale was repeated, "during their discourse, that he had heard before: This also being "added, that forthwith fix thousand Franks should be given to "Brabantine, that three Masses might be said every day, to redeem "his Father forth of Purgatory; otherwayes that there could be "no redemption for him. "had been so beguiled, and cheated of his money besides, that "within few days after he died for plain grief, and so followed his "Father to know the truth of that thing of him. But to make this more plain and certain, we shall add a Story of a notable Impoltor, or Ventriloquist, from the testimony of Mr. Ady; which we have had confirmed from the mouth of some Courtiers that both faw and knew him, and is this: "It hath been (faith he) "credibly reported, that there was a Man in the Court, in King "James his days, that could act this imposture so lively, that he "could call the King by name, and cause the King to look round "about him wondering who it was that called him, whereas he that "called him stood before him in his presence, with his face towards "him:but after this Imposture was known, the King in his merriment "would fometimes take occasion by this Impostor to make sport up-"on some of his Courtiers, as for instance; There was a Knight "belonging to the Court, whom the King caused to come before "him in his private room (where no Man was but the King, and this "Knight, and the Impostor) and feigned some occasion of serious "discourse with the Knight; but when the King began to speak, "and the Knight bending his attention to the King, fuddenly there "came a voice as out of another room, calling the Knight by name, "Sir John, Sir John, come away Sir John; at which the King began "to frown that any Man should be so unmannerly as to molest the "King and him: And still listning to the Kings discourse, the voice "came again, Sir John, Sir John, come away, and drink off your "Sack; at that Sir John began to swell with anger, and looked "into the next rooms to fee who it was that dared to call him fo "importunately, and could not find out who it was, and having "chid with whomsoever he found he returned again to the King. "The King had no sooner begun to speak as formerly, but the "voice came again, Sir John, come away, your Back stayeth for you.

"troubled him, till the King had sported enough. I my felf also have feen a young man about 16 or 17 years of age. who having learned at School, and having no great mind to his Book, fell into an Ague; in the declination of which he feemed to be taken with convultion-fits, and afterwards to fall into Trances, and at the last to speak (as with another small voice) in his Breast or Throat, and pretended to declare unto those that were by, what finful and knavish tricks they had formerly acted, or what others were doing in remote places and rooms. So that prefently his Father and the Family with the neighbourhood were perswaded that he was possest, and that it was a spirit that spoke in him, which was foon heightned by Popish reports all over the Countrey. But there being a Centleman of great note and understanding his Kinfman caused him to be sent over unto me, to have mine opinion whether it were a natural distemper ornot. The Father and the Boy with an old cunning Woman (the made creature to cry up the certainty of his possession, and the verity of a spirit speaking in him) came unto me, who all appeared to my judgment and best reason fit persons to act any designed Imposture. The Father having been one that had lived profulely, and spent the most of his means, being sufficiently prophane and irreligious: The Boy by his face appearing to be of a melancholy complexion, and of a subtile and crafty disposition; the Woman cunning, who would have forced me to believe whatfoever she related, thinking to impose upon me as she had done upon others. I presently judged it to be neither natural disease, nor supernatural distemper, but only knavery and Imposture, and so made the Woman filent, and told her she was a cheater, and deserved due punishment, and that what she told, were the most of them lies of her own inventing; and told the Father and the Son that I could foon cast forth all the Devils that he was possesfed with; but then I must have him in mine own custody, and none of them to come near him nor to speak with him. A long time I expected to have seen him in one of his fits, but his Devil was too timerous of my stern countenance and rough carriage. Well after they three had consulted together, the Lad by no means could be gotten to stay with me, no not for that night, nor be prevailed with again to be brought into my presence; but away they went the Lad riding behind his Father, and when about a quarter of a mile from the Town the Father turned the Horse to come back again unto me, the Lad leapt from off the Horfe, and run away crying from the Townwards as fast as he could. They went that night to a Popith House where were concourse of people sufficient, and many tales told of the Divinations of the spirit in the Boy, but not one word either of me or against me. Soon after the Gentleman that was of kin to the Boy came over, and I gave him satisfaction that it was a contrived chear, and after he returned, he would have prevailed with them to have fent the Boy to me, but by no means could effect it; and so he never after gave any regard unto them, and foonafter it vanished to nothing.

"At that Sir John began to stamp with madness, and looked out,

"and returned several times to the King, but could not be quiet

"in his discourse with the King, because of the voice that so often

I my felf also knew a person, in the West-riding of Torkshire, Hist. 4. who about some forty years or above, to have made sport, would have put a Coverlet upon him, and then would have made any believe (that knew not the truth) that he had a child with him, he would fo lively have discoursed with two voices, and have imitated crying and the like. And also the said person under a Coverlet. and coming upon all four would fo exceeding aptly, even to the life, have acted a skirmish betwirt two Mastiffs, both by grinning, marling and all other motions and noise, that divers understanding persons have been deceived and verily believed that there were two Mastiss under the Coverlet, until their eyes have convinced them of their error: So delutive may are or cunning be, being feconded by ufe

I also have sometimes seen a person that leved in southwark near Hift. 5. London, who holding his lips together, and making no found or noise at all, would notwithstanding have, by the motion of the muscles of his face, and the agitation of his head and hands and other gesticulations of his Body, made any of the beholders understand, what tune he had modulated in his fancy, which was very strange and pleasant to behold, and that which I could not have believed if I

We might hereunto add the Story of the pretended fleeping preacher, who had drawn many into admiration and belief that he did it either by Divine inspiration or vision, and yet was but a voluntary cheat and a delutive Imposture, as may be seen at large in Stones Chronicle. We have been thus tedious in giving thesexamples, that it may appear how improperly Men fly to supernatural causes to solve effects by, that are and may be performed by natural means; and that Men need neither fetch a Devil from Hell nor a Soul from Heaven to folve these effects that mens cunning. art and craft are able to perform. 4. Next the more fully to explain this we may consider the place in the Alls which is rendred thus, Hadiozlu rivalizeda wreina Hidan G of which the learned and judicious Isaac Casaubon faith thus: " An "ancient interpreter readeth Misura, and the Syrian version ren-"dereth spiritum divinationis. It may be quere'd, seeing Apollo is Notice All. A. "understood, why S. Luke doth use the Epithete of him rather than "the proper name: And the reason is because the ancients did call "the Ventriloquists nusuras Pythonists. And it is plain that it was Divination, that was telling of secret things, whether past, present or to come, that the Maid pretended and undertook: for the text faith, Which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying, parrevepire, that is, by Vaticination. Beza in his Latine translation faith in his Marginal Notes, "That that Spirit of Oracling,

A Candle in the dark, p. "was only an expression alluding to the Idol Apollo, which was "called Python, and gave answers unto them that asked, namely, "by the Priests that belonged unto it, of which Idol the Poets "feigned many things; so that they that had the Imposture of Divi-"nation were said by the Heathen to be inspired by the spirit of "Apollo. And in this place of the Ads, S. Luke speaketh after the "common Phrase of the Heathen, because he delivereth the error "of the common people, but not by what instinct the Maid gave "Divinations; for it is certain that under the Mask of that Idol, "the Devil plaid his deluding pranks, and this spirit of Apollo was "nothing, but as much as to lay, an Imposture, or deluding trick " of the Devil practifed by the Priests of Apollo. So much faith Beza, who plainly expoundeth, "That that Spirit of Divination or "Oracling, was only a Devilish deluding Imposture, and not a fa-"miliar Devil as many do fondly imagine: And whereas it is " faid in the verse following, that S. Paul did cast that Spirit out of "the Maid, it was, that he by the power of the Gospel of Jesus re-supposed Witchcrast. CHAP. VI.

"buked her wickedness: so that her Conscience being terrified, she "was either converted, or elfe at the leaft dared not to follow that Luke 7. 47. 8. "deluding craft of Divination any longer: as when Christ did cast 2 "out seven Devils out of Mary Magdalen, it is to be understood " that he did convert her from many devilish sinful courses in which " she had walked. Thus far learned Beza and Mr. Ady, who both feem to understand no other Demon in the case than only a crafty and devilish Imposture and Cheat, and most certainly it could be

5. But to come to the stress of the business, these things are to be considered. 1. Some thought that they were really, and essentially possessed with an evil spirit that did speak in them and gave forth answers, and this is the most common, though most false opinion: which if it were true, it maketh nothing for those familiars that are ascribed to our Witches, for by that they mean a visible Devil without them in the shape of a Dog, a Cat or the like, and both these are equally absurd and false, as we shall shew anon. 2. Some thought that an evil spirit ab extra did but work upon their minds, and so inspired them with these Divinations, and this feems to have been the opinion of Plutarch and some others of the Heathen. 3. But others (which is that which we affirm) did hold that they were but counterfeiting deluding Impostors, and what they did was only by Ventriloquy, Jugling and confederacy, and that all their pretended Divinations and predictions, were nothing but lying conjectures and ambiguous equivocations. But to open it fully we must conceive that they did pretend and take upon them to foretel and declare things to come, which notwithstanding were but false forgeries and lies: for if they had really had any certain foreknowledge of things to come, then when Jehn was made King, and in subtilty pretended to sacrifice to Baal, and fo got together all the Priests to facrifice, if these base, lying, cheat. 2 Kings 10. ing Impostors had really had any skill in Divination, then they might have known, that their calling together was not truly to advance their Idolatry, but to take away their lives; and it may fafely be concluded that those that could not foresee the danger threatning their own lives, could not truly foretel contingent effects to others; and though the Scripture give us many such examples as these, yet to eschew prolixity this may suffice to evince that all their pretended predictions were nothing but conjectures, or lying forgeries.

And as they did take upon them to foretel things to come, so this Woman of Endor, and in likelihood the rest, did pretend to do it by railing up, or cauling to ascend those that were dead to give anfwers of the things demanded.

Now therefore the state of the question will be, whether this Woman had really a familiar or supernatural spirit that gave her answers, or that the raised such an one, or that only she was a deceiver and Impostor that could cast her self into a Trance, and so

speak in her Breast, or that she had a place contrived for the purpose (as they had at the Oracle at Delphos) by which means she could speak, as in a Bottle or hollow cavity, and had other Confederates sutably sitted to accompilish her design. Here we shall only speak as to the significancy of the words relating to this matter, and shall handle the History of the matter of sact elsewhere: And in the sirt place we allow and grant that she had the cooperating power of the Devil, in her mind and will, leading her to take upon her to forcted things to come, of which she was utterly ignorant: so that we grant her under a spiritual league with the Devil, as all wicked persons are, but we deny that she had any other familiar spirit, but only the spirit of delusion and Imposture, as we shall make good by these arguments.

1. Because the word sometimes signifieth the persons pretending to be skilful in this sort of Divinations; for so the Woman saith unto Saul: Behold thou knowest what Saul hath done, how be hath cut off TIDATI Pethones, that is, the persons that pretended, and practised that kind of Divination. And so again in that of Islath: And thy voice shall be INF sicut Pethons as the voice of one that useth this kind of Divination. So that it is clear that the act is asserbed unto, and was personned by the persons practising this couzening craft, and not unto a familiar or Devil.

2. Sometimes it is taken for the means that they pretended they performed it by, as in Sauls deluded and despairing sense; for he saith, Divina quaso mish 3183 in Pythone, vel per Pythonem, and cause to ascend whom I shall name unto thee. So that he vainly thought that she could call up, and make to ascend whomsoever he should name, so blind and deluded was he when the spirit of the Lord was departed from him, and was justly delivered up to believe lies, because he had not received the love of the truth.

3. It doth not appear that the had any familiar spirit, or called up any; for the name that is there given her is בעלה אוב Dominam Pythonie vel utrie; the Miltris of the Bottle, or of the Oracle, for Saul saith, seek me a Woman that is Mistris of the Bottle, or of the Oracle, for so it must fignifie, if it be genuinely and fitly translated; and his servants tell him, that at Endor there is a Woman that was Miltrifs of Ob, the Bottle or Oracle. Forthough some translate it mulier habens Pythonem, or as Tremellius, mulier pradita Pythone, it will but reach thus much, that she was possessed of or had in her power, this ob, Bottle, or Oracle, that could be nothing but the fit contrived place to give answers, as they did at the Oracle. For if they meant that she had a familiar spirit in her Belly, then it was possest ofher, more than she could be said to be possest of it. But there is another Text that doth fully agree with this, and will help to explicate it, and is this, speaking of the destruction of Nineveh or the Jewish Nation, and the causes of it: Because of the multitude of the whoredoms of the welfavoured harlot, the Mistrif of Witchcrafts, בעלה בשלה Domina vel patrona, the Miltris, or

4. Amongst all the several ways of Idolatry that Manafeb let up, 2 Chron. 33.6. or caused to be set up, this is one and nuy, of fecit Pythonem, or fecissetq; Pythonem, he made Ob, or Pytho; and though Translators have been much perplexed, and hard put to it, to give a lignification agreeable to their preconceived opinion, yet have they, were it right or wrong, brought it to their minds, though it be utterly falle and erroneous; for Tremellim renders it, instituita; Pythonem, which though pretty near, yet is altogether short of the propriety, and the most of the rest have run quite Counter; but our English Translators the worst of all others, who give it, and dealt with a familiar spirit. When it is plain that this word must be taken in this place, as it is in the third verse of this Chapter, he made groves, fecitq; lucos, because the words are both from the fame root which is They fecit, confecit, perfecit, and fo it is, and must be taken in other places 3 and is especially manifest in these. God Said to Noah, make thee an Ark of Gopher wood, and after, a Gen. 6. 14.16. window fhalt thou make to the Ark. The Pfalmift faith: But our Pfal. 114.2. God is in heaven, he hath done what soever he pleased, and again, To him who alone doth great wonders. We might add forty places 1d. 136.4. more, where the word is used that cometh from this root and hath the same punctual fignification; so that from hence we may conclude, 1. That Manasseh could not make a Devil nor a Spirit, and therefore that the word Ob doth not intend nor bear forth any such matter in true and genuine fignification. 2. That he could not make a Man or Woman, and therefore the word properly doth signifie neither. 3. That he only could make, and cause to be contrived the Groves, in such as order, ar the Idol-Priests might direct, as most fit for them to play their couzening and Jugling feats and delusions in. So he might make or cause to be contrived the partelor or place for the Oracle, and prepare those knacks and implements, wherewith and in which place the Diviner might either by him, or her felf, or with the help of confederates bring to pass strange things, which they made the blind and ignorant people believe were performed by the God worshipped in and by those Idols, or by Demons and Spirits, or the calling up of the dead. When in truth there was nothing at all performed, but either in raptures, feigned and forced Furies, Trances; and thereby lying predictions and ambiguous equivocations were uttered, whereby the people were deluded and drawn unto Idolatry: or by giving dark and obscure responsions by Ventriloquy, speaking in Bottles, or through hollow Pipes and cavities, whereby they did peep and mutter; or lastly by having knavish confederates hidden in fecret, and cunningly contrived places, and fuitably habited to personate those that were desired to be raised up, as is most probable in this Woman of Endor and the forged and pretended Samuel: So that there was no Devil nor familiar but a couzening Knave or a

Quean, more crasty than the Demonsthemselves. 5. That they had no familiar Spirit is manifelt, if we confider the manner how they carried themselves in these cheating actions and performances, for the Prophet tells us thus: And when they shall fay unto you, feek unto makin ad Pythones, unto Oraclers, and unto Wizards that peep, and mutter; If they had a familiar Spirit or Demon, what need they chirp, peep, or mutter? could it not speak loud and plain enough? Yea doubtless it could if they had any such, but it is to conceal their own deceit and knavery, lest it should be found forth and discovered: And without such chirping and muttering they could neither perform their Jugling delufions, nor keep them from being known, and derided. Tremellius his note upon this place is very remarkable: "The Prophet (faith "he) aggravateth the heinous crime of those Witches from the va-"nity of those Divinations, which the very manner of them be-"trayeth: those seducers have not so much wit, that they dare speak "to the people the thing they pretend to speak in plain and open "terms, with an audible clear voice, as they that are Gods Pro-"phets, who speak the word of God as loud as may be, and as "plain as they can to the people; but they chirp in their Bellies, "and very low in their Throats, like Chickens half out of the "shells in their hatching. And this doth plainly declare their knavery and cheating Juglings. The same Prophet in another place speaking of the destruction, and bringing low of Jerusalem he saith:

And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust. And thy voice shall be as of a Pythonist, Ob, oras of an Oracler, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper, peep or chirp out of the dust. The word there, and in the former place used is from the root, TYPY garrivit more avium, he hath peeped or chirped like a Bird. Now this doth plainly allude to these kind of Pythonists, or Oraclers, who in giving their Oracles, or Divinations, did speak out of the ground, that was from hollow Vaults and Caves contrived on purpole for them to perform their tricks in, and such a place as this, called in the Hebrew Ob, did Manasseb make and prepare, And thy speech shall be low out of the dust, like these deceivers who fall into Trances, and lie upon their faces the better to conceal and hide their Impostures, and so do change their voice, and mutter as it were out of the dust, thereby to make the people believe that it is the Demon's or Spirits voice that speaketh in them, when it is nothing but their own counterfeiting. And thy voice shall be like one of these Oraclers, out of a low and hollow place, to whifper and chirp like a Chicken coming forth of the shell, the more to make them believe that it is the voice of a Spirit, and not their own, by craft and cunning altered and changed. Upon which place learned and judicious Calvin faith thus much: "For the voice of them, who be"fore were so lofty and cruel, he compareth to the speech of Py-

"thonists, who when they did utter the Oracles, did give forth I " know not what kind of murmur, from some low and dark place " under the earth.

8. The next word that followeth in this place of Deuteronomy is ורעבי from the root אָן novit, fivit, proprie oft (ut Avenarius inquit) mentie & intellettus. Which word our Translators (contrary to their usual custom) have kept a constancy in, and alwaies have rendered a Wizard, a name (as we conjecture) not improper, for we, in the North of England, call such as take upon them to foretel where things are that have been stoln, or to take upon them to help Men or Goods, that the vain credulity of the common people have thought to be bewitched, we (I say) call them Wise Men, or Wise Women, without regard had to the way or means by which they undertook to perform these things. Divers others do render it sciolue, which is proper and confonant to the former. The other Translations that we have either seen, or were able to understand, are so uncertain, various, wideand wilde, that it were lost labour to examine or recite them; and the word Wizard (though a general one) is the most proper that we can find. But we must conclude, that hitherto we find no such word as signifieth a Witch in that sense we have allowed, and endeavoured to confute.

9. The last word mentioned in this Text of Deuteronomy, is a Necromancer, or one that confulteth with the dead. Now whether this were some special kind of Divination, or but a comprehension of all the kinds, being but in all their several sorts, a leading of the people to inquire of dumb and dead Idols, may be a great and material question. And though no Interpreter or Commentator that we have seen, read, or do remember, do hint at any such matter, but still strike upon the common string, that it should be some kind of Magick, whereby they could make the dead appear, and consult with them: yet not with standing all this we cannot but propose our doubts in these reasons following.

1. Mofes in this Text doubtlefly did not fet down all the particular forts of Divinations and Impoltures used amongst the Heathen, for that had hardly been possible, but the chiefest kinds of them. And this is not rationally probable that he would do it by a Tautology, or repetition of the same thing twice. For inquiring of the dead, or consulting with them, was intended in the word Ob, and the Woman of Endor faid; Whom shall I raise up, or cause to ascend unto thee? Whereby it appeareth that the pretended (and also saul vainly believed, who said; Divine unto me in or by 0b) that the could cause the dead to ascend, and to have anfwers from them of things to come, as is manifest in the Story of the pretended apparition and prediction of Samuel. And so this thing should be twice repeated in this place, which is not probable that Mofes would have done.

2. He doth not forbid these several sorts of Divination only because they were evil and unlawful in themselves (for some of them might be lawful, and performed by natural or artificial means) but because of the thing they all centred in, and the end they all tended to, which was to lead and draw the people to inquire of and to ferve deaf, dumb and dead Idols. For though the Idols were Silver and Gold, the work of Mens hands, and had eyes and faw not. ears and heard not, feet and walked not, mouths and spoke not. neither was there breath in their Nostrils : And though the common people could not but know this, for as Ifaiah faith they were fo blinded that, None confidereth in bie beart, neither is there knowledge or understanding to fay. I have burnt part of it in the fire; yea also Ihave baked bread with the coals thereof, I have roafted flest and eaten it, and shall I make the residue thereof an abomination? fall I fall down to the flock of a tree? Yet notwithftand. ing were they fo deluded by the crafty Impostures, and subtile Divinations of all the several sorts of these Jugling Priests, that they ran to ask counsel at these dead Idols, who (as they fallly perswaded the people) did inspire them, and gave themanswers, when the Idols were all dead things, and gave no answers at all. And this is that consulting with the dead, that all these couzening Priests did draw the people unto, and therefore in general is here forlfai. 8. 19.

3. The words of the Prophet, where he faith [And when they shall say unto you, seek unto them that are Ob or Oraclers, and unto winards that peep, and that mutter : should not a people feek unto their God? for the living to the dead?] do fully prove as much; for the sense must be this: That the people of God ought to seek unto their own God, who was and is a true and a living God, and to his Law & Testimonies, and not to those peepers and mutterers that seek counsel of the dead Idols only; and doubtless this is the true meaning of confulting the dead.

4. This expolition includeth no absurdity, nor bringeth any inconvenience, and is genuine, and not wrested; whereas the other doth hurry in a whole heap of most absurd doubts, questions and opinions. But if in this exposition we be Heterodoxal, we crave pardon, and referrit to the judgment of those that are learned, of

10. Another word that is used in divers places of Scripture is which though Avenarias doth derive from vin film & Don clauft, yet the learned person Mafine faith, Eft autem ali-10 Dan. (1. arum nationum vocabulum, ab Hebraa lingua alienum & peregriv. 20. p. 87. num, usurpatum tamen ab Hebraie. And also the judicious Polanae is of the same opinion, that it is a word strange and foreign from the Hebrew language. The Translators are all so various about the proper derivation and fignification of it, that it were but loft time and labour to recite them: But it is manifest that it was a general word for one that was skilful in all, or divers fores of these Divinations, and might belt be constantly rendred mages; and that for thele reasons. I. It

I. It is the opinion of Masine and Mr. Ady that it is a general A Candle in word, and fignifieth one that bath skill in many of these kind of the arts, (if they may be so called) the latter of which saith thus: "It "is taken in the general tenfe for magar a Magician; that hath one, " or all these crafts or impostures. And the former quoting the sentence of Rabbi Isaac Natar, faith: Hoc nomine vocatos effe ab Hebreit quofuis, qui inter gentes singularem prositebantur sapientiam; prafertin cum en ad superstitionem pertineret.

2) Because that in Exedus 7. 13 those that there are called Hachamim and Mechaffephim, that is sapientes & praftigiatores, as Tremellim renders it, which is most proper and genuine, are there called Hartummim Meneraim, that is Magor Agypti, the Magicians of Algypt; by which it appeareth plainly that it is a general name, and may most properly be rendered a Magician.

CHAP. VI.

3. It may most properly be taken for a Magician, because those that acted before Pharaoh are called by that name, and excepting their oppoling of Moses, and their superstition, it doth not appear that they dealt with unlawful Magick, as we shall prove undeniably hereafter.

1 1. There is also another word which is used in divers places. which is אַרַיִּד muffitavit, he hath muttered, or murmured, and is taken generally for any kind of murmuring for any cause whatsoever, as in this place, But when David Sam that his fervants whi- 2 Sam. 12. 19 spered. And again, All that hate me, whisper together against me. Pfal. 41. 7. And in another place: Fuderunt submiffam orationem, a low whifpering prayer. In which places it is taken for any kind of low speaking, whilpering or muttering. Of this we may observe these things. 1. Sometimes by a Metonymie it is taken for a low and modelt speech, the art of Orarory, or Eloquence, as Isaiab 3. 3. & intelligentem vel peritum eloquentia, and sometime for an ear-ring inauri, as in the 20. verse of the same Chapter. 2. It is also ascribed unto Charmers or Inchanters as in the Psalm, That doth not hearken unto the voice of the charmers : Where it is Plat. 48.6. plain that all Charmers were whileperers and mutterers, but not on the contrary, that all whifperers or mutterers are Charmers.

3. And whereas our English translation readeth it, Surely the Eccles 10. 11. ferpent will bite without inchantment, and a babler is no better; It may as well be read, as Arise Montanns translates it, Si mordeat ferpens in non susurro, vel absq; susurro, If the Serpent bite without histing, or sibilation. And schindlerus to the same purpose: Si mordebit serpens absq; incantatione, vel murmure, id est sibilo. And to Avenarine : Si mordeat ferpens absq, susurratione, id est absq; fibile. And though Tremelline, and the whole troop of Translators do render it, as our English Translators do, yet that will not make scase. for it would inferr that as a Serpene will bite except it be charmed, so will a babler do also. But who ever heard of a bablers being charmed? So that truly confidered that cannot be the fense of the place.

But if it be taken exactly according to the Hebrew, then the fense runs thus, If the Serpent bite without, or in not hiffing, and excellency is not to him that hatha tongue; that is, The Serpent doth hurt with his biting, without making a noise with his tongue, but a babler doth make a noife, but effecteth nothing, or speaketh

4. There is another Text in Jeremy which is commonly render-Jerem 8. 17. ed thus: For behold I will fend ferpents, cockatrices among you, which will not be charmed, and they shall hite you, saith the Lord. But it may be as fitly read, To whom there is no hilling, and they shall bite you. And whether way soever it be read, the sense is good; that is, their enemies shall be so sierce and cruel, that no words can stay or appease their fury ; or that they shall be so sly and cunning, that they shall destroy you, before they speak, or give you warning: And whether way foever it be, there is a pronoun in the Hebrew which is superfluous, athing that is usual in that

5. But if in both places it be taken for charming, yet will it not prove the being and existence of such a kind of Witch, as we have denied and confuted; nor doth it shew any fit appellation for such

12. Moreover there is another word as much mistaken, and as fallly translated as any of the rest, and that is UT, Inflammatue est, stammescebat, and is understood a shining brightness, as in the Plaim: Who maketh his Angels spirits: his ministers staming sire. And in another place, & inflammabit sos dies veniens , The day cometh that shall burn as an oven. From whence we may note these

ו. From this root doth come שחץ Flamma, Metaphorically (as Schindlers saith) a polished and shining piece of Metal, as a Sword orthe like. But Avenarius tells us, it is, Flamma rutilans, lamina fulgens & vibrans; as, And he placed at the East of the garden of Eden, Cherubims, and a flaming or bright finning sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life. And in a-Nahum 3.3 nother place, The horseman lifteth up the bright sword, and the glittering spear. Both places plainly shewing that it signifieth Metal To polithed, that when it is thaken in the light, or thining of the Sun, and moved quickly, it doth then glitter like a red and shining

2. There is also the word unt Involvit, velavit, arcanum, and the like which the vulgar Latin do attribute to Pharaohs Magicians, when our trauslation saith, And they did in like manner with their inchantments : It is & fecerunt similiter per sua arcana, thinking the word there had been derived from pan arcanum, when it is from 277, Flamma, lamina, a polisht and bright piece of Metal.

3. In all the places of Exodus where mention is made of the Magiclans, that they did in like manner with their inchantments, the word is Danga which if truly rendered, is this: And they did in like manner with their bright, glittering lamens, or plates of Metal. And how the Translators could hale it by head and shoulder to signifie Inchantment, cannot be conjectured; but because the Magicians are there called, sapientes & prastigiatores, Wise Men and Juglers, they vainly thought that they wrought by a fecret compact with the Devil, and so all must be done by their imaginary Witchcraft and inchantment, when it is plain that what they did was by natural Magick, and fleight of hand, and not by Diabolical Magick at all. But let them thew us any one place in all the Old Testament, where any of the derivatives from this root, are translated Inchantments, but only in these places of Exodus, and we will yield the whole cause.

13. There is also another Text which we have omitted of purpole until now, which our English Translators do, according to their usual manner, thus render: And they shall feek to the Idols, ifai. 19. 3. and to the Charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the Wizards: In which there is a word not used in that sense in all the Old Testament besides; of which place we may note these things.

I. The word there in doubt is DN, Lenis, lenitas, and it oft becometh an Adverb, leniter, pedetentim. The root שַנְאָ, leniter inceffit, Avenarine faith it is not used in the plural number, and signifieth Inchanters or Diviners, and is which he rendereth Incantatores; because as some think they do easily and gentilely pronounce their charms.

2. But Tremellins doth translate it thus: Consulent sua Idola, & prastigiatores Pythonesq; & ariolos: And giveth this note. Their Idols, that is to say Devils, that give them answers, especially the Idol of Latona in the Town called Butun over against the Sebenitick mouth of Nilm, of which Herodotse speaketh: where he expoundethalfo divers consultations of these Idols. But how or in what sense he holdesh that the Devils gave answers, except by the lying Impostures of the Priests, he doth not shew, nor Herodotus his Author neither.

3. But this place according to Arias Montanus is rendered thus: And they shall seek unto their vain things or Idols, and to their Diviners (that is this word Haattim) and to the Pythonists, or Oraclers, and to Wizards. But those we call the Septuagint do render this place very odly, as they feldom do elsewhere, which is this: Kai ereparhoun res Jede adoff, ni ra anahuara adoff, ni res in rus pas caroubras ni rds ignacequibus, that is, And they shall ask their gods, and their images, or painted statues, and those that give their voice forth of the earth, and those that speak in their breasts or bellies.

14. There is also another word which is Ton, and fignifieth (as Avenarius faith) Sophus, sapiens in Aftrologia & in auspiciis, augur, aruspex. Rabbi Abraham thinketh it signifieth a Physician, who knoweth the alteration of the body, by the pulle of the arm, or by the urine. And Schindlerus translateth it, a Philofopher, an Astronomer and a Physician, and saith that such were Astronomers Strab Gugraph Astronomers and Physicians amongst the Chaldeans, of whom Strabo faith: "There was a certain habitation appointed in Babylon for "their home bred Philosophers, who were much conversant about "Philosophy, and were called Chaldeans. And further, "that "they were Phylicians that could judge of the passions of the Body, "which dreams did imitate, by the Pulse and urine. And Polanus tells us that it is a Chaldee word because it is found no where else but in Daniel.

15. Lastly there is one word we shall touch more, and that is חֹבְיהַ, fapientia, the wildom of Divine and Humane things, Ma. gick or skil in naturall things; and cometh from the root Sapuit mente, Sapiens fuit, Sapientia præditus eft. And this is that 1 Kings 4 30 wildom that is afcribed to Solomon, of whom it is faid: And Solomons wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of the East coun-

So have we run over all the words in the Old Testament, that can any way concern this subject, and yet amongst them all there is not one that properly and genuinely, without stretching, wresting or mistranslating, doth, or can signific any such Witch or Diviner. that can kill or destroy Men or Beasts, or that maketh a visible compact with a Devil, or on whose Body he sucketh, or that they have Carnal Copulation together; or such a Witch as is or can be really changed into a Cat, Dog, or fuch like, which was the task we undertook in this Chapter. And for the words that are in the New Testament, we shall handle them when we answer the objections made from thence. And therefore we would admonish Mr. Glanvil. and all other candid, and fober persons to beware of saise or mistranslations, and not to labour to establish dangerous and erroneous tenents upon such slippery and sandy foundations: For one falfity once supposed or taken for good, doth bring a numerous train of absurdities at the heels of it.

CHAP. VII.

Of divers places in the Old Testament that are commonly wrested, and fally expounded, thereby to prove apparitions, and the power of the Devil and Witches.

HUS far we conceive that we have sufficiently proved, that there is no word in the Old Testament, that in the original Hebrew, can genuinely and truly be translated, that doth fignifie such a kind of Witch, whose existence we have denied. And now we shall proceed to answer those places in the Old Testament, that commonly are produced, to prove the Devils or the Witches power in those particulars that we have oppugned. And because the whole stresslyeth upon the true interpretation of those places pretended to prove such matters by, we think it convenient and much conducible to the business in hand, to lay down those rules of interpretation, that the most learned Divines have declared and

CHAP. VII.

1. That truly to understand the Scriptures according to the mind of the Holy Ghost that gave them forth, and by whose inspiration they were indited, it is most necessary that we implore the help of that bleffed Spirit, that did reveal them to those that penned them; because, as S. James faith: If any of you lack wisdom, let him James 1. 5,17. ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not. and it shall be given him. For every good gift, and every persett gift is from above, and cometh down from the father of lights, with whom in no variableness, neither shadow of turning. And it is said of the Disciples of Christ: Then opened be their understandings, that they Luke 24.45. might understand the Scriptures. So that all Men whether wife or unwife, learned or unlearned, have need of the teaching and spirit of Christ to open their understandings to understand the Scriptures a and therefore have all men need of faithful and fervent Prayers. that God may enlighten their minds in the understanding of them otherwayes, they are but as blind Men, that go without a guide, and so must needs fall into the Ditch of ignorance and error.

2. That a most due and diligent collation and comparison be made of the several versions, with the Fountains and Originals themselves, that so the truth of the translations may be ascertained. For if an error in this point be committed, all the expolitions and deductions drawn from thence, must needs be erroneous and vi-

3. That there be a due comparing of the Antecedents and Confequents in the context, that the purpole, scope, theme, arguments, disposition and method, may be perfectly and maturely confidered: otherwise the fleighting or omitting any one of these particular points, the whole place may be miltaken, and an error easily

4. There must a due and serious consideration be had of the Phrases and manner of speaking; especially in regard of that language it was first written in: For every several language hath its peculiar Phrases and forms of speaking, which may not be proper in another tongue, the not regarding of which may sooner lead into a great deviation from the genuine sense of the place.

3. That there be a most diligent comparing of the place of the Scripture to be explicated, with others of the same similitude or diffimilitude, For oftentimes one Scripture doth unfold and open another, and one Text doth enucleate and make plain another: Which for want of a due comparison one with another, may occasion the miltaking of the true sease of the place that is to be expounded. 6. And

Rom. 8. 7.

6. And chiefly in explicating any place, regard must be had to the Analogy of Faith . Because the Scriptures do not contradict one another, especially in the Articles of Faith, and the chief points necessary to be believed.

7. There ought a due comparison be made with the judgments and sentiments of other Interpreters, according as the Apostle sith: That no Prophecie of Scripture is of any private interpretation : Which ought to be rendered as learned Beza and Dr. Hammond give it: "No Prophecie of Scripture is proprie incitationis, of a Mansown "or proper incitation, motion, or looling forth; for fothe Greek is, Mas Banoseus & pireras Of which Beza gives this learned note. "The "Prophetstruly are to be read, but so that the gift of interpreta-"tion be begged of God, that the same God may be the Au-"thor and Interpreter of the Prophetical writings. For though a Man have by nature never fo great endowments, of understanding, judgment and reason, or have never so large and ample acquirements, or presume never so highly to be affisted with the Spirit; yet his own single judgment ought not to be relyed upon in the exposition of the Scriptures; but he ought to call in to his aid, and to consider the sentiment and opinion of others. For it is obvious into what dangerous errors the Arrians, Pelagians and Antitrinitarians of old, and the Socinians and Arminians of later years have faln, by making their innate notions and the strength of natural reason to be the chief and principal rules for interpreting of the Scriptures by. And there is hardly any one thing that the Scriptures are more against, or do more condemn, than the too much extolling and idolizing of Humane and Carnal reason. Because the carnal mind to peruna the sagues, is enmity against God, and is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be; of which Beza faith : Probatio cur intelligentia carnie fit mors, quia, inquit, Dei est hoster And again, the Text saith: For it is written, I will de-stroy the wisdom of the wise, The organ of organ, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent; w obner # our # And again, Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? contarto Rhous Tolte. And the words of the Hebrew in that place of Isaiah do signific all that height of wisdom or understanding, that Men either have by Nature, or acquire by Art and Industry. Neither is it safe for a Man to rely upon his own single acquired parts, be they never so vast or great; because in the most ages, the most pestilent Errors and damnable Heresies have been vented and maintained by Men that were of the greatest acquired endowments. And that it is often as vain to presume upon having the guidance of the Spirit, as are the other two, is manifest in the late times of Rebellion and Confusion; where every Man pretending the Spirit, made such wild and extravagant expositions of the Scriptures, as few ages have known before; and is still kept up by the giddy troop of Fanatical Quakers, and the like.

There is another rule which the learned do use, in expounding of the Scriptures, which is often either too far extended, or not rightly limited and applied, which is this; That Men in interpreting of the Scriptures should keep close to the literal sense, if it include not an absolute absurdity. Whereby Allegorical, Metaphorical, Mystical and Parabolical Expositions are not only cried down, but by some even abhorred and detested, which thing ought not absolutely and simply to be approved of; and therefore we shall make it plain in some few particulars.

1. In Historical relations of matters of fact, we ought to keep close to the literal meaning, and not to deviate a jot from it, otherwise we should overthrow the best part of the Christian Faith. and destroy the chief foundation of Scripture truths. But not withstanding this, though we ought to hold to the literal sense in respect of the matter of fact, yet we are not always to be bound to the bare letter in the mood, means or manner of the performance. As may be plainin these examples. 1. It is apparent that our Saviour Christ cured the Man that was born blind, and the means and manner is described: He spat on the ground and made clay of John 9.6, 7. the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay. And faid unto him, Go washin the pool of Siloam (which is by interpretation, Sent.) He went bis way therefore and washed, and came feeing. Now as to the matter of fact, that the Man born blind was cured and had his fight restored, is a truth according to the sense of the letter; and that the manner, which was by spittle and earth made into Clay, and his eyes covered or anointed with it. and washing in the pool of siloam, was also literally true, is manifest. But it were absurd so far to stick to the letter, as to believe that clay, and spittle, and washing in the poole siloam, were true and real natural means to produce that effect; no, that were abfurd, and therein the literal sense is not to be followed.

2. Again concerning Ahab, thus much is literally true in matter of fact that he was perswaded to go up to Ramoth-Gilead 1 Kings 22.19. by his false Prophets in whose mouths there was a lying Spirit. 20, 21, 22, 23, But the manner there declared of fending the lying Spirit into their Mouths, cannot rationally be presumed to be true in a literal sense, but in a Metaphorical; for that the Lord was set on his Throne, and all the Host of Heaven standing by him, on the right-hand and on the left, must needs be a Metaphor taken from an Emperour or a King that fits on his Throne, and all his Counfellors, Princes, Estates and Officers about him, to deliberate and consult what is to be done. And this is the highest and most apt Metaphor that the supream Majesty of Heaven and Earth can be represented by; not that in the literal sense it must be believed to be acted just in that mood and manner, but as the most appolite Metaphor that can be found to express the proceedings of the Heavenly Majesty by, and that for these reasons. 1. God is Infinite and is every where by his Power, Essence and Presence, and therefore cannot literally be said to be comprehended in any locality, but after a Metaphorical sense and expression. For the Jerem. 23: 24. Prophet saith: Do not I fill Heaven and Earth, Saith the Lord?

1 Kings 8: 27. And as Solomon consesses the sait will God indeed dwell upon the earth? Behold, the heaven, and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee: how much less the house that I have builded? 2. God who is only wise, and before whose eyes all things lie open, and naked, cannot litterally be said to consultor deliberate, or to ask his creatures how a thing shall be done or brought to pass, because his wisdom is, like himself, Instinite, and need ask counsel of none, and therefore must the manner of the performance of the deceiving of Ababs Prophets needs be Metaphorically understood, and not literally, which is the thing that we would demonstrate.

3. Further concerning Satans afflicting of Job in his Goods, Cattels, Children, Servants, and in his own Body, is a real truth literally so taken as to the matter of fact; but the manner of Satans appearing before God, with the Sons of God, cannot without manifest absurdity be understood in a literal sense but in a Metaphorical, that God who is Omnipotent, did command, order, send and limit him, what and how far he was to act. For otherwise God it light in whom there is no darkness at all, dwelling in the light which to Man can approach unto; but Satan is bound in chains of everlasting darkness, and therefore cannot be said literally to appear in person before God, but by way of a Metaphor. So when the Angel telleth the Virgin Mary, that she should come to pass, the said she had so known Man, the Angel answered, the Hole womb, and she not understanding how that should come to pass, because she had not known Man, the Angel answered, the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee. Though the matter of sact be an undoubted truth, and an Article of Faith, literally so taken; yet the manner of the Holy Ghost coming upon her, and the power of the highest overshadowing her, cannot be understood in a literal sense, as though it were by that natural and humane way that Men and Women do beget and conceive Children by, for that were horrid and absurd, (as some late prophane, wretched and debauched Atheists have spattered forth) but after a Metaporical sense, and a most myssical meaning. So that it is plain that where a matter of sact may be literally and Historically true, yet the manner how that matter of sact is brought to pass may be, nay must be Metaphorical, or else an absurdity will follow, which was the thing undertaken to be proved.

4. There is nothing more common and usual in Scripture than Metaphors, as when Christ saith, I am a vine, I am the door of the speep, I am the living bread that came down from heaven: Though they be Metaphors, yet the things signified and intended by them are as really and certainly true, as are the Metaphors themselves, and sometimes more true; because sometimes the Metaphor is not used for the verity of its existence, but according to the common use and opinion, as O foolish Galatians who hath bewitched you? doth intend no more but an allusion to vulgar opinion, that held that men might be bewitched and inchanted. And so Christ in the true mystical and spiritual meaning is as really a spiritual vine, door and bread, as there are any of such things in nature, or being. But as that which is Literally and Historically true in matter of fact, or meaning, is not to be deceeded from; so that which is a Metaphor ought not to be turned into a literal thing, nor on the contrary, the literal sense ought not to be made Metaphorical.

CHAP. VII.

5. Parables are Similitudes taken from things that may have been done, or that are supposed to have been done, and so the thing to which the comparison is made, or from whence the Similitude is taken, need not always be athing that hath been performed in all the circumstances and manner thereof; it is sufficient that the thing was possible, or rationally probable to have been acted, or at least supposed so to have been. As for instance in that Parable, where our Saviour faith: That those that hear his words and do them are Mauth. 7. 24, like a wife man that built his house upon a rock; and he that heareth 25, 26, 27 them, and doth them not, is like a foolish man, that built his house upon the fand: now it is not necessary that there should be two fuch men, that in matter of fact did after that manner (though there might have been many men before the time of our Saviour that might have done so) but it was sufficient that the thing from which the comparison was made, was possible, rational and probable. But the thing intended by the Parable or Similitude, is alwayes a spiritual truth and certainty. Concerning which learned Beza upon the Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus doth give us this remarkable Marginal note: "Although Christ doth relate an History, not-"withstanding he writeth spiritual things under Figures, which he "knew were furtable to our sense. For neither are Souls endowed "with Fingers and Eyes, neither do they suffer thirst, neither have "they mutual conference one with another. Therefore the fum is, "that faithful Souls after they be departed from their Bodies, do "lead a pleasant and blessed life without the World: And that most "horrible torments are prepared for the reprobates, which can no "more be conceived by our minds, than the immense Clory of " Heaven.

6. As for an Allegory, which is a continuation of a Metaphor, and properly fignifies a figure expressing one thing by another, from JAMP, and dyselw, enuntio, and this is very frequently used in the Scriptures, as when the Apostle speaking of the two Sons of Abraham, the one from Hagar a bond woman, the other from Sarah a free woman, saith: These things are an Allegorie, Anna diapyrickles, which things do express one thing by another; From whence we may note, 1. That Allegories that tend to edification, keeping the Analogie of Faith, and not perverting or overthrowing the literal sense, ought not to be so much cried down nor condemned, as some have done both against Origen and others. "For the Apostle here, as Beza hath nowed, made it manisch, that he had followed the sootsteps of the

"Prophet Istiab, who did foretel that the Church was to be con-"ftituted of the Children of Sarah that was barren, that is to fay "of those who meerly and spiritually were by Faith to be made "the Sons of Abraham, rather than of Hagar that was fruitful. "even then foretelling the rejection of the Jews, and the vocati-"on of the Gentiles. 2. Allegories may be used, and the literal sense nevertheless preserved also for the History is literally true that Sarah and Hagar were two living Women, the one Abrahams Wife a free Woman, the other his Servant, and a bond woman, and yet this did not hinder but that thereby an Allegory might be used, and they might, and did fignifie and express another thing than what was meerly contained in the letter. 3. We cannot here but add the grave and learned opinion of S. Augustin upon this very point, who rejecting the tenent of some that made Paradise and the things therein contained, meerly corporal, and of some that made it only. spiritual and intelligible, doth run a middle course betwixt these two extreams, saying thus: "As though Paradise could not be cor-"poral, because also it might be understood to be spiritual: As "though therefore there were not two Women Agar and Sarah, "and of them two Sons of Abraham, one of the bond-woman, the "other of the free-woman, because the Apostle saith that the two "Testaments were prefigured in them; or therefore that water had "flowed from no rock Moses smiting, because there by a figurative "fignification Christ also may be understood, the Apostle saying, Vifagra 1. 15. "and the rock was Christ. And after concludeth thus: "These "and some others may be spoken of understanding Paradise spiritu-"ally, and may be spoken without contradiction, while notwith-"standing the most faithful verity of that History may be believed "in the commendable narration of the things done or performed. This same opinion this learned Father doth maintain in another place, where he is speaking of the Ark of Neah.

Having premised these rules for the right expounding of the Scriptures, we shall now come to the main things that we purpose to handle in this Chapter. And those that would uphold a kind of omnipotency in Devils, and maintain their great power in Elementary and Sublunary things, the better to defend the great power of Witches, do alledge divers places of Scripture, and expound them in favour of their groß tenents, which now we shall examine and confute in order as they lie.

1. The first colourable argument that they produce, is from the Devils or the Serpents tempting and seducing of Eve, where labouring to prove the Devils power, and his visible apparition to Witch. es, and making a compact with them, they pretend that in the feducing of Eve he did visibly appear unto her and vocally discourse with her, and to that purpose that he essentially entred into the Body of the Serpent, and spoke through its Organs, or that he affumed the visible and corporeal shape of a Serpent, and so discoursed, and had collocution with her. To answer which (that we may proceed methodically,) we shall lay down and labour to prove these two positions. I. That if it were granted that he did it either way, it would be no advantage, thereby to prove the ordinary power of Devils or Witches.

2. That that place of Scripture, if rightly weighed and confidered, will no way make it rationally appear, that the Devil performed that temptation any other way but only mentally; and that the History there in the manner and circumstances of it, is only to be Allegorically and Metaphorically expounded. And as to the first, if it were granted it proves nothing to the purpole, for the power of Devils or Witches, as these two Arguments will sufficiently evince.

1. From no fingle instance or particular proposition, can evera Argum. 1. general conclusion be rightly drawn by any known and certain rules of Reason or Logick; for Syllogizari non est ex particulari, is known to any Tyronist in that Art. But if Satan for that once should have entred into the natural Serpent, or assumed his shape, it is a deceivable and vitious way of arguing, that therefore he hath fuch a power over all Bodies at all times when he pleafeth, or that he can assume what shape he please, and therefore it certainly and

2. In the temptation of Eve, there was something more extraor- Argum. 2. dinary than can be affigued if any other temptation whatfoever, except that of Christ. And therefore was there a more peculiar and extraordinary dispensation from God in that case than can be shewed in any others but that of Christ. For now it pleaseth God in his merciful providence, so to order and overrule the malice of his hellish will, and to restrain and bridle his envious nature, that though his will be never so wicked, yet is he kept in his chains of darkness, and God will not suffer his people to be tempted, above 1 Cor. 10. 13. what they are able, but will with the temptation also make way to escape that they may be able to bear it. Now Adam and Eve were in an extraordinary condition in respect of the Saints of God in this life, or of any other persons, and there was a more high and greater end in the providence of God in ordering and permitting of that temptation than there is or can be in any others, but that of Christ: And therefore from what the Lord permitted, and ordered to do in that temptation, or the liberty that he might grant him to exert his own power then, will no argument rationally follow that he can commonly and at his pleasure perform as much, and so maketh no firm conclusion.

And as concerning that place of Scripture in the third of Genesis the great and learned Jesuit Pererine doth undertake with tooth and nail to prove that it is to be literally interpreted, and that Satan did really enter into the Body of the natural Serpent, and spoke in him, or through his Organs; and laboureth (though in vain) to enervate and overthrow the strong arguments of his Brother in Religion, the most learned Cardinal Cajetan, Where he rejecteth the Vid. Panil opinion of those that hold that the Devil did assume a Body in locum.

the shape of a Serpent; because (he saith) that Satan presently after the temptation ended must have deposited and put off the assumed body, but that the Serpent was after in Paradile, and therefore that he did not act it in an affumed Body. Therefore we shall also pass by that opinion of assuming of Bodies, as being a meer groundless figment invented by the dreaming Schoolmen, as we shall demonstrate hereafter. But to proceed in order, We shall first shew that the place must of necessity admit of an Allegory or Metaphor. And secondly, we shall lay down positive Arguments to thew the absurdity and impossibility of the Devils speaking in the Serpent, or by his Organs. And thirdly, we shall answer all objections that are material, and that in these particulars.

1. The thing that in that History is to be taken literally, is that Eve was tempted and seduced; but the instrument by which it was done, the manner and circumstances, must of necessity have an Allegorical or Metaphorical interpretation, otherwise no sense rationally can be made of the place at all.

Vid. Dialog. Discourses of

2. "There can no blame of the action be imputed to Satan him-"felf, if neither absolutely, nor properly, nor Historically, nor Spirits and Devils. Dialog. "Allegorically, nor Metaphorically, nor no ways else he be named "in that very History of Evals tentation, wherein the action it self "with the several circumstances is fully and plainly expressed. For "the action especially being so weighty a matter, was necessary to "be known in every point : And therefore it is not to be doubted, "but that the History concerning the same is so exactly set forth, "with every circumstance, as that any Man may be able to judge of "the principal Actors therein at the least. So then, although the "Devil in that Hiltory, be neither absolutely, nor Historically, "nor properly expressed by name; yet must we acknowledge him "to be therein Allegorically and Metaphorically fet forth at the "least, or otherways impose no blame upon him at all concerning "the action. And therefore must Pererise needs confess a Metaphor in the place, or else the Devil cannot be made an actor in the bu-

a. It was no natural Serpent but the Devil himself Metaphorically fet forth by the name of a Serpent, who gave the onfet upon Evah in that tentation. Forby Allegories and Metaphors there is evermore some other thing meant than that which is literally expressed. And that this is so, is thus proved. If in that action the Devil himfelf be not Historically and properly, but Allegorically and Metaphorically, called a Serpent, because he is most crasty and subtile; then undoubtedly the objection of a natural Serpent to be used in that action is very inconvenient: But the antecedent is true, and therefore also the consequent.

The antecedent to that Hypothetical Argument foregoing is easily thus proved: It is an accustomed thing in the Sacred Scriptures to use the names of other creatures in setting forth to our sense the Intellectual Creatures themselves. Hereupon it is that in the Apocalypse the Devil (by a perpetual Allegory) is called a Dra. Apoc. 12. 344, gon or Serpent: And therefore in this History of Evals tentation, by the like perpetual Allegory he is also called a Serpent. For no 162 20.22 Man can be so absurd and foolish to think that the Devil literally and properly (in that of the Revelation) can be called a Dragon or Serpent; but only in a Metaphorical and Mystical sense, and therefore must in right reason be taken so in that place of Genesis; for one part of Scripture is alwaies best interpreted by another.

5. Again how can Judab literally be a lions whelp, or Christ Gen. 49.9. called the lion of the tribe of Judah & must it needs be understood Revel. 4. 5. that Christ either assumed the shape of a natural Lion, or that he entred into the Body of a natural Lion? Surely not, that were most absurd to think or believe. Even so must it be accounted most absurd and abominable for Pererime or any other to fancy that the Devil may not properly enough in an Allegory, or Mystical sense be called a Serpent in that action of tempting of Eval, without either assuming the shape of a Serpent, or entring into the Body of a natural one. I appeal to all rational Men to judge if the absurdities of both be not alike, if barely and literally taken. But this being one of Cajetans Arguments, was too hard a morfel for the teeth of Pereries; and therefore he past it over without an answer. Further when our Saviour called the Pharifees, and Sadducees a generation of vipers, must any Man be so extreamly mad Manh. 3. 7. as to believe that naturally and literally they were generated by wipers? Must it not be understood that they were called so from their poylonous and wicked minds, by way of Metaphor? Yes furely: and so is the Devil called a Serpent by a Metaphor, or else literally sotaken, both appellations are equally absurd. And let Pererise or any other unloofe this knot.

6. How can the Devil be a very murtherer from the beginning, John 8. 44. (which he is Mystically so considered) if he had no hand in the destroying of Evab and Adam both in Souls and Bodies? But if by the Serpent the Devil was not understood, then he stands acquitted, and was not guilty of the murdering Adam and Evab both in Souls and Bodies. But we must affirm that all learned and rational Divines, whether antient, middle or modern, that have expounded or commented upon that place, do by the words of our Saviour calling Satan a murderer from the beginning, understand the murdering of Adam and Evab both in Souls and Bodies; And we dare referr all those that have taken, or will take pains to examine them upon that piece of Scripture, that they shall be found as we have averred.

7. Moses (in that action) doth purposely intitle the Devil by the name of Merpent, because (by his effectual creeping into the interiour senses, as also by insecting Mens minds with venomous perswasions) he doth very lively represent the nature, disposition and qualities of the venemous Serpent. And in this same sense was the Apostle jealous over the Corinthians, lest as that Berpent & foit, 200r. 11. 3

(which must necessarily be understood of Satan by a Metaphor of that Serpent) beguiled Eval through hie Subtiley, so they might by the cunning of Satanin his falle Apostles have their minds corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.

8. The Serpent that tempted Evah in Paradile, is there faid to be more subtile than every beaft of the field, the which (if the writing of fuch as have observed and described the nature of all forts of animals be true) cannot be avouched truly of the natural Scrpent. For there are many other creatures more subtil than the Serpent. And therefore it must needs be understood of the spiritual Serpent.

that is, Satan who is ('indeed) the old Serpent.

9. Mofes doth therefore purposely attribute speech to the Serpent which tempted Evab, to the end we (knowing by experience that speech cannot properly accord with a natural Serpent) might the rather be induced to believe that the same must metaphorically be understood of the spiritual Serpent. For we may with like absurdity imagine that the olive, the fig, the Vine-trees and the Bramble did vocally and articulately speak one to another; as to suppose that either the Serpent, or the Devil in the Serpent did use an articulate voice and discourse unto Evah; they are both alike credible. and both alike abfurd.

10. The punishment inflicted by God, hath no conveniency at all with the natural, but with the spiritual and mystical Serpent, which is the Devil. For neither can the going upon her belly, nor the eating of dust be any punishment at all to the natural Serpent, because (before the tentation) both those properties were peculiar. ly allotted unto her, the taking her name from her creeping condition, for Serpens is derived a ferpendo, and in the Hebrew the is called wan reptile à wan, reptavit, serpsit. Neither yet may we imagine that the faid Serpent being of some better form before the tentation, was then (by the just judgment of God) transformed into a viler proportion, property or shape, she being in the History of the

11. Moses maketh no mention at all of the Serpents coming to Evab about that business, nor of her departure after the action. nor of any one special property whereby she might be essentially discerned to be (indeed) a true natural Serpent, nor of any manner of amaze, or fuddain fear in Evah at her fuddain approach and extraordinary speech: whereas yet Moses himself was afterwards horribly afraid at the only fight of a Serpent. And where it is faid, Thou art cursed above all the beafts in the field; there the very bruit beafts (to the horrible confusion of Satan) are preferred beforehim; not in absolute power, but in an especial regard of that happy continuance and timely conservation of their original nature. For, the beafts of the field, they do not forgo any heavenly happiness, which they never yet had: But they continue forth their course in that self same primary estate they took at the first. But Satan is accurled because he kept not his first cstate, but fell from it, and therefore is worfe than the beafts of the field. Neither is this way of expounding the Scriptures metaphorically, where the literal fense includeth an apparent absurdity, either siagular or novel, for both Antients and Moderns have allowed the fame course, for S. Augustine faith : "When any thing is found in Aug. ad Gmi "the Scriptures which cannot (without an absurdity) be possibly "interpreted literally, That thing without doubt is spoken fi-"guratively, and must receive some other fignification, than the " bare letter doth feem to import. And Gregory faith : When the Greg in Mirial "order of the History becometh defective of it self in the literal "sense, then some mystical sense as it were with wide open doors "doth offer it felf: yea and that mystical sense must be received in-"flead of the literal fense it felf. And therefore (faith Peter Mar- Pet. Martyr in " tyr) that malediction or curse which the Lord did cast on the Ser- Gen. 3. 1. "pent, must be Allegorically understood of the Devil, and those "things which feem properly to accord to the Serpent indeed, must "metaphorically be transferred to Satan understood in the Serpent. So then, by all the premises it is very apparent, that it was the De-complishment of the intended business. The next is to lay down positive Arguments to prove that the Devil did not effentially enter into the body of the Serpent and if he did, that yet neither he by himfelf, nor the Serpent, and he joyned, could thereby make any articulate found or discourse. Which if the Devil in the Serpent be supposed (as it is) to perform any such matter, it must be either by considering him as an incorporeal or as a corporeal creature, but we affirm he could perform neither vil himfelf, and no natural Serpent, who fet upon Evab in that ten-

tation, he being only metaphorically fet forth by the name of a Serpent: And therefore had no need in that action effentially to assume to himself the Body of a natural Serpent, for the better ac-

CHAP. VII.

1. If the Devil be confidered as an incorporeal creature simply Real, 1. and absolutely, then it will follow, that he cannot act upon any corporeal matter, because an incorporeal substance can make no contact upon a body, unless it were it self corporeal; for, quicquid agit, agit per contatium, velmediatum, velimmediatum. But both thole are caused by the touch of one body upon another, as when ones hand by touching a straw doth immediately move it forth of its place, or elfe by blowing doth remove it, which is by the mediation of the air ; but that which is meerly incorporeal can perform neither: Because that which is meerly incorporeal hath no superficles, whereby to touch the body to be removed; and therefore can make no motion of it at all 3 and where there is no motion, there can be no alteration, and confequently no speech nor articulation at all. And therefore the Devil (if incorporeal) could not move the Organs of the Serpent at all, and so could not speak in the Serpent nor move his organs, if they had been fit for articulate prolation, which they were not. Which was the thing required to be proved.

2. The Serpent by the ordinance of God in the Creation was specificated to an inarticulate sound, not to an articulate: but the Devil neither hath, nor ever had any power to change and overturn the course of Gods ordination in nature, and therefore hath not power, nor never had to make the Serpent speak articulately; for that were to overthrow the inviolable order of God set in the Creation, which no man of sound judgment did ever aver that the Devil could

3. I take it to be one of the most firm maximes that ever the Schools had, that, immateriale non agit in materiale, nise eminenter ut Dens: Therefore that the Devil being incorporeal and immaterial cannot act upon that which is material, as was the body of the Serpent, unless he had had a super-eminent and omnipotent power, which were blassphemous to attribute unto him, therefore could he not articulately speak in the Serpent unto Evah, because immaterial, and had no omnipotent power.

4. And if he be conceived to be corporeal, then he could either of himself speak articulately and audibly, or else not. And if he could do so of himself, then to enter into the Serpent was needless and superfluous. And if he could not, then the entring into the Serpent would not have contributed that faculty unto him, and so neither way he could have performed it; For a Frog creeping into the body of a Man, will not cause the Frog to speak, though it may make some noise or croaking.

5. Though the Devil being corporeal should have entred into the body of the Serpent, yet by no motion that could be made with or upon her organs, could they have been framed to have uttered an articulate found, because they were not fitted for that purpose, but only to have made a fibilation or hilling. For in Instruments that are artificial, the several sounds and tunes made by them, are but agreeable to the diversity of their parts and their several compactions; so an Harp cannot (when made) be ordered to give forth a found like a Trumpet, nor the noise of a pair of Organs; nor on the contrary: and if any of their parts be wanting, defective or broken, then the orderly found and Musick is spoyled. And though a Parret or Paraquet may by vocal and external teaching be brought to learn and speak some words; yet it is not by the teachers entring into her belly, but by his outward, vocal teaching, whereby her fenfes and phantalie are audibly wrought upon, and not otherwise. But in this action ascribed unto Satan, he is not supposed to be able to speak articulately, nor to have taught the Serpent vocally and audibly, which if he could have done, yet were not her organs capable of any fuch matter; and therefore it had been more subtilty in the Devil rather to have chosen a Parret than

The only objection worth taking notice of that Pererine bringeth against the found and reasonable opinion of learned agietan, is this: That Adam and Evan being in the state of innocency could not be wrought upon by an interiour tentation, because that neither the sensitive appetite nor the phantasic were corrupted; and therefore Satan could not internally work upon them, and therefore that the whole tentation must be extrinsecal. To which we return this sufficient reply.

CHAP. VII.

I. It is but a bare affertion without any proof at all, and he doth Reaf. I. but only shelter it under the authority of S. Austin and Gregory, whose authority in many other matters he doth often reject when they agree not with his humour, end and interest. But however they are but testimonia humana; and we are not to regard what the Men are that do speak, so much as to consider the weight and reason of what they do speak.

2. He proceeds upon falle supposition, that the sensitive appetite Reas. 2. and consequently the Phantasie could not be wrought upon nor drawn, but by a sensible and exteriour object, when it is manifest that the fight of the Serpent alone could not have stirred the sensitive appetite; for it is rationally to be supposed as a certainty that Boab had feen the Serpent before that time. Neither could it be the discourse with the Serpent, barely considered as discourse, that could have moved it; for it is certain she had heard, and had had audible, vocal and articulate discourse with her Husband before this time of the temptation. Neither could it be the beholding of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, for by the discourse it appeareth that the had before feen it, and it is probable that the tentation was in the view of it, and its species that appeared to her eye of the faid tree was the same that it was before. So that it will be most manifest that the tentation took effect from the strong lie that Satan told her, that their eyes should be opened and they should be at Gods knowing good and evil, and so her deception was first made in her mind and understanding, and thereby the will was drawn, and the sensitive appetite moved, whereupon she took of the fruit of the tree, and did eat. And this may far more reasonably be thought to be brought to pass by a mental discourse and internal motions, than by external collocution, which must first work upon the mind, before that the Phantalie or sensitive appetite could at all be moved or drawn.

3. If the tentation had been this way that Pererise supposeth it, Reas. 3. our first parents could not have been seduced; for Satans argument lay not to perswade Evah, that it was pleasant for the taste or good for the Stomach thereby to have drawn the sensitive appetite and the Phantasie, but that it was good and profitable to make them wise, and to be like Gods, whereby he insared her understanding with a fallacious and lying argument, thus framed, as learned Pisator lays it down: "That thing which will bring you Divine Vid. It Pisate." Wisdom and Felicity, that thing yo ought to make use of. But in lease. "the eating of this fruit can bring you Divine Wisdom and Felicity: "Therefore the eating of the fruit of this tree, ye ought to make use of. And so the seduction was not at all by the sensitive appetite (that could receive no more benefit by it than by the other fruits in the Garden) but by her understanding being blinded with a specious shew of an apparent (not a real) benefit, and thereby her will drawn and led to put forth her hand, and to eat. And therefore consequently there was no need at all of an extrinsecal tentation, which might and was brought to pass by an intrinsick discourse, working upon her understanding. 4. Surely if Pererise had been aware of the many inconveniences that this opinion of his doth hurry along with it, he would never have plunged himself into a Labyrinth of such perplexities: some of which we shall here enumerate and so conclude. 1. If this opinion were true, that Evah by reason of her perfection in the state of innocency could not be tempted nor feduced, but only by an external way and means: Then how could it come to pass that the Angels in their Primitive Estate, which was as perfect (if not more) than that of Evahs, were without a tempter or any external means drawn unto that defection, who left their estate and station, and abode not in the truth ? 2. How could the defection have been fo general (for multitudes of them fell) if they had not had some way or means to have communicated their cogitations and intentions one to another? For though we are not able to apprehend the manner how they discourse or commune one with another, yet it must be taken for a truth that they have a way and means to manifest their cogitations one to another, which is some way Analogous to that which we call speech or discourse. Therefore conno. 3.1. 3.4 cerning this point doth learned and judicious Zanchy thus conclude.

19.1. 156 "Therefore Che faith shee which was a which we have the conclude. "Therefore (he faith) that which we do by a sensible voice, the " same thing the Angels and blessed Souls in Heaven, yea the De-"vils in the infernal pit, and in the air, do perform, but without "voice, in a spiritual manner. 3. If this opinion were true, then the bleffed Souls, being divested from their Bodies, should not have a communion one with another, nor should jointly praise and glorifie God together, which were falle and absurd; and therefore the learned Father said well: "It is to be holden stedsastly that " the offices of the Heavenly Hoaft are by no means performed in fi-70m. 7. p. 187. "lence; seeing, we may read that the Angelical powers before the "voices. 4. The sleights and subtil machinations (for he hath his Nonpara or devices) of Satans Kingdom could not be carried on, if he had not a way and means to communicate them to the rest of the Crew of his inferiour Fiends, and therefore doth plainly prove that there is a way of hidden, Mystical and Spiritual discourse, which the Devil might, and did represent to the mind and understanding of Evah, whereby she was seduced, and that there was no need of a vocal and audible interlocution; and so much in answer to his objection.

The next place of Scripture that is commonly brought and urged thereby to prove the great power of Devils and Witches, is that of Pharaohs Magicians, from whence they argue thus: If the Magicians of Pharaob were able by the power and affiltance of the Devil to change their Rods into Serpents, the Water into Blood, and to produce Frogs; Why may not Witches, by the power and affiftance of the Devil, change themselves and other things into strange and several shapes, and do the rest of the seats that are ascribedunto them?

CHAP. VII.

But though this be but petitio principii, a begging of the queftion, that by the affiftance of the Devil they did these things, which is neither supposed nor granted, but ought first to have been proved; And though in the case of hardening Pharaohs heart, there might be (and was) a peculiar dispensation from God at that time: yet it will not follow that God doth always dispense with, and give the Devil leave to operate the like things; and so nothing firmly can be concluded from hence. Yet (I fay) though these be fo, we shall pretermit them, and come to the full opening and discustion of the matter; and that in these two particulars. 1. How far the Devils power and affistance did concurr with the actions and performances. 2. And wherein he did not concurr nor act at

1. Weshall grant that Pharaoh and the Magicians being Idolaters, and worthippers of falle gods, their ends were principally to magnific the power of their Idols, and to manifest that their supposed gods could work, and bring to pass as strange miracles or wonders as Mofes and Aaron could perform by the affiltance of the God of the Hebrews; and in respect of this end they had all the assistance that Satan and his dark kingdom of Angels could afford them in a spiritual and hellish way ; for be to the Prince of the power of the air that Ephel. 2. 2 worketh in the children of disobedience, for such were both Pharaoh and his Magicians. And to this purpose doth the Apostle tell us, speaking of take and seducing teachers: That they were like Jannes, 2 Tim. 2. 9. and Jambres that withstood Moses, in their resisting of the truth : fo that the Magicians of Pharaob were condemned for relifting the truth of that message that Moses and Aaron brought, and of those real miracles that they performed; and so in respect of the wicked end they aimed at, they were affilted with the power and concurrence of the Devil, and in that respect only were his servants and instruments.

But as for the second particular, namely, the efficient causes and means of the producing of those thing that the Magicians did, we affirm they were performed by the power of nature and art, and that the Devil was no efficient cause of their production, and that by these irrefragable arguments.

1. Those that affirm that the Devil did or can produce such strange Argum. 1. officits, do also acknowledge, that what he performeth in natural and elementary Bodies, is done by applying natural agents to natural and lit patients, which do truly bring to pass such thrange effects, and that he doth no more, but only make the local application of them. From whence it must necessarily follow that the effects flow from natural agents, and so no causality at all can be ascribed unto him, except that ficitious one of being causa sine qua non, which is as much as no cause. And besides that, there is no proof that he maketh this local application; for if he be incorporeal, then it is simply impossible that he should perform any such matter; and however, a man by natural power and means, if he know the fit and apt actives and passives, may perform them himself, and so his assistance is needless; and we have never yet met with any argument that bore any convincing force that might induce us to believe that he is so great a Naturalist.

2. There are many persons that think themselves no mean sharers Argum. 2. in the most forts of learning, and others that are very strait laced in their pretended zeal for godliness, and in detesting the works of Satan. that even startle and shew an abhorrency at the word Magick, if it be but once named, as though there were no Magick but what is diabolical, or that which they call diabolical were any other way evil but only in the end and use: for there are many plants and minerals, that though poysonous, are yet not with standing good in respect of their Creation, and the good uses that may be made of them, as to kill noxious animals that are hurtful unto man. But if any forth of malice and wickedness should use them to poylon and destroy Men and Women, it were wicked and diabolical in the end andule, yet were the means lawful and natural. So whatfoever the Devil may do by wicked Men, his instruments, in leading and drawing them to make use of the great magnalia natura, to work strange wonders by, thereby to confirm Idolatry and Superstition, or to refift the truth and fuch devilish ends, though the end and use may be wicked and diabolical, yet the efficient cause is natural and lawful. And therefore we can find no other ground or reason of dividing Magick into natural and Diabolical, but only that they differ in the end and use: for otherwise they both work by a natural as gency and means, seeing the Devil can do nothing above or contrary to that course that God hath set in nature. Therefore may men do without the aid of Devils what soever they can do, seeing they have no advantage over us, but operate only by applying active things to passive, like as Men do: And therefore said that most learned Philosopher, Chymist and Mathematician, our Countreyman Roger De finn. op. Bacon, excellent well in thefe words: non igitur oportet nos uti m. & natur. magicie illusionibus cum potestas Philosophia doceat operari quod sufficit. Therefore are those men that came from the East to worship Christ called Magicians, not because that great knowledge they had in the secrets of Nature was Diabolical or unlawful; for the name of a Magician was honourable and laudable, until Knaves and Impostors made use of it to cheat and couzen withal, and for wicked and ungodly ends; but because they had made use of it for the glory of God, and the good of mankind, therefore were they Magicians in the genuine, and best sense, as working by lawful and natural means, and to a good end: when the Magicians of Pharach may be called Cacomagicians, because they used the good and excellent causes and agents of nature to a wicked and Diabolical end, namely to relift the truth: and so the only difference of Magick is from the end and uses, and not from the causes or agents, that are both natural. So what these Magicians of Pharaoh did, though it were strange and wonderful, yet was it meerly by natural means and causes; and yet being for a wicked end was therefore Diabolical. So Jacob when he fet the pilled rods with white streakes in Gen. 30.37, them. before the flocks in the gutters in the matering troughs, that 38,39. when the Rams and the Sheep came up to drink, and coupled together, they might conceive and bring forth ring streaked, speckled and spotted young ones; It came so to pass, and is confessed by Pererise himself, and the most of learned Expositors upon that place, to be from natural causes, and was a strange feat of natural Magick; but not evil because not directed to a wicked end: but that of Pharaohs though wrought likewise by a natural causes (for so it was whether ascribed to the Devil, that can but work by natural means, or not) was wicked and Diabolical; because they did it to relist Moses and Aaron the messengers of the Lord Jehovah.

3. The most or all the learned Expositors that have Commented Argum. 3. upon this place of Exodus (as may be seen in Dr. Willets Hexapla and divers other learned Authors) though they attribute these things done by the Magicians to the power and affiltance of Satan, yet in the manner they do acknowledge them n ot to be done really and in truth, but only in shew and appearance. But what they mean by flew and appearance is not so easie to find out and determine; for if by it they mean, that they did it as Juglers and those that use the Art of Legierdemane do, that is, by shewing one thing, and then by nimble fleight and agility convey it away, and fuddainly and unperceiveably substitute another thing in its place, which they perform by leading the Eyes and attentions of the spectarors another way with staring and using of strange and insignificant words, then we should be soon accorded, for so they might probably and easily have been performed as we shall prove anon, but this is not the thing they mean or intend. But some do mean that the Devil did only deceive the Phantasie and imagination of the beholders, incausing them to imagine and believe that the rods were changed into Serpents, when they were not changed at all, but only their imaginations deceived in thinking them to be Serpents when they were but only rods, as melancholy persons, Men in Feavers, Phrenlies and Maniacal distempers do often think and affirm that they fee strange things when they fee no such things externally, but the Phantasie is only deceived with the species and images of those things within. This might be granted if Pharaoh and all the Spectators could be proved to be Men under those forenamed diftempers and the like, though yet that might (and doth often) come to pals from meer natural causes, where the Devil hath may fafely and rationally be denied. Some do suppose that the Devil did cloath or cover the Magicians rods with some such vestment of an airy substance, as might make the rods appear to the eye like Serpents; but this is as groundless a whimsey as any of the rest, and as it hath no proof, so it needs no confutation.

4. But to come more close to the matter, it is most plain and peripicuous that what they did was meerly by Art, or by Art and Nature joined with it; for if we may trust any thing to propriety of the words (as we have proved fufficiently before) they are called mechassephim, præstigiatores, that is Juglers, such as by sleight of hand, and nimble conveyance, could perform strange and wonderful things, and after they are called Hartummin, that is, Magicians, such as had skill in natural things, and by knowing their causes, and making due and timely application of them to passives that were suitable, could produce wonderful essess. And if we feriously consider the few things that they performed, they might easily be brought to pass by Legerdemain alone. For, as for holding a rod in their hands, and feeming to throw it down upon the ground, how foon might they throw down an artificial Serpent in its stead, and immediately and unperceivedly make conveyance of the rod? And if it be thought difficult or impossible, I shall unriddle the mystery, as I have sometimes seen it performed, and is but thus. The Jugler that is to perform this feat is usually provided before hand with a wiar so twined and wrested, that it may be prefied together with the little finger in the ball of the hand, and when let loofe it will extend it felf, like a fpring, and make a pretty motion upon a Table, this is fitted with a fuitable head, and a

hand he taketh up a little white rod that he hath upon the Table, with which he maketh people believe he performeth all his feats: And then telling them a Story to amuse them, that he will like Mofes and Aaron, transform that rod into a Serpent, then he presently beginneth to stare about him, and to utter some strange and nonfenfical words, as though he were invoking some Spirit or Goblin, and so immediately conveyeth the rod either into his lap (if sitting) or into his fleeve (if standing) and then lets loose the Serpent forth of his right hand with pulhing it forward, that what with the wiar, and the nimble motion of his hand, he maketh it to move a pretty space upon the Table, which he continueth, while offering with the one hand to catch it by the neck, he nimbly with the other puts it forward, and turneth it by touching the tail, and the mean while hiffeth fo cunningly, that the by-standers think it is the Serpent it felf, and presently whips it up and conveys it into his pocket. And such a trick as this well acted might make Pharaob and the beholders believe there was as much done, as Mofes and Aaron did, but only that Aarons rod swallowed up their Serpents, or his Serpent theirs, which they might easily excuse. As for the changing water into blood, and the producing of Frogs, they were so easy to be done after the same manner, that they need not any particular explication, for by this the manner of their performance may most easily be understood. Though I once faw a Gentleman that was much delighted with these kind of tricks, and did himself play them admirable well, who performed it with a living Snake, that he had got for one of his Children to keep in a box; for in this North-Countrey they are plentiful, and are also innoxious; and it might have deceived a very wary person. So that it is very foolish and absurd to bring in a Demon from Hell, or an Angel from Heaven, or a Soul from above, to solve a thing that seems strange and uncouth by, when the crast and cunning of Men (if duely confidered and examined) are sufficient to perfor the same, and much more. 5. And in this place of Exodus where our Translators fay: and Argum. 9. the Magicians did fo or in like manner with their inchantments, the word being Belahatehem ought to have been rendered, suis laminis (as we have proved before) that is, with their bright plates of metal, for the word doth not fignific Inchantments in any one place in all the Old Teltament. And if truth and reason may bear any sway at all, it must be understood that they were deeply skilled in natural and lawful Magick (as generally the Agyptians and the Eastern Nations were) though they did use and apply it to an evil end, namely the relifting the power of Gods miracles wrought by Mofes and Aaron: and so by this word fut laminis, with their plates of Metal must be understood, Metalline bright plates framed under certain fit constellations, and insculped with certain figures, by which naturally (without any Diabolical affiltance) they did perform strange things, and made the shapes of some things appear to the eye. And though we may be derided and laughed to scorn by the ignorant, or hardly taxed and censured by the greatest part of Cynical Criticks, yet we cannot fo far stifle the knowledge of our own brains, nor be so cowardly in maintaining the truth, but we must affert. That anciently there hath been a certain lawful art. whereby some sorts of metals might be mixed together under a due constellation, and after ingraven in like fit Planetary times with fundry figures, that would naturally work strange things; And this piece of learning though it may justly be numbred amongst the Desiderata, and might very well have been placed in the Catalogue of the Deperdita of Pancirollus; yet was it well known un. to the ancient Magicians, and by them often with happy success put into practife; And amongst those many noble attempts of that most learned and experienced (though much condemned) person Paracelfus, this part of learning was not the leaft, that he laboured to restore. The truth of which we thus prove. 1. That there have been formerly in the World many such like planetary Sigills or Talismans, (as the Persians called them) is manifest from the authority of divers Authors of good credit and account. For the learned and most acute Julius Scaliger relateth this saying : Extra 196. 6. "The novelty of this History also may sharpen the wits of the studi-"ous. In the Books of the Arabick Agyptians (he faith) it is thus "written. That Hameth Ben Thaulon the Governour of Egypt for "the Arabians did command that a certain leaden Image or Picture "of a Crocodile, which was found in the ground-work of a certain "Temple, should be melted in the fire. From which time the inha-"bitants did complain, that those Countreys were more infested "with Crocodiles than before, against whose mischief that Image "had been framed, and buried there by the more ancient Wisemen "or Magicians. Junctin, upon the Sphear of Sacrobosco, assirms "that his Master who was a Carmelite, named Julianus Ristorius à Hift. 2. "Prato, one that was not any whit superstitious, was intreated by "a Friend of his to make one of these Images for the cure of the "Cramp, which he was very much subject to. This learned Man "resenting his Friends sufferings, taught him the manner how to "make one: so that he, not content to make only one, made di-"vers of them when the Moon was in the Sign Cancer; and that "with so good success, and with such certainty, as that he im-"mediately found the benefit of it. "This Talisman (he saith) is to be seen in the Countrey of Hamptz, Hist. 3. "in a City bearing the same name; and it is only the Figure of a "Scorpion graved upon one of the Stones in a certain Tower; "which is of so great virtue, as that it suffers not any, either Ser-"pent or Scorpion to come within the City. And if any one, for "experiment lake, bring one of these out of the field into the City, "it is no sooner at the Gate, but that it dies suddenly. This Fi-"gure hath this virtue besides; that when any one is stung with a "Scorpion, or bitten by any other Serpent, they need but take "the Image of the Stone with a little clay, and apply it to the "wound, and it is instantly healed. Unto which Mr. Gaffarel addeththis: "If any one doubt (faith he) of the credit of this Cof-"mographer, he may yet adventure to believe Mr. de Breves, as Hift. 4. "having been an eye-witness of the like experiment: who says in "his Travels, that at Tripoli a City of Syria, within a Wall that "reacheth from the Sea-side to the Gate of the City, there is a cer-"tain inchanted stone; on which is figured, in Relief, or by way "of Imbossment, the Figure of a Scorpion, which was there pla- Ut Jupia p. And a little above the City, there is a cer-"tain Cave, which is full of the Carkasses and Bones of Serpents, "which died at that time. And further Gaffarel faith: Now wherees as he calls this an inchanted Stone, and says that it was placed "there by a Magician, you must note, that he there speaks according "to the sense of the inhabitants, who knew not how to give any o-"ther account of the thing, as not understanding any thing at all of "the natural reason of it.

2. And that the election of fit times according to the Configura- Argum. 2. tion of the Stars and Planets, is of great efficacy and virtue, is sufficiently known to Husbandmen and Sailers, and of no small power both in respect of natural and artificial things, as we shall shew in this instance. Lazarne Riverine who was Counsellor and Physician to the French King, a person of extraordinary learning and experience in the Medical profession, both in the Galenical and Chymical way, doth give us this relation faying: "I have not feldom Obfirvat. com-"experienced, and I have many witnesses of this thing, that Peony municat. 7. Agreeable unto which is the judgment of that Industrious person Galen, who affirmeth that Peony by appension first, p. 1076 collection. From whence it is most clear that the careful and precife observation of the Heavenly influences is most necessary to a Physician, and to all others that would produce strange and defired effects. Therefore doth learned Schroderus tell us this concerning Philm. mid. the power and efficacy of those influences, saying: "The influenchym. 19. p. 24 " ces of the Stars are effluvia, or Steams endowed with peculiar fa-"culties, by which they make strong (if they be in their strength "and vigour) things that are familiar to them, and do prosper and "promote their virtues; but on the contrary they debilitate, hin-"der and make worse things that are not agreeable to them. And this is that which Moses fully mentioneth in these words, as they are fitly rendred by Arias Montanus. Et ad Joseph dixit, Benedi-Sa Domini terra ejus, de delicia Cælorum, de rore, & de voragine cubante deorsum : & de delicia proventuum Solie, & de delicia Deut. 33-13, ejellionis lunarum. Which our Translation gives thus: And of Jojeph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that concheth beneath; And for the precious fruits brought forth by the Sun, and for the precious things put forth by the Moon. The full evidence of the truth of these influences of the Stars, and necessity and utility for due and proper scasons for the collection of Flowers, Fruits, Roots and Plants, may be feen in that learned piece that Bartholomass Carichterus Chief Physician to Maximilian the Second, writ and dedicated to his Master in the German Tongue. As also, what is written in the same Language by those learned Germans, Johannes Pharamundus Rhumeline, and Ifrael Hebneras that learned Mathematician, in a Treatife which he calleth, Mysterium Sigillorum herbarum & lapidum, which do compleatly verifie the certain efficacy and virtue of Planetary Scals, Images or Figures. 3. These things are confirmed by the effects of appentions of many natural things which produce strange and wonderful effects, some of which we shall give in the words of that honourable person Mr. Boyl, who faith: "That great cures may be done by bare outward ap-"plications, you will scarce deny if you disbelieve not the relations which are made us by learned men concerning the efficacy "of the Lapis Nephriticus, only bound upon the Pulles of the wrilts "(chiefly that of the left hand) against that stubborn and Anoma-"lous disease the Stone. And that which gives the more credit to "these relations is ; That not only the judicious Anselmus Boetius "de Boot feems to prize it, but the famous Monardes professeth "himself, not to write by hearlay of the great virtues of this In-"dian Stone, but to have made tryal of it himself upon persons of "very high quality: And that which is related by Monardes is "much less strange than those almost incredible things which are "with many circumstances delivered of that Stone, by the learned "Chymilt Vutzerus. And although it must be acknowledged that "fome Stones that go under that name have been ineffectually ap-

Yet the accurate Johannes de "Last himself furnisheth us with an answer to that objection, in-"forming us that many of those Nephritick Stones (which differ "much in colour, though the best are wont to be greenish) al-"though not at all counterfeited or sophisticated are of little or no "virtue. And though Mr. Boyle a person of a perspicuous judgment, and of a great understanding, doth seem to question his authority with a kind of dubitation, being in probability staggered by the groundless censures of his greatest adversaries; yet we must affirm that it is very hard that his veracity and experience (which was as great as any Mans) (hould be undervalued, by reason of the ignorance and idleness of those that judge him: who were never able in regard of their ignorance to understand the meaning of his mystical and dark way of writing, nor because of their supine negligence had ever made trial of those things he treateth of, with that curious diligence and care that is requilite to accomplish such occult effects withal; not considering that, Dis sua bona laboribus vendunt. But notwithstanding this, and the monstrous lies and horrid calumnies of that pitiful Rapsodist Athanasias Kircherus, we shall add one testimony more from the same Author, which in English runs thus: "Also (he saith) I cannot here pass over one "great wonder, which I saw performed in spain of a great Negro-"mancer, who had a Bell not exceeding the weight of two pounds "which as oft as he did Ring, he could allure and stir up many and "various Apparitions and Visions of Spirits. For when he lift he " did describe certain words and characters in the inward superficies "of the Bell: After if he did beat and ring it, forthwith the Spirits "(or shapes) did come forth or appear of what form or shape soe-"ver he defired. He could also by the found of the same Bell, ei-"ther draw unto him or drive from him many other Visions and "Spirits, as also Men and Beasts, as I have seen many of these performed by him with mine own eyes. But when soever he did begin 'any new thing, so oft he did renew the words and Characters also. "But notwithstanding he would not reveal (he saith) unto me, "those secrets of the words and characters, until I my self more "deeply weighing and confidering the matter, at last by chance "found them forth. Which notwithstanding, and the examples of "which I here studiously do conceal. But it is not obscurely to be "noted here, that there was more of moment in the Bell, than in "the words: For this Bell was certainly and altogether com-"pounded or made of this our Electrum.

5. And that there are great and hidden virtues both in Plants and Argum. 4. Minerals, especially in Metals and Precious Stones as they are by Nature produced by Mystical Chymistry prepared and exalted, or commixed and insculped in their due and fit constellations, may not only be proved by the instances foregoing, but also by the reasons and authorities of persons of great judgment and experience in the secrets of nature, of which we shall here recite some few. And first that learned and observant person Baptista van Helmont tells us thus much: "But In Verb. Herb. "this one thing (he faith) I willingly admit: To wit, that metals do by & lapid. mag. "many degrees furpass Plants and Minerals in the art of healing. And "therefore that metals are certain shining glasses, not by reason of " the brightness; but rather that as often as they are opened, and their

"Therefore metals do operate, by a manner attributed to the Stars, "to wit by aspect, and the attaction of an alterative blass or mo-"tion. For the metals themselves are glasses, I say the best off-"fpring of the inferiour Globe, upon which the whole central "force, by some former ages, hath prodigally poured out its trea-"fure, that it might espouse most richly, this liquor, this sweat, "and this off spring of Divine Providence, unto those ends which "the weakness of nature did require. But (he saith) Icall them "shining glasses, which have the power of penetrating and illumi-"nating the Archem, from its errors, furies and defects. Neither are those arguments of that learned person Galeottus Marfins, Vid. lib. de for defending the natural and lawful effects of Planetary Sigills, 0.24.9.187. when prepared forth of agreeable matter, and made in their due constellations, of such small weight as some insipid ignorants have pretended, but are convincing to any confiderate and rational person, as this one may manifest, where he is speaking of the Figure of a Lion ingraven in a Golden Plate in these words: "The Figure of a "Lion (he faith) insculped in the fit hours, in a right constellation, "doth not act, but doth bring the beginning of the action, as S. Tho-" mas and Albertus magnus do testifie: not as a Figure and Image im-" prefied Mathematically, but that it may effect this or that prepara-"tion in the thing figured: which may in divers moods receive the "Celestial action without difficulty: Because if the Image of a Dog, "or an Horse, or some other Animal were insculped in a Golden "Plate, there would not be that disposition of the matter, which

"doth accompany the Image of a Lion &c. From whence (he faith) "we conclude, that this aptitude to draw in the Oelestial virtue in " the Figure, is not as Figure, but as the Gold is formed more denfe "or thin, by the condition of the Image. For even in looking. "glasses, the variety of the Figure, doth bring a most vast diffe-"rence. For how much a Concave doth differ from a gibbous "Looking-glass, is even known unto old Wives. Of these things Defeatt. ope. also our learned Countrey-man Roger Bacon, who was second to none in the secrets of Art and Nature, doth teach us thus much: "But they who know in fit constellations, to do their works ac-"cording to the configurations of the Heavens; they may not only "dispose Characters, but all their operations, both of Art and Nature. "agreeable to the Celestial virtues. But because it is difficult in "these things to know the certitude of Celestials; therefore in "these there is much error with many; and there are few that know "to order any thing profitably and truly. But we shall shut up this chidex. magic particular with that memorable and irrefragable responsion of Page racelfus to the common objection, which in English runs thus: "But (he faith) they will thus urge; how comes it to pass, I pray "thee, that Metals, with their afligned Characters, Letters and "Names, should perform such things, unless they be prepared and "made by Magical and Diabolical power intervening? But (he " faith) to thefe I return this answer. Therefore thou believest (as I "hear) that if such things be made by the help of the Devil, then "they may have their force and operations. But thould not thou "rather believe this? that also the Creator of Nature, God who "dwelleth in the Heavens, is so powerful, that he in like manner "can give and confer these virtues and operations to Metals, "Roots, Herbs, Stones and fuch like things? As though forfooth "the Devil were more strong, more wise, more omnipotent, and more "powerful than the only Eternal, Omnipotent and Merciful God, who "hath created and exalted their degrees, even of all these aforesaid "Metals, Stones, Herbs, Roots and all other such like things that "are above, or within the Earth, and do live and vegetate in the "Water or Air, for the health and commodity of Man?

This argument we defire that any of the Witchmongers or Demonographers should answer, ere they conclude so strongly for the power of Devils and Witches.

So we conceive we have sufficiently proved that what Pharaohs Magicians did perform, might rationally, and probably be brought to pass by Natural Magick or confederacy, and sleight of hand, without any other Diabolical assistance than what was mental and spiritual in regard of the end, which was the resisting of Moss. And by all they did, as in changing their Rods, bringing in of Frogs and changing Water into Blood, it doth not rationally appear, that they had any supernatural assistance, for then they could not have been so an azed at the miracle of turning the Dust into Lice; for what skill did the Devil want that he could not perform this?

If by his power the former things were brought to pais, could there be more difficulty indoing of this, than in the bringing of Frogs? Neither could their Legier demain have failed them but that they were furprized, and taken unawares, being not provided to play all kind of tricks, but only fome few for which they had made provision. And so to excuse their own inability, they cryed out, the the finger Exod. 8. 19. of God. 3 a pitiful shift to excuse their own knavery, and couzenage, for there could be no more of the finger of God in this than the former, but only a shift to put off their own shame.

Another place from whence they would draw arguments to maintain the power of the Devil and Witches, is the Story of Balam in the Book of Numbers, from whence in the first place they would conclude that he used wicked and Diabolical Divinations, and that by words he could either bless or curse. In answer to which we shall give these pressive reasons.

CHAP. VII.

1. Though it might be granted that he used Divinations that Reas. 1. were not lawful, yet what is that to a killing and murthering Witch? Surely nothing at all. And though Balak believed that who foever Numb. 22. 6. he bleffed were bleffed, and who foever he curfed, were curfed, and therefore fetched him so far, yet there is nothing apparent to prove that Balaam could do any such matter, and from Balaks belief to Balaams performances proceedethno argument, for his belief that he could either bless or curse, did not confer any power to Balaam to produce such effects withall. And Balaams bleffings, or cursings might be intentional, and declarative, but could not be effective, for he confesseth a great piece of truth: How should be curse, whom Numb 23. 8, God had not curfed, or how should be defie, whom the Lord had not 23. defied & He might have done it verbally, but it would have been fruftrate, and to no effect, and therefore he concluded: Surely there was no inchantment against Jacob, nor no Divination against Ifrael.

2. And though it be faid, that he went not as at other times, to Reaf. 2. meet Auguries (for as we have before shewed, the word doth properly signifie that.) It must be understood, and is manifest that at the former times he went to attend solitarily what the Lord would say unto him, and those two times that he went before was only to meet the Lord, to hear and receive what he would say unto him. But here he did not, nor had need to go, for the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and he took up his Parable, and prophesied. Where though his going to meet the Lord, be called to meet Divinations, yet it cannot be taken in the worse sense, for unlawful Divinations, but for such as were sent him and taught him by God, by Visions, Angels, Trances, or other such like wayes as God in those times used to reveal his Will to his Prophets by: For from sirst to last, it appeareth that he neither professed, nor did (in this case) utter any thing but what the Lord commanded him, and so was no false Prophets.

nations, but what he had from God, is most clear from these par-Numb. 22.18. ticulars. 1. When Balak first sent messengers unto him, his responfion was: If Balak would give me bie house full of Silver and Gold I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God, to do left or more. "Whereby it is apparent that he feared the Lord Jehovah, "and calls him his God, thereby shewing the considence that he had "in him, and that he acknowledged him for his only God. 2. In the "whole transaction of the business betwirt him and Balak, he never "took upon him to declare any thing, but what the Lord would "fay unto him, neither did he at all vary from the same in the least Bid c. 24. 4. "tittle. 3. He confesseth all along, that he had his eyes opened, and that he heard the words of God, and had seen the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open. And thefe were things that were not peculiar to any, but fuch as were the true Prophets of the Lord Jehovah. 4. The truth of his Prophecie. which was of the Kingdom of Christ, and the Glory and Dominion of it, with the prosperity of his people, doth plainly evince that he was a true Prophet of the Lord, and that his Divinations came Vid.cam.dw. from the Almighty. And this caused S. Hierome, and some other of the Fathers believe, that by this Prophecie of Balaam, the Magi or Wife men were directed, to come to Hiernfalem to feek and worthip Christ the Saviour of the World. 4. Though this Prophet fell into hainous crimes, and enormous Reas. 4. lins, as tempting of God, who when the first Messengers came from Balak unto him, was politively commanded not to go with them, and yet as though God would change his mind entertained them again, whereby Gods anger was kindled against him. And though he was drawn to love the mages of unrighteon mefs, and fo 2 Pct. 2. 15, was rebuked by the dumb Ass, and though he taught Balak to lay a Jude 11. flumbling-block before the children of I freel, and therefore had that Rerel. 2, 14. judgment to be flain among the Midianites: Yet none of these do conclude at all, that therefore he used Diabolical Divinations, or had not what he declared from Divine Revelation, no more than Jonah 1. 3. & the flying of Jonah to Tarshish, when he was commanded to go to preach against Nineveb, or his repining at Gods mercy shewed to that great City, manifested him to be a lying Prophet, or to use devilish Divination. Neither the Prophets being seduced, that cried against the altar at Bethel, before Jeroboam, by the old Prophet, and his being flain in the way by a lion, & his carkafe left there, did at all argue that his Prophecie was falle, or that he had not his mellage from God, but they only shew, that even those that have been truly inspired by God and been truly taught by him, have notwithstanding often disobeyed him, and have had therefore fearful temporal judgments fain upon them, and yet no argument that they used unlawful Divinations.

From hence also the Witchmongers use to urge a frivolous, and groundless argument which is this; that the Angel did speak in Beleeme Ale, and therefore the Devil may speak in a Dog, or a supposed Witchcraft. CHAP. VIII.

Cat to a Witch, but this is confuted by these reasons. 1. What the Angel did there was by command and commission Reast 1. from God, but we never read, nor can it be proved that the Devil is sent upon such idle, and ordinary errands, to work a miracle, to speak in a Dog, or a Cat, to a Witch; for God doth not work wonders for any fuch wicked and abominable eads. And if he be not sent of God, he cannot of himself perform any such matter, who could not enter into the Swine, without Christs leave and order ; but is kept in chains of everlasting darkness, from whence he is not loofed, but when God fends him as an instrument to accomplish his will, which is always for good and just ends, and not for fuch execrable and wicked purpoles.

2. They take up a falle supposition, for the Angel was not in the As either effentially, or effectively, for at the very instant that the As spoke, the Angel was standing in a narrow place, where was Numb. 22.26, no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left, and then feeing 27. the Angel of the Lord she fell down under Balaam, and spoke, and the Angel could not both it and in the narrow way and likewise be in the Als, in the same moment of time, except we should grant that absurdity that a creature may be in two distinct places at one and the felf-same time, which was never yet allowed to any created being. But they openly belie, and falifie the words of the Text, Verless. for it doth not say that the Augel spoke in the Ass, but that the Lord, (the word is Jebovah) opened the mouth of the As. So that (we suppose) here is enough demonstrated that from

grounds can be drawn to uphold those particulars that we have laboured to confute, and therefore we shall pass to another Chapter.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Woman of Endor that pretended to raise up Samuel, and of some other places in the Scriptures, not handled yet, and of some other objections.

Oncerning the Woman of Endor, that our English and many other Translators have fallly rendered aWitch, or a Woman that had a familiar Spirit, we have spoken sufficiently, where we treated of the figuification of the word ob. And there have thewed plainly, that the is only called the Mistriss of the bottle, or of the Oracle, and that what the there did, or pretended to do, was only by Ventriloquy, or casting her self into a seigned Trance lay groveling upon the earth with her face downwards, and so changing her voice did mutter and murmur, and peep and chirp like a bird coming forth of the shell, or that she spake in some hollow Cave or Vault, through some Pipe, or in a Bottle, and so amused and deceived poor time. rous and despairing Saul, or had a confederate apparelled like Samuel to play his part, and that it was neither Samuels Body, Soul. nor no Ghost or Devil, but only the cunning and Imposture of the Woman alone, or affifted with a confederate. And though this might be amply satisfactory to all found and serious judgments, especially if hereunto be added what Mr. Scot, Mr. Ady, Mr. Wagflaff, and the learned Authors of the Dialogue of Spirits and Devils have written upon this subject: yet because we have promised before to speak something of the History and matter of fact, and that Mr. Glanvil a Minister of our English Church hath of late espoused the quarrel, we shall confute his arguments and clear the case as fully as in reason can be required, and that in these particulars follow-

1. The certain and infallible prophecies of Samuel so punctually 1 Sam. 3.19. coming to pals according as he foretold them, for it is faid: And 14.67. v. 13. Samuel grew, and the Lordwas with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground; were manifestly known to all Ifrael, as in the case of the destruction of Eli, and his house, and by the overthrow of the Philistines at Eben-exer, and in the anointing of saul to be King, and in the case of sending Thunder and Lightning in Harvest time, and such like. And as these were publickly known unto all Ifrael, and they had feen, and tryed what infallible certainty followed upon them, fo it was as generally known, that Samuel had told Saul that God had rejected him from being King over Ifrael, and that he had anointed David to be King in his stead; and therefore any rational Man, that knew these things, and also faw that David prospered in all things that he did, and that it was quite otherwise with saul, might certainly know that the Kingdome would be transferred from him unto David, and so there needed neither spirit nor Devil be fetched up to predicthis, being fufficiently known unto all, of which also the Woman at Endor could not be ignorant as a thing of concern to her, especially in the point of her practife which was meer couzenage and Imposture. And therefore Mr. Glanvils argument concludes nothing, where he faith: "And this Samuel truly foretold his approaching fate, viz. "That I frael should be delivered with him into the hands of the "Philistines, and that on the morrow he, and his Sons should be "in the state of the dead, which doubtless is meant by the expressi-"on that [they should be with him:] which contingent particulars, "how could the couzener, and her confederate foretel, if there "were nothing in it extraordinary and preternatural? To answer which we say, that there was no contingent particular that was foretold, but Mr. Glanvil might have foretold it, if he had been there, and known but that which was publickly divulged in Ifrael, without incurring the danger of being reputed a Witch or a Diviner. 1. Because

1. Because Samuels prophecies were certainly known to come to pass, and he had openly declared, that the Kingdom should be rent from Sanl, and given to David. 2. She or her confederate might have gueffed as much, because of the extream fear and consternation that Saul was in, for heartless and searful Generals seldom or never win Battels. 3. Because that he confessed that God had forfaken him, and when he faw the hoaft of the Philistines, he was afraid and his heart greatly trembled, and those that God doth forfake cannot prosper. 4. The word to morrow in the Hebrew doth not precifely denote the day following, but the time to come, so that how true soever Mr. Glanvil may think it, there was but a piece of ambiguous Equivocation in it, for it cannot be made out that it was fought the very next day, neither were all Sauls Sons flain with him, at that very time. 5. And if nothing must be supplied but meerly what is sotidem verbie in the Text (as he urgeth against Mr. Scot) then how will it be proved, that the Phrase (to morrow thou and thy sons shall be with me) is to be understood of the state of the dead, seeing the words (if literally to be taken) do imply a locality, not a state or condition? 6. But if it be supposed to be the Devil, how comes he to know contingencies so certainly ? It is a thing that is eafily affirmed, but was never yet fufficiently proved. For if it be faid he gathered it from the Prophecie of Samuel, so might the Witch have done without any assistance of a Devil. 7. And if he take it to be Samuels Soul (as he seems to hold) how come departed Souls to know, and forelee what contingent effects are to fall out herebelow? Where reads he or finds any such Divinity except in Popish Authors? But he may consult the Text: Doubtlest thou art our Father, though Abraham be igno. In. 63, 16. rant of us, and Ifrael acknowledge us not.

2. That this Woman was a meer dissembling and lying cheater, and used nothing but Imposture, is manifest from these reasons. 1. Because that she was but of the same Crew and Stamp that Manasseb, and abab set up, is most plain, but they were meer Impostors and deceivers pretending to divine for other persons, and in other matters, but could not foresee their own destruction, and therefore in probability she was of the same practice. 2. Because she falfly faigned that the knew not sank, of whom the could not be ignorant, he being so publickly known, and seen, and was taller by 1 Sam. 9. 4. the head and shoulders than any man in Ifrael. 3. If the had not & 10.23. known that it had been sand, when he came to her at the first, she would never have relyed upon his oath when he swore by Jehovah, for there was none but the King that could protect her from deltruction. 4. She must needs be a most notorious dissembling cheater. because the pretended to call up any, for the faid: whom shall I bring up unto thee? which is most certainly false, she had no such universal power, no nor all the Devils in Hell, if they had all affisted her. 5. Shedid plainly diffemble, for the Text faith, and when the woman fam Samuel fire cried out with a loud voice; now if of samuel, but who loever it was (for we cannot determine it) it cannot be rationally supposed that he had the Story of this transaction betwirt Saul and the Woman from Divine Revelation, for then doubtless it would not have been lest so ambiguous and doubtful, but the whole truth, both of the matter, manner and circumstances, would in all probability have been fully set down:

and have been declared whether it were a miracle wrought by God, a delusive apparition of Satan, the Soul of Samuel, or the Imposture

of the Woman, the certainty of which had been mainly profitable and expedient for the people of God and his Church to have known. And if the Penman had it from the relation of Saul or either or both of his Servants, then it must needs have been according to their deluded imaginations and their deceived apprehensions, as is most rational to believe that it was; or if he had it from the Woman, or those of her family, (which is not rationally probable) then it is sure to have been represented for the most advantage, and credit of the Womans skill and cunning. But the most learned persons do judge it to be related, meerly according to the deceived opinion and apprehension of Saul. 5. But to come more near the stress of the business, though Mr. Glanvil confidently fay, that Mr. Stots Tenent, that the Wo- Confid about man was in one room and Saul in another, when the feat was acted, p. 86.

is but a pretty knack and contrivance, and but an invention without ground, and not as much as intimated in the History: Yet we must soberly averr, that nothing is more plain in the Text, than either that they were in diverse rooms, or that san! saw nothing at all, but what he had was from her relation, or the acting of a confederate, and this we shall prove by these undeniable reasons. 1. After Saulhad pacified the pretended fears of the Woman, who fallly counterfeited that she knew not Saul, who was taller by the head and shoulders than any man in Ifrael, the next thing we hear of in the Text is, and when the Woman samuel: Now if they were both in the same room, and samuel a visible object, how comes it to pass that Saul saw him not? for if they were both in one room, and Samuel visible, how is it that he did not or could not see him? were his corporal eyes as blind, as the eyes of his understanding? furely not. What fiction or invention must falve this? furely Mr. Glanvil must pump to find it out. 2. The next thing is, that when the Woman saw (for blind Saul saw nothing) Samuel, she cried with a loud voice, magna voce, or (as the Hebrew hath it) in magna voce. And (I pray you) if they had been both in one room, or near together, what need the to have cried with a great voice, might not an ordinary tone have made him to have heard her? What was he deaf as well as blind? Or it might be it was the more to amuse and amaze the wretched and deluded King, or to shew the wonderfulness of the apparition she feigned that astonishment, the more to magnifie herskill and cunning. Well, admit these were so, yet however it is manifest, notwithstanding her great voice, that judge if this be not groß and palpable lying, Gods is plural, but

Samuel was but one. 3. As it is manifest that this Woman was an active deceiver, and one that intended to cheat and couzen, so it is as plain that Saul was in a condition fit to be deluded, and imposed upon, even by those that had been less cunning and skilful than she was in the craft of cheating, which is apparent from these reasons. 1. The Spirit of the Lord was departed from him, and confequently, Wifdom, Prudence and Discretion, and so that which should have guided his Will, Affections and Actions in the right way, had totally left him. And when these are gone, what is man, but a fit inftrument to undergo and fuffer even the worst and lowest of delufions and abuses ? 2. The Spirit of the Lord had not only left him.

the faw Samuel (whom the could not but know) why did the anfwer to Sant, when he asked, what sawest thou? She answered, t

1 Sam. 16. 14. but an evil Spirit from the Lord was come upon him that vexed and terrified him. And to what madness, folly and wickedness is not he subject to, who is led by the Spirit of lies and darkness? 3. The Lord had openly declared, that because he had rejected the word of the Lord, therefore the Lord had rejected him from being King over Ifrael, and that the Kingdom should be rent from him, and gi-

1 Sam. 15.23, ven to one more worthy than him. Now what despondency of mind, what torture and vexation of Spirit must needs be in him. that having been a King, is thus threatned to have his Kingdom rent from him and given to another, is easy to be imagined. 4. He must needs be under a most fearful consternation of mind not only because of these things named, but especially having before in his dangers and straights received counsel and advice from the Lord, 1 Sam. 28.6. though he now inquired of the Lord, yet the Lord answered him neither by dreams, nor by Vrim, nor by Prophets. The Lord answered him not by dreams; for the union and converse that had been betwixt him and the Lord before, was now broken by reason of his Sins and Rebellion. Neither did the Lord answer him by Urim, for the Urim was not in the possession then of saul, but of David, Chap. 23. 6, 9. Neither did the Lord answer him by Prophets, for samuel had left him, after his last denouncing judgment against him, and came no more at him until his death. 5. He must needs be in a most fearful case, and a fit subject for the most weak and simple Imposture of the World, because the Philistines were upon him with a potent and numerous Army, and he able to gather but few and weak forces, the best and most of the people being revolted from him, and were in their affections, or persons with and for David. And from hence may easily be collected, how > had far less craft than this Woman, who doubtless was devilish cunningin her couzening tricks. 4. There is much question who was the Penman of this first Book > facilea thing it was to delude, and deceive Saul, even by those that as yet Saul faw nothing, but stood waiting like a drown'd Puppet to hear what would be the iffue, for all he understood was from her cunning and lying relation. And so either thus far it is manifest that they were in distinct rooms, or there was nothing that he could fee. 3. The next thing is, he faith, benot afraid, what faweft thou ? that is, though I be Saul, yet be not afraid, I have fworn, and thou shalt receive no harm, but what sawest thou? As who should say, I see nothing as yet at all, but I suppose thou hast seen fomething; for otherwise his question doth not agree with the words the Woman spake before. But however it is manifest that as yet he faw nothing, and therefore rationally it must be supposed that they were in distinct rooms, or that there was nothing visible, that he could see. Further, his question is not in the present tense but of the time palt, what sawest thou? or what hast thou seen? which could not be congruously spoken, if they had been both in one room, but however do undeniably conclude that as yet he faw nothing at all. 4. The next is the Womans lying and forged answer, thereby to magnifie her own craft, and the more to amuse and aftonish poor deluded Saul, saying ; Behold I saw gods ascending out of the earth. Well, it is still apparent that as saul could not before see Samuel, now he neither seeth these Gods she telleth him of, nor any such thing: So that all that he apprehended was from her forged Stories, for he faw nothing as yet, either because he was not in the same room with her, or that there was no visible apparition. 5. Then he maketh another absurd question, like a difracted Man in the house of Bethlem, saying, what form to be of ? when his question should have been, what forms are they of? for the spoke of Gods which are plural, and more than one, but he asketh in the lingular, what form to be of. By all which it is manifest, that he yet saw nothing at all. For when we plainly see a thing, we do not usually ask others what form it is of, because our eyes can inform us of that. So that he saw nothing, either because he was not in the same room, or that there appeared nothing that was visible. 6. Now after all these ambigous lies, and delatory cheats, the crafty quean doth begin to come more near, to give satisfaction to the blinded expectation of Saul, who all this while stood gaping to fee the appearance of Samuel, and so the tells him (who was fit to believe any thing, though never so absurd, or impossible) behold an old man comes up, and he is covered with a mantle. In the beginning of the action, the Text saith, and when the woman saw Samuel, she cried out, then she said, she saw gods ascending out of the earth, and now after all this discourse and expense of time samuel is but coming up, all was lies and delayes the more to blind and delude the poor credulous King. But yet thus far it is plain that Saul law nothing at all, and so must needs all this while, either be in anotherroom, or else for certain there was no apparition visible, and all the satisfaction that he had, was from the lying stories the Woman told him. Now let Mr. Glanvil confider and answer, whether it be not only intimated, but clearly holden forth in the Text that either they were in two distinct rooms, or that nothing visible did appear before Saul. 7. Now after all this the Text faith, and Saulperceived that it was Samuel, the Hebrew word doth fignifie to know or to perceive, and relates to the understanding: but how did heknow, or perceive that it was samuel? not by the light of his eyes, for we have made it plain that he was either in another room, or that no visible apparition presented it self before his eyes. but he only perceived it by the description of the crafty Woman. who knew well enough what habit or garments Samuel wore in his life time, as one that was the most publickly known Man in Ifrael: and therefore the subtil and crafty quean, knowing that Saul only required Samuel to be brought up and no other, doth at the last frame her tale agreeable to Sauls desire, and so describes him an old Man, covered with a mantle, and fuch an one Saul had known him to be, while he was living. But if saul had feen any fuch thing as the shape or form of Samuel, then the Hebrew Verb thrice used in that action, that properly signifieth to see with the eyes, would have been used in this place (as well as when it relateth what the faw) and not the verb for knowing or perceiving that relateth to the mind, and Samuel he faw not, but only believed the lies she told him. For otherwise it would have been, And Saul faw Samuel, and not, Saul perceived that it was Samuel, which he could not do but only by her relation, and forged tales. 8. The last thing in this action, is, that Saul flooped with his face to the ground, and bowed himself: now to what did he stoop and bow, feeing he had feen nothing with his own eyes, neither knew any thing that appeared, but as the Woman told him? Could it be to any thing but to an imaginary Samuel and fuch an one as the had described, whom he conceited in his Phantasie to be camuel himfelf? Surely in rational confequence it could be nothing elfe. For all that the had done and faid before, being undeniably lies and cheats, this also in just and right reason, must be judged to be so alfo. So that it was either the Woman, that being in another room, did change and alter her voice, and so plaid the part of Samuel, or else that she had a confederate knave, whom she turned out to act the part of dead Samuel.

6. The last thing that we shall handle concerning this controverted subject, is the examination of the grounds and reasons of those that are of a different judgment, which may be comprised in these three several heads. i. Some do conceive that it was the Body of Samuel that was raifed up, and acted by his foul or by Satan. 2. Some hold that it was Samuels Soul that appeared in the shape, and habit, that he had living. 3. Others do politively affirm that it was the Devil that assumed the shape of Samuel, and so acted the whole business, by a compact betwirt him and the Woman. These we shall confute in order.

1. That it was not the Body of Samuel that was railed up, nor the Soul joyned with it, that acted Samuels part, is manifeft from these reasons. 1. Because Samuels Body had lain too long in the grave, for some account it near two years, and therefore must needs in a great part be corrupted, walted and disfigured, that none could have certainly known that it was Samuel. 2. It must have been so putrified and ftinking, that none could have endured near it, for the noisome and horrible smell. 3. Who should have covered it with the mantle, which had it been buried with him, must in so long a time, have been rotten and confumed? Surely there were no Tavlors in the Grave, to make him a new one, but (in reason and likelihood) if it had been his Body, it should have appeared in Linnen, or a winding fleet, if that had not been rotten likewise. 4. To raife a Body, fo long dead, must needs have required an om-Philipp. 3. 21. nipotent power, for it is the Almighty power of Christ alone, that raiseth up the vile Bodies of his Saints, and maketh them like his glorious Body. And therefore neither the woman with all her Divinations, nor all the Devils in Hell, nor any created power, but the Lord Almighty, could have wrought this miracle, who would never have done it, to gratifie the humour, or to magnifie the cheating craft of an idolatrous, wicked and couzening Witch. And if the Devil or any created power could raise up the Body of a departed Saint, then the rifing out of the Graves of many Bodies of Saints, that had flept, and their coming into the holy City, and appearing unto many, after Christ was risen from the dead, had been no certain, or convincing argument, of the undoubted truth of the Divinity and Refurrection of our most Bleffed Saviour. But they were most infallible evidences of them both, as saith the Father S. Hierome in these words, sie multacorpora fantsorum refurrexerunt, ut dominum oftenderent refurgentem, & tumen cum monumenta aperta funt, non ante resurrexerumt quam resurgeret dominue, ut esset primogenitus resurrectionis à mortuh. 5. That it was not Samuels Soul joyned with the Body, that acted this, we thus argue: That Tenent that is flatly contrary to the plain Doctrine of the Scripture, must needs be falle. But this tenent of Samuels Soul acting in the Body after death, is flatly contrary to the plain Doctrine of the Scripture, ergo it is false. The major (we suppose) no Oxthodox Christian can justly deny; and the minor is proved thus. The Scrip-Revel. 14-13. ture doth affure us, that those that die in the Lord (as without all doubt Samuel did) are bleffed, and rest from their labours. Therefore must this Tenent be abominably faile: for if the Soul of Samuel, after his death had been brought again to act in the Body, then he had not rested from his labours, but had been disquieted, and brought to new trouble, to have been vexed to have feen sunt committing more wickedness than before, in taking counsel from a curfed Idelatrous Woman, such as the Lord had commanded to be destroyed. And there is no one point in all this transaction of suil with the Witch, that speaketh her Imposture more apparently than where this counterfeit Samuel faith, Why hast thou disquieted me? As though the Saints of God after death could be disquieted by a Devil, or a Witch, who (according to Gods infallible truth) are blessed, and rest from their labours, and are in the hands of the Lord, where no Torments can touch them. And therefore none would have spoken those lying words, but a devilish cheating quean, or a damnable suborned consederate.

6. If Samuels Soul was again joined to his body so long after separation, and so performed vital actions, who was the author of this conjunction or union? could the Witch or the Devil or any created power effect that union? Surely not, nonebut the almighty power of Jehovah, who breathed into Adam the breath of life. And therefore we are bold to affert (with all the company of learned Christians) that this opinion is erroneous, impious and blasshemous.

2. The second opinion, that it was Samuels Soul that appeared in his wonted shape and habit, that he wore while he lived, hath been strenuously maintained by the Popish party, and as strongly confuted by the reformed Divines. But we shall not trouble our selves and our readers with them all, but only urge two or three that are most cogent, thereby to answer Mr. Glanvils fopperies, and they are these. I. If it were samuels Soul that appeared, it cannot be supposed to come contrary, or whether God would or not, for hardly any rational Man (we believe) will affirm that, because God doth whatfoever he will, both in Heaven and Earth, and who hath relisted his will? 2. And it cannot be rationally thought that Samuel, who whilst he lived, was so punctually careful to do nothing (especially in his prophetick office) but what he was commanded of God, would after his death run an errand without his confent or licence. 2. And that his Soul did not come by the command of God is most certain: Though Mr. Glanvil ask the question, who saith that happy departed Souls were never imployed in any ministeries here below? To which (though we have answered it before) we now again reply, that all learned Divines of the reformed Churches have faid, and maintained it, and so do we both fay and affirm, that they never were nor are imployed in mimisteries here below, because never created, nor ordained of God, for any such end or purpose, but there are legions of Angels, that are ordained to be ministring Spirits, and not the Souls of the Saints departed this life. But Mr. Glanvil goeth further, and faith, that Samuel was not raised by the power of the Witches inchantments, but came on that occasion on a Divine errand. And though we have before unanswerably proved in the general, that no Souls of those that are dead do after death appear, or wander here below, nor come such sleveless errands, as he supposeth: yet we shall add one or two here in particular, to prove that Samuels Soul came not on a Divine errand as fent by God, without which mission it could not have come at all. 4. For fourthly, if Mr. Glanvil had proved by any argument, or colour of reason, that his Soul had come upon such a

Divine errand it had been something, but he hath only laid down an affirmation, without either proof, reason or authority, and we may with as good reason deny it, as he affirm it, for bare affirmations prove nothing at all. 5. It is manifest that God in all his ordinances of providence, especially in the order of his miracles, doth work chiefly to confirm and witness truth, for that (as the worthy and learned Stilling fleet hath observed) is the most proper criterium of a miracle ; and to fend a Soul from the dead must needs be miraculous. Now if the chief end in Gods working of miracles (for none else but he can work them) be to establish truth, and lettle his own Divine and pure worship, then it cannot be to uphold lies and Idolatrous courses. But if God should have sent samuels Soul on a Divine errand, when the Witch was practifing her Diabolical Divinations and cheating tricks, it had been to have countenanced and confirmed both Saul, and the Witch, in their wicked wayes, and to have contradicted his own law and command, which did positively order, that all that used Divinations should be put to death, and all those that sought for counsel from them to be severely punished. Now let Mr. Glanvil, or any other prove, that God orders that to be done by the dead, which he forbad to be done by the living. 6. If it had been the true Samuel that appeared, it is not rational, nor credible to imagine, that he would neither rebuke saul for confulting with a Woman that pra-Rised those things, that were forbidden by the law upon pain of death; nor that he would either reprove, or punish so wicked a Woman, finding her in the very act. We say it is not credible, unless we suppose samuel less zealous for the law and commands of God, being dead, than he was for them being living. Surely he 1 Sam. 15:33 that living hewed Agag in pieces, only because God had commanded he should be flain, would (if it had been the true Samuel, which without all question it was not) have done as much or worse, to the curfed and Idolatrous cheating Witch, though after his death, if he had come upon a Divine errand. 7. God should have shewed himself very mutable, if he had answered saul in a miraculous way by a dead Prophet, that had refused to answer him by one living. And Samuel while living knew certainly that the Lord had rejected Saul from being King over Israel, and had testified unto him, that the strength of Israel would not lie, and that he was not like a man that be fould repent. But ifit had been the true Samuel that had been sent to speak to saul, he knowing both by his own knowledge and relation of Saul himself, that God had refused to answer him by Prophets, must in that conference both have made God a liar, and mutable, and also himself, who living had testified the contrary, and therefore it could not be either the true Samuel nor his Soul. 8. It is manifelt that the Lord had before withdrawn his good Spirit from Saul, and an evil one from the Lord was come upon him, and therefore it was no way probable, that the Lord would in a miraculous manner answer such a wicked person, whom he had utterly rejected as a reprobate. Neither is it like that God would shew him an extraordinary favour by a dead Prophet, that would not vouchsafe him his Spirit in an ordinary way. And Samuel that came not at him for a long time (though but a little distance asunder) while he lived, was not like to make so long a iourney in a Divine errand to visit him after his death. 9. And if Abraham at the request of the rich Man would not fend Lazarus to warn his brethren, lest they should come into that place of torment, which bore with it a fair shew both of Charity and Piety; much less would God give way (or samuel be desirous to come) to fend a bleffed Soul from its relt for fuch a frivolous matter, and in no wife to connive at the wickedness of both saul and the Witch, and never move either of them to the amendment of their lives. 10. Where doth Mr. Glanvil find it mentioned in any part of Scripture? or where is it recorded in the writings of any reformed or Orthodoxal Divines? or where in any of their works is it declared, that ever any bleffed Soul after death, was either fent. or did come upon a Divine errand to any here below? Is it not monstrous considence (not to say impudence) to utter such groundless affertions, without any proof, reason, or authority at all? Let all learned and judicious persons consider and judge.

2. That the Devil assumed the shape of samuel, and acted the whole business, is the opinion of all, or the most of the learned Divines of the reformed Churches, of whom we shall crave pardon. if we diffent from them, it being no fundamental of Religion, nor any Article of the Faith. And this we profess is not done out of the spirit of contradiction, nor for singularity, but only because (as we conceive) the Tenent hath no sufficient grounds neither from Scripture nor found reason, to support it, and therefore we shall labour its confutation, by these ensuing arguments.

1. Because this opinion, that the Devil should perform this apparition, doth beg two suppositions, never yet sufficiently proved, and that have in them no certain truth. For first they take for an Hypothesis, that Devils are meerly and simply incorporeal Spirits, which we shall prove hereafter to be false. Secondly they take for another Hypothesis, that Spirits and Devils can assume what bodies they please, and appear in any figure or shape, which is a meer figment invented by the doating Schoolmen, as we shall fufficiently make good hereafter.

2. We are not of their opinion, that think, that the Devils do move, and rove up and down in this elementary world at their pleafure, to act what they lift, and appear when, how and in what shapes they please, for then the World would be full of nothing almost but apparitions, and every corner replenished with their ludicrous tricks, as formerly in the times of blind Popery and ignorance, there was no discourse almost, but of Fairies, Hobgoblins, apparitions, Spirits, Devils and Souls, ranting in every house, and playing feats in every Town and Village, when it was nothing but the superstitious superstitious credulity, and ignorant fancies of the people, joined with the Impostures of the Priests and Monks. And if this were true, then how should Men know a true natural substance or body, from these fictitious apparitions? Nay how could a Man have known his Father or Mother, his Brethren or Sisters, his Kinsmen or Neighbours? might they not as well have believed them to be Phantalms, and assumed bodies, as real and true creatures?

CHAP. VIII

2. But though fain Angels in respect of their malice, wicked wills, and envious desires whereby they seek (as much as in them lies) the ruine of all mankind both in Soul and Body, may in that particular end and regard, be faid to be like roaring Lions going about and seeking whom they may devour, and compassing the earth and walking to and fro in it : yet we must affirm that in respect of executing their wicked, envious and malicious wills and defires, they are restrained, nay kept in the chains of everlalting darkness, from which fetters and chains they go not out, but when and so far as they are sent, ordered, licensed (or as fome would have it worded) permitted, by the purpose and decree of the Divine and Almighties providence. So that it is most certain, that the faln Spirits cannot go forth of their chains, when they lift, to act what mischief they would, contrary to the will of the Almighty, who hath fettered, and still keeps them in those chains: but when they areat any time let loofe, it is only by the will, decree, licence and order of Jehovah, who fends them forth to accomplish his will, either for punishment to the wicked to inflict upon them his just judgments, for which they are the appointed ministers and executioners, and in the performance of these offices of his wrath, they are limited and bounded how far they shall proceed, and no further; or elethey are lent forth to tempt, or afflict the godly for the trial of their faith, and herein they are so restrained and bounded by the power of the Almighty as they cannot act one jot beyond the limit of his commands or Commissions, as is manifest in the case of David, who was tempted by Satan to number the people, and in the affliction of Job, wherein he was bounded how far he should act, and no further. And when the evil Angels are thus sent forth, and limited by God, what, and how far they shall act, it is always for just and righteous ends, as in the case of Ahab, when a lying Spirit was sent by God into the mouths of his Prophets, that he might be persuaded to go up to Ramath Gilead that he might be slain there, or as it was for a judgment and destruction upon Sennacheribs Army, that Jerufalem might befaved and freed, and he sent back with shame and confusion into his own countrey, or it is to manifest his glory, goodness and mercy to his Saints, To David was moved to number the people, that falling under that temptation, and he and the people therefore plagued, might be brought to a greater degree of repentance, and to know that their defence stood not in the multitude of men, but in the benignity of Jehovah, who was their strength and their defender, and to Job was to fore afflicted, that his Faith and Patience might be made manifelt, and remain for an example to all succeeding posterities. But it is utterly irrational and incredible that God would fend the Devil (without whole million he could not have done it) to appear in the hape of samuel, either to magnific the skil, or practice of a lewd, wicked, and Idolatrous Woman, which thing he had forbidden by his plain and open law, nor to gratifie the curiofity of a wretched Reprobate, fuch as was saul, whom he had denied to answer by living Prophets, and therefore would not anfwer him by the apparition of a Devil, to have committed a counterfeit Impolture, in the shape of holy Samuel. And therefore we conclude, that it was no apparition of the Devil, but meerly the Imposture of the Woman, either alone, or with a Confederate.

There is also a fourth opinion concerning the transaction of this Woman of Endor, that holds, that it was neither the Body, or Soul of Samuel that was raifed up, neither the Devil that appeared in his shape, nor that it was the Imposture of the Witch alone, of with a Confederate, but that it was the Sydereal, or Astral Spirit (as they are pleased to term it) of Samuel that was made to appear, and speak by the art and skill of the Woman. But because this Tenent is not of much Antiquity, nor hath many affertors of it, as also because it taketh that for an Hypothesis, to wit, that there are three parts in Man, the Body, Soul, and Spirit; and that the Soul goeth immediately after death either to Heaven of Hell, the Body to the grave, and that the Spirit doth for a certain time after death wander in the air, and may be (by a certain kind of art,) brought to appear visibly, and to give answers of all things that it knew living, which as yet bath never been sufficiently proved, therefore we shall pass it over here, having (perhaps) occafion to speak of it more largely hereafter.

We shall now come to mention some places in the New Testament that are produced by some, thereby to prove the great power of Devils and Witches in transferring and carrying bodies in the air, as is that of our Saviours temptation, where it is faid that the Devil took him into an exceeding high Mountain, and that he fet him upon the pinnacle of the Temple in Jerusalem, from whence they thus argue: That if the Devil had power to carry our most bleffed Saviour in the air into an high mountain, and to fet him upon the pinnacle of the Temple, that much more hath he power to carry the bodies of Witches who are his sworn vassals in the air, whither he pleaseth, or they desire. To annul the force of which objection we give these reasons.

1. If it were granted that the Devil did transport out Saviour Reaf. to in the air, yet it will not follow that he can at any time when he pleaseth carry the Bodies of Men or Women so likewise, for no particular proposition will, according to the rules of art, infer a general or universal conclusion, nor one example or instance inductively prove a general practice; one Swallow doth not make # and in a vision, yet we shall not altogether stand upon that, but if it be granted that it was corporeal and visible, yet it doth not appear that our Saviour was in his Body carried by the power of the Devil in the air, either to the top of an high mountain, nor fet upon the pinnacle of the Temple in Jerufalem, and that for these reasons. 1. Our Saviour did not go to undertake this combat with Satan unwillingly, that he need be constrained, or carried to try the utmost power word raenaussien, which may fignific affumpfit, he took him, and fet him upon a pinnacle of the Temple, and took him into an high mountain; yet it cannot be understood thereby that he took him, and carried his Body, but that he went before, and led Christ to those places, that he thought most fit for him to prevail in his temptations, to which places Christ went not by an unwilling constraint or hurried and carried in the air, but by a ready willingness, as one that certainly knew, and was affured, that he should win the Victory where ever, or how great soever the combat and temptations were. And therefore S. Luke useth the same word from the Holy Choft did descend like a Dove, and light upon him, in will not follow, that in all other of his actions of preaching, or Matth 4. 16. Working of miracles, the holy Spirit thould appear also in the form Luke 3, 22. of a Dove, nor when other Saints are Baptized will it follow that Judg 15-15 it doth, or should elwaies appear in the same form. 2, If it were granted that the Devil did carry Christs Body in the air, it will not follow that he can do fo at any other times, when he plealeth, because in the temptation of Christ there was an extraordinary dispensation of God for the same, which cannot be presupposed in the ordinary transportation of Witches, and therefore the argument falls quite to the ground.

3. In the actions of Satan (especially in elementary things, for we freak not of the acts of his will) the will, order and licence of God is chiefly to be considered, because his power (in respect of execution) is under the power of the Almighty, so that he can do nothing in this respect but what he is ordered and commanded to do, And therefore the end of the action is principally to be regarded ; for if God should have given way that Christ should be carried by Satan in the air, it was for a glorious and good end. that the obedience of his will to the Father might be shown, and that his victory over the Devil might be made manifest: but in carrving the Bodies of Witches in the air, there can be no good, just or pious end wherefore the Devilshould be licensed, or permitted to carry them in the air, except it were to promote filthiness and abominable wickedness, which were abourd and blasphemous to imagine. And therefore we may rationally and plainly conclude, that the carrying of the Bodies of Witches in the air, by the power of the Devil, is a falle, wicked and impious opinion.

4. Some are of opinion that this whole transaction was visible, fensible and corporeal, as Theophylast, and many others. Some are of opinion that it was wholly in a Vision. And some take a middle way that it was partly sensible and visible, and partly mental, and by way of vision. Of which opinion the great Cameron seems to be, who compares it with that of Exekiel who faith: And the spirit listed me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem : And sheweih that the word 'Asaxon, doth agree with the Hebrew word አመጋ, which is as applicable to lifting up or carrying in a vision, as to bodily transportation. And that it was either altogether, or partly in a vision, the learned Beza gives us this note : Hoe videtur fatte oftendere hae omnia per visionem quandam, non corporali transvettione & oftensione esse gesta, quomodo nempe humanitus videre potuisset omnia regna orbie, & gloriam corum in momento? But though it be the more found and rational opinion that the whole transaction was mental, and malice of the Devil, but readily and willingly by the conduct and leading of the holy Spirit, for the Text faith in Matthew; Marth. 4. 1 Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness, to be tempted dyw, duco, both for the Spirits, and Satans Teading, as fignifying no more, but to go before, and lead the way, or to draw one to fuch or such a place by persuasion and desire, and not to be carried in the air, which appeareth to be a vain and forged interpretation, and not the true meaning of the places. Concerning Simon Mague we have before in this Treatife sufficiently proved that he was only a deceiver and Impoltor, and what strange feats he had done to astonish, and stupisie the Samaritanes. were only jugling knacks, or deceits by confederacy, and no supernatural things, so that here we will say no more, but only add: That though our English translation say that he bewitched the people of samaria with forceries, and that he himself, when he beheld the miracles and figns that were done, wondered, yet the word that they translate in the one place bewitching, and in the other wondered, are both from one Thema which is 'agismus, de flatu mentie dejicio, facio ut aliquie mente non constet, perterrefacio, obstupefacio. And therefore either it ought to be that the Samaritanes were altonisht at the feats that Simon wrought, and that he himself was astonish at the miracles of Philip, or that they were both bewitched, for they were both under the same amazement. and there is no reason at all to give it one sense in one place, and a different one in the other.

We need not here say any thing of Elymas who is stiled a Magician. because it is manifest that he was a false Prophet, full of all subtilty, and all mischief, a Child of the Devil, and an enemy of all righteoulnels: which character truly given to him by the un-erring lentence of S. Paul, may be really ascribed to the whole tribe and profession of such kind of seducers and deceivers. Like unto whom Ads 19. 13. were those feven sons of Sceva a Jew, who are called exercifes, that took upon them to call over them that had evil spirits, the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth, but were foundly beaten for their pains, a fit reward for fuch vagabonds; And if all that profess or practise such wicked, vain and lying things were duely punished, the poor ignorant people would not be so much abused as they are.

The other places in the New Testament we have handled, and answered, and also have touched upon that Text in the Galathians where we spoke of Fascination, but lest it be not sufficient, we shall handle it fully here. The words are, o foolish Galathians, who hath bewitched you, that you should not obey the truth? From whence they use thus to argue: If Witchcraft in the Apostles time had not been known, and practifed, he would not have made use of that Phrase then; concerning which we return these responsions.

1. If we consider natural Fascination was by the Philosophers and Poets only taken to be contagious steams flowing from the eyes, or breaths of malevolent and envious persons, that had some infectious discases, as we see in the Plague, Small-pox, Lues Venerea, foreness of Eyes, Tinea's, and the like, which are contagious to others that lie with them, or converse near them, the infected atomes or steams issuing in a certain Sphear of activity, are received by the pores, or mouths of the found persons, by which they come to be infected alfo. And this the Poet witneffed: Nescio quis teneros oculm mihi fascinat agnos. Now this being the common opinion, the Apolile taketh the metaphor from thence, as who should say who with their virulent and poylonous opinions have infected you, that you should not obey the truth. And this is the genuine meaning of that metaphorical phrase, and no other sense can rationally and congruously be put upon the place, and this conduceth nothing to that opinion of Witchcraft that we oppose. For Philo- Delrio. 1. 3. fophica fen Physica fascinatio non nisi impropriè dici potest Afcinatio, 9.4 fill. i. propriè verò est contagio, sen insettio. And therefore did the learn. ed Vallesime to the same purpose speak this. Sed neg; si quie pestilenti affectue febri, aut etiam fine febre deferens secum seminaria peftie alium intuens intuentem inficiat, dicetur fascinasse, sed pefte affecisse.

CHAP. VIII.

2. Some of the fathers (which may be offered for an objection) do feem to hold that S. Paul here meant of diabolical fascination. and fo Tertullian in English thus: For there is also something a. Vid. Jo. Lamongst the Gentiles to be seared, which they call sascination, be- 34r. Gattier. ing a more unfortunate event of praise, and great glory: this we sometimes interpret of the Devil. And S. Hierome faith upon this place: Fascination is when some things by Magical illusions are shewed to the eyes of Men, otherwise than they are. Also Fascination is vulgarly called that, which doth hurt Children, for the eyes of certain persons are said to burn with looking, and this act of theirs is called Fascination, and it may be that the Devils are subfervient to this Sin. And Thomas Aquinas faith: And this also may be done by Devils, who have power of moving falle imaginations, and bringing them to the principles of the Senses, by changing the Senses themselves. From whence we may note these things. 1. That Tertullian faith that they sometimes interpret this of the Devil, but how truly or upon what grounds he sheweth not, and it seemeth that sometimes they did interpret it of something else, for so his words must needs imply. 2. Secondly, S. Hierome sometime calleth fascination Magical illusions, and sometime that which doth hurt Children, by the burning of some eyes; and then comes in with a may be that the Devils are subservient to this sin. So that he is not certain in his opinion, nor truly knows what fascination is, but according to vulgar opinion, or blind conjectures. 3. And all that the Angelical Doctor faith, doth but amount to the delution of the Senies, by falle imaginations, so that here is no proof either of the Devil, or his instruments, to cause any real fascination.

3. Those that hold that Paul did allude unto natural, or diabo- vid. Guttiri lick fascination, do but mean magical illusions, whereby the sen- passimfee are abused and deceived, to take things to be that which really they are not, and so are but cheating incantations and delusory Juglings, for as Galen (if that piece be truly his) faith: Incan- Galen de Me tationes verba sunt decipientia rationales animas secundum spei in cantal. ceptionem, aut secundum timoris incisionem. So that though S. Paul had taken the metaphor from that which was commonly accounted fascination, there is no necessity, that therefore the metaphor must in all points be true: it is sufficient that the common opinion was so, from whose usage of such terms the Apostle useth the word, to fascinate, or inchant. And of this opinion was S. Hierome himfelf who faith thus much : Digne Paulum, qui etft imperitus eft fermone non tamen & scientia, debemus exponere non quod scierit effe fascinum, qui vulgo putatur nocere, sed usus sermone sit trivit, & ut in catero, ita & in boc quoq, loco verbum quotidiana fermocinationis assumpserit. So that from hence it is most evident, that the using of the word fascination by the Apostle, doth not inferr the being of the thing, but only the opinion of the vulgar, that believed things that were not. And of the same judgment is Tho. mas Aquinas in these words : Proprie dicit Apostolus, quie vos fascinavit ? quasi dicat, vos estis sicut homo ludificatue qui res manifestas aliter accipit quam fint inrei veritate. Therefore we shall conclude this point with the sentiment of S. Hierome: Nunc illud in canfa eft, quod ex opinione vulgi sumptum putamus exemplum, ut quomodo tenera atm noceri dicitur fascino, sic etiam Galata in Christi side nupernati, & nutriti laste, & solido cibo velut quodam fasci-

4. But howfoever fascination might be understood, yet it is plain, that except the Effinvia or steams of Bodies that had contagious diseases, entring into other sound Bodies, and thereby in-feeding them with their noysome vapours, or Atomes, there is nothing, but what was vain belief and credulous superstition, as the learned Vallesine tells us in these words, thus rendered in English: "But if this be the way or reason of fascination, any one may easily "understand, that fascination is a certain superstitious fear, arising " from foolish credulity, of which fort are many other things in the "life of Man, as for argument, that this opinion is more approved "of by Women than by Men, and far more of the unlearned than of "the learned. Although (he saith) I also see that there are those "amongst the learned that are rather lovers of subtilty than verity, " who take care to defend those things that the vulgar do admire. By "which they would be accounted judicious magical Juglers, and "Men skilful of fecrets. And therefore he thus concludeth. There-"fore the name of fascination is ancient, and according to the an-"cient fignification, it doth not fignifie any natural disease, but a "vain superstition, arising from vulgar opinion, and therefore nei-"ther Hippocrates, nor Galen, nor any of the ancient Phylicians, "that I know of do mention fascination, neither amongst the dif-"ferences nor causes of Diseases. From whence again is taken " no small argument of its vanity. Therefore we shall conclude this "point with that remarkable faying of Galen. Falfa etenim opiniones animas bominum praoccupantes, non solum surdos, sed & cacos faciunt, ita ut videre nequeant, que alie conspicua apparent.

5. The Angelical Doctor with the consent of the most part of all the learned do affirm that the Devil by his own power cannot change corporcal matter, unless he apply proportionate actives to fit passives, to produce those effects he intendeth; As for instance, he can cause burning, because there is a combustive agent in nature; CHAP. IX. supposed Witchcrast.

but if that were awanting, or if there were no combustible matter, how should he cause any ignition? But if he be supposed to work diabolical fascination, for which there is no agent in nature, it being but an imaginary thing in the heads of the deluded vulgara then it will necessarily follow, that he can work no fascination at all, and so the whole opinion of the Witchmongers falls to the ground. For it is manifest that there is contagion, by the infested Efflavia or steams issuing from a diseased Body to another by which it may be contaminated, but otherwise there is no natural fascination, nor any agent in nature to produce that effect, and therefore there can be no Diabolical fascination at all.

CHAP. IX.

Here is no one thing that hath more promoted this false and wicked Tenent of a kind of omnipotency in Devils, and the exorbitant power ascribed to Witches, than the misunderstanding of the true and right Doctrine of Divine Providence, and the admitting of a bare permission in God as different and distinct from his providence. From whence it cometh to pass that not only the vulgar, but such astread in the steps of Arminim, do hold a meer bare permission, and that God sits as a quiet beholder by his Prescience from the event of things to see what will be effected by Devils and wicked Men, who in the mean time run and rove about, acting what, when and how they please, and that God hath neither hook in their nostrils, nor bridle in their mouths, neither keeps them in any restraint, order or government, and so we must needs have a mad rule in this World, during this permission and naked inspe-

But that we may proceed in such order, as may be clear and intelligible to the Readers, we shall here propose the state of the matter that we undertake to confute, which is this: That there is not in God a nude, passive permission, separate from the positive and active decree, order and will of his Divine Providence and Government, but that he doth rule all things according to the power and determination of his own politive and actual will. And this we shall prosecute in this following order and particulars.

Those that deny that there is in God a passive permission separate from his decretive and actual will in his providence are accused by others, thereby to infer the absurdity, that God is the author or efficient cause of sin; which pretended absurdity, in truth and reason cannot be any, because it is a simple and absolute impossibility, that

God should be the author of sin as these arguments do sufficiently

1. That of necessity must be false, which the Scriptures do declare to be fo, in open and plain terms. But that God should be the author of fin or evil, the Scriptures do deny in open and plain

James 1. 13. terms, as where the Text faith: God cannot be tempted with evil! where both the act, and the possibility of it is absolutely denied.

Again : For thon art not a God that haft pleasure in wickednes, nei-P(al. 5. 4. ther fhall evil dwell with thee. Therefore it is falle that God is, or Deut. 32. 3.

can be the author of fin 3 and fo by consequence the supposed abfurdity is a meer impossibility; and an absurdity urged that is impossible, is most of all absurd.

Argum. 2. 2. He isens summe perfettum & quicquid eft in Deo, eft Dem; but sin howsoever understood, or accepted, is an imperfection, defect and an aberration from a just and perfect rule, and therefore it is simply impossible that God can be the cause of any thing that is imperfect, finful or evil, if fin be confidered as malum

3. God is not under any binding law given to him by some other, Argum. 3. for then he frould cease to be supream, independent and omnipotent : Now to whom there is no law given to observe, there can be no transgression, for the Apoulle saith, where there is no law, there is no transgression; and therefore it is simply impossible that God should be the author, or causer of sin, or evil, because there is no law that he can transgress against.

4. God prohibiteth and hateth fin, as the Scriptures do every Argum. 4. where testifie, but God is the cause of nothing but that which he loveth, and therefore cannot be the cause of the evil of sin. And to speak properly sin hath no efficient cause, but a desicient, such as is the will oftain Angels, and wicked Men, whose irregularity of will, from the command of God, is all the cause that sin and evil hath or can have. An efficient cause is only of those things that are good, because every efficient cause doth by working put something in being: But privations (of which fort are fins) do put nothing in being, but do truly note the absence of beings. Therefore did S. Augustine say well: Mali causa efficiens nulla est, sed tantum de. De Civitat.

Dii, 1. 2. 4.7. ficiens. Argum. 5. 5. That which properly hath an efficient cause, hath also an end properly so called: But sin hath not an end properly so called, because the end is being, and therefore good, and the persection of the thing. But the Scripture doth declare that all things that God created were exceeding good; and that the cause of sin was Man, and the Devil; for the text faith, that the Devil was a murderer from John 8. 44. the beginning, and abode not in the truth: And again, He that committeth sin, is of the Devil, for the Devil sinneth from the beginning. Therefore from hence it is clear, that God neither is nor can be the author or causer of sin. 6. That which God is the author of, doth not make Man worle, order that respecteth God, as the ultimate end of all things; but fib precate, a 30 God doth incline all things unto himself, as to the ultimate end, neither doth he turn them from himself, because he is summum bonum. And further as Fulgentine faith : Deme non eft ejne rei au. Fulgentelle te tor, cujus eft ultor. At Dem eft peccati ultor, ergo non autor. And ad Monim.

but fin doth make Man worle, therefore God is not the author of therefore we conclude, that this is a vain pretence of an absurdity, because it is impossible that God should be the author or causer of

This plaufible pretence to feem to be zealous, not to make God the author of fin, we commend as allowable; but it is but like the zeal of the Scribes and Pharifees, which was without knowledge, because they pretend that for an absurdity, that is a simple imposfibility. And they ought to remember the argument of Job, which is this: will ye speak wickedly for God? and talk deceitfully for Job 13.71 him? For as we ought not to suppose, or imply him to be the author of fin; so we ought not to rob him of his Glory, by detracting from his power and providence, nor in ascribing that unto Creatures, that is only due unto the Creator; as those do that hold a nude passive permission in him separate from his will and decree in his providence. Neither doth the denying of this any way imply that he is the author of fin, for a providential permission we allow as the act of his will and decree, as we shall shew hereafter.

Now concerning permission in God, being a suspension of his efficiency in regard of some acts permitted to the creatures, and that for just and good ends, the definition of it and its affections or properties are so darkly handled even by those that make most ado about it, that it would serve rather to divert Men from the right way than to guide them in it, or unto it. Therefore here we shall only note these three things, and pursue it more fully hereaster. 1. There must be the person or power permitting that hath ability, right and authority fo to do. 2. There must be the person or power permitted that hath ability to perform the thing permitted, otherwise it would be in vain, and to no purpose. 3. There must be the thing or action that is permitted to be done, or brought to país, by the person permitted to act, and that must not be impossible.

1. Before the Creation it is meerly improper to attribute permiffion unto God, because there was no person, nor power besides himfelf that could act any thing, and therefore could not be permitted, and so the correlative being awanting, both the relative and the relation betwixt them must necessarily fall to the ground, as having no existence; and so it is impossible that permission should be in God when there was no Creature to be permitted, and so could not be attributed unto him before the Creation.

2. It is as improper to attribute permission unto God in respect of the Phylical agency of fecond causes, because he not only work. eth all in all, and by his Divine concourse and conservative power fi-ftaineth lich. 1. 3. Sustaineth all things by the mord of his power, and Job tells us: If Job 34. 14.15. be gather unto himself his spirit and breath, all sless shall perish toge. ther, and man hall turn again into dust. Upon which place of the Hebrews S. Chrysosome saith thus: Feratq, inquit omnia, hoc est, vid.cbryoshin gubernet omnia. Siquidem cadentia, & ad nibilum tendentia continet. Non enim minus est continere mundum quam fecise: Sed & oportet aliquid quod admirerie dicere, adbuc amplime eft. Nam in faciendo quidem, ex nullis extantibus rerum effentia producta funt : in continendo verò, ca que fatta funt, ne ad nibilum redeant continentur. Hac ergo dum reguntur, & ad invicem sibi repugnantia coaptantur, magnum & valde mirabile, plurimag, virtutie judicium declaratur: But also because he hath set all natural things their bounds, and ordered, decreed and determined their ends in acting. Now what he hath appointed, ordered and decreed to be the agency of every creature, and determinated its end in acting, cannot properly be called permission, but his will, ordination and providence. As if one should say he suffereth and permitteth the Sun and Moon to run their course, it is an improper expression and injurious to his wildom and power in his providential government of the creatures, seeing that it is a certain truth, Dens operatur in omni operante: And be bath appointed the Moon for seasons, and the Pial. 104-19. Sun knoweth his going down. And it is abfurd to fay he suffereth the Sea to Ebb and Flow, when he hath fet it a bound that it cannot passover. For he commandeth, and raiseth the stormy wind. Veile 9. which lifteth up the waves thereof. And said, hitherto shalt thou Pal. 107.25. come and no further: And here shall thy proud waves be staid. And again, Will ye not tremble at my presence saith the Lord, which have Jerem. 5.22. placed the fand for the bound of the fea, by a perpetual decree that it cannot passit, and though the maves thereof tos themselves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not pass over it. And therefore we may conclude that the whole Creation in respect of Physical agency is ruled according to those orders, and not by a fortuitous chance, or a bare passive permission. 1. For first all creatures have their Physical agency, and the affections and properties thereof ordained by God in the Creation, and according to this they constantly act, except they be turned, altered, or suspended by the Creator himself, and he doth immediately act in them all, and they cannot properly be faid to be permitted. 2. They are upholden, sustained and conserved in their several conditions, by the word of his mighty power, his continual concourse and divincemanation, which if it should but cease one minute, the whole Creation would fall into that nothing, from whence his Eternal and Omnipotent Fiat did raise and call them forth, so that we dare affirm with profound Bradwardine, Quod necesse est Deum servare quamibet Creaturam immediatiùs quacung; causa creata. 3. When he pleaseth 4.1.6.24.165 he doth suspend the effects and agency of natural causes, as in making the Sun stand still in the victory of Joshua, and of the three Children in the fiery Furnace. Sometimes he causeth them to act contrary to their innate powers and qualities, as in making the shaddow go ten Ilai 38. 8. degrees back in Abaz fin dial: and in causing the waters of the red fea, contrary to their natures, which are to tend downwards, so Exod. 14. 213 be divided, and to go backward, and to be as a wall on the right 22,23. band, and on the left, until Mofes, and the children of Ifrael were passed through. And by many other wayes and means doth he al- id. to 17. ter and change the course of natural agents, to serve his will and good pleasure in his mercy, or in his justice, and yet here is no bare or passive permission. 4. Besides these he ordereth all the particular acts of natural agents, to be subservient unto his will: So when Jonab fled to Tarshish, the Lord sent forth agreat wind into the sea, Jonah t. 4. and raised a mighty tempest to overtake Jonah; and when he was Id. 2. to. cast into the Sea, the Lord prepared a great fish to swallow him up, and also the Lord spake unto the fish, and it vomited up Jonah upon the dry land. Now the wind was not carried nor the storm raised, by a permissive power, but by the will and order of the Lord Jehovah, who sent them, and directed them either by his immediate power, or by the ministry of his Angels; and though they wrought according to their natural agency, yet the special ordering as to the particular act was not by permission, but by the will and appointment of his providence. Neither did the great fish come by chance or permission, but God in his merciful providence had prepared him for the prefervation of Jonah, and caused him to be vomited on the dry land; fo that all creatures do not only continue according to his ordinances, but also all elementary, and irrational creatures do praise the Lord by fulfilling his word, will and providence. And left we be either cenfured to wrest the Scriptures, or to be single in this opinion, take the judgment of some few others. S. Gregory (as he is quoted by learned Bradwardine) tells Gue id. Min. us thus much : Quie de Deo ifta vel despiens suspicetur, qui nimi- 4 rum dum fit femper omnipotens, fic intendit omnibus, ut affit fingulie; fic adeft fingulie, ut fimul omnibus nunquam defit ; fic itaqs exteriora circundat, ut interiora impleat; fic interiora implet, ut exteriora circundet ; fic summa regit, ut ima non deserat ; sic imir prafens eft, ut à superioribus non recedat. And Thomas Aquinas their great Schoolman (as the same author cites him) faith: Quod Thom. de chife: Deus immediate ordinat omnes effettus per seipsum, lices per causms Religion. 137 medias exequatur, sed in ipså executione quodammodo immediate se babet ad omnes effectus, in quantum omnes cause media agunt in virtute causa prima, ut quodammodo ipse iu omnibus agere videatur, O omnia opera secundarum cansarum ei possunt attribui, seut artifici attribuitur opus instrumenti. Therefore we will conclude this with that of S. Augustine: Proculdubio nullus est locus ab ejus prasentia absens; super omnem creaturam quippe prasidet regendo, subtwo eft omnia sustinendo, non pondere laborte, sed infatigabili virtute, quoniam nulla creatura ab eo condita per se subsiftere valet, nift ab illo suftentetur, qui cam creavit. Extra omnia eft, sed non exclus fus, intra omnia, fed non conclusus. And thefe places need no fiction of an Hebraism to expound them, nor no device of a verb of an active termination, and a permissive fignification to evade the pressure of this truth. And therefore in respect of Physical agency we are bold with Bradwardine to affert these three Corollaries.

1. Quod nulla res potest aliquid facere, sine Deo.

2. Quod nulla res potest aliquid facere, nifi Deus per fe & immediate facit illud idem.

3. Quod nulla res potest facere aliquid, wift Deut faciat illud

4. So that however permission may be understood, it must properly relate to intellectual and rational creatures, and that only and especially in respect of those actions which we call moral, that is, in regard of fin, evil or malum culpa; for whatfoever is malum pana. God is the author, causer and inflicter of, according to the Text: Shall there be evil in a City, and the Lord bath not done it? To understand aright the nature of permission, we are to consider the affections, properties and adjuncts of it, both in regard of the person permitting, the creature permitted to act, and the thing permitted to be done, with all the circumstances about them, and these we shall take from their Ring-leader and great Champion Arminius himfelf in thefe points.

s. And first in respect of the person permitting (he saith) it is necellary that he know, what, to whom, and the ability of performance, that is to be granted, or used, by the person permitted, and that the person permitting have power to permit and to impede, and also that he have the right and authority of permitting. 2. In the person permitted, it is necessarily requisite, that he have sufficient power to effect and perform the thing permitted, if not hindered; for otherwise it would be nonsense to say, that a person is permitted to do an act that he hath no power to perform. 3. If the person permitted have sufficiency of power to perform the act permitted, yet there is also required a propension and disposition in the person permitted, to perform the thing permitted, otherwise the permission as to that act would be without a certain end, and so would be in vagum, inconstant and not to be performed, and therefore he concludeth thus : Imo nec recte dici potest qued alient attus permittatur, qui attus illos prastandi affectu nullo tenepeccandum propensio, ante peccatum ejus primum. Sed negi in Angelis, qui à flatu suo ceciderunt. Secundo, ut ut dispositio, sive habitm insit qui inclinet ad agendum, non est ex natura dispositionis five babitus cujuscungs, ut faciat bominem propendere ad actum aliquem particularem, cujus vel solius ratione dicitur permissio. And though it be granted that God did create the Angels, and Adam in flatu labili, wherein they had a sufficiency of power or grace not to have finned, or fain, and though that power or grace was not withdrawn from them, and that there was no coaction upon their wills to inforce them to fin; for if it had been fo, their falls would have been no sia: so neither did God supply them with more assisting grace to have upholden them, for then their estate had not been labile, nor they in a possibility to sin. But it is manifest that they in their Creation were fet in equilibrio, and had equal power of freedom of will either to fin or not to fin, and so had no propension or disposition at all to commit that sin, to which they were lest by a free permission: and so propension and disposition to the act permitted (if permission be understood generally) had no place in the Angels nor Adam before their first sinning, according to the Text, God made man upright, that is like a straight or right line that fall. Eccks 7, 29. ing perpendicularly upon another right line, doth incline to neither end of the line upon which it falls, so Adam was made upright without any propension or inclination to sin at all. And if this propension and disposition be understood, and applied to Angels in their condition after their fall, then it is true they have not only an inclination but a most strong will and desire to commit more evil and mischief than God in his goodness permits them to perform, for the Devil goeth about like a roaring Lion seeking whom be may devour, and it was Satan that not only had a disposition, but defired to fift Peter as wheat. And it is manifest that wicked Men have a strong will and defire to commit mischief; but that God hath an hook in their Nostrils, and a Bridle in their Jawes wherewith he curbs and restrains them, that they cannot act out all the mischief that they intend, as is manifest in the example of Senuacherib and many others.

6. We shall omit the exceptions that the learned and subtile Dr. Twiffe hath made against diverse particulars in these passages, and shall only fix upon one that is manifestly falle (if he mean of permission in general which he confesseth.) For in the Angels and Adam before their falling and committing of fin, there was not any propension or disposition to sin, and therefore to this we shall give the most acute answer of Dr. Twiffe in these words: Nam licet insit homini propensio ad peccandum (scilicet post lapsum) per modum dispositionis, qua pracedanea sit permissioni actus peccaminosis, At in Adamo (ante lapsum) nulla inerat hujusmodi dispositio, aut ad peccandum

7. Permission must be referred and reduced to the will of God, for nolition is an act of his will as well as volition: and to speak properly and truly, permission is but an act of the Divine Will not to impede such or such particular actions of the creatures; and therefore the same things will follow from his volition or his will non impediendi, as from his volition to the acts of a free agent, feeing neither do put coaction upon the will of the Creature that is to act. And that permission is an act of the Divine will, and to be reduced unto it Arminine confesseth in these words: Permiffonem ad genue Twilled Pur actionis pertinere ex ipsa vocis flexione est notum, sive per se sive re- miss. ut supra. duttive, ut in Scholie loguuntur. Cessatio enim ab actu, ad actum quoq; est reducenda: cansamantem proximam & immediatam habet voluntatem, won scientiam, non potentiam, non potestatem, licet & ifta in permittente requirantur. And when he defineth permiffi. on, he faith: Permiffio Dei, eft attm voluntatie Divina; than which Pres. Jan. di definition of permission, that is given by learned Junius thus: Est matem permission attenvoluntation, quo is penes anomalo. antem permissio alim voluntatie, quo is penes quem est altenas alti-ones inhibere, em non inhibet, sed agentis voluntati permittit ea-rum modum. And again he saith: Apud Denm verd Opt. Max. nulla est omnino permissio, nist voluntaria: quandoquidem omnie di-vina permissio a principio interno est, id est, à voluntate ipsim, & movetur ad finem quem voluntas prafinivit ejus. But we will con-August. Enthir. clude this with that of S. Augustin thus Englished: Not any thing "cometh to pass, unless the Omnipotent will have it to be done, ei-"ther that it may be done by his suffering, or by his Volition. Nel-"ther is it to be doubted that God doth well, even by fuffering "those things to be done, that are done evilly; For he doth not "permit but by a just judgment, and verily every thing is good "that is just. Although therefore those things that are evil, in as "much as they are evil, they are not good; notwithstanding, as "they are not only good, but also as they are evil, it is good. For unless this were good that there should be evils, they would by on means be permitted of the omnipotent good, to whom with-"out all doubt it is always as easy to do that which he would, as "it is easy not to suffer that which he would not have to be. By all which it is plain that his permission is the act of his Divine Will. and if he would not have it done he would not permit it, and fo the same consequences will follow from Nolition, that follow from Volition, in respect as they are both acts of the Divine Will.

8. It is a certain truth that all moral actions are performed by a physical power in respect of the sustentation of the will in its natural being while it acteth, and that the creature is conserved even in the act as it is natural, though there be obliquity in the will of the creature acting in reference to the law given, or made known Twiff at fart, unto it. And this Arminim acknowledgeth in these words: No. ceffe itaq; eft, ut cum Dem potentia creatura acium aliquem permittit, creatura illa conservetur, ut sit, & vivat, potentia ejusdem permaneat, idonea ad actum producendum, nulla major vel aquale potentia opponatur, objectum deniq, offeratur, & potentia permittatur. From whence therefore to instance in the first fin of the Angels and Adam, besides the equal power and liberty of will that they had to fin or not to fin, it is manifest that God willed and determined not to withdraw his conservative power from them, but that they might be and live in the very act of their finning. Neither did he withdraw that power they had, nor opposed a greater, or equal power to impede them, much less did he create or infuseany evil into their natures, nor put upon them any coaction of will, to inforce them to fin, but folely left them to the power and liberty of their own free wills. And though by his prescience he certainly knew that they would fin and fall, yet he determined in his purpose not to hinder them, but by his providential decree did set down how to guide and order that fall and defection the most advantagiously for his glory both in his Mercy and Justice. So that even in this there was no bare pallive permillion, separate and distinct from his will and decree in his providence, but only permission to the moral act of their wills, which by his wisdom, degree and providence, he ordered for his own glory, according to the Text: The Lord hath made (or wrought) all things for himfelf. Prov. 16.4 yea, even the wicked for the day of evil. The Hebrew word bath wrought, doth properly figuific, to work by polifing, trimming, or framing and fitting, fo that the wicked (who have made themselves fo by the acts of their own wills) God by his decree and providence doth polish, fit and order for the setting forth of his own glory in framing the wicked for the day of evil, the evil of punishment and judgment.

CHAP. IX.

9. Further it is necessary that the creature acting a moral act (efpecially inthis case of the Angels and Adam before their fall) have the liberty and freedom of will, and that the will at the instant of the act, be not restrained nor under a coactive power, for otherwise malum culpe or fin would cease to be evil, and so there could be no finat all. And thus far, and in this peculiar respect only. the Angels and Adam before their acting of fin, and in the very instant of the act it self, were permitted, that is, God willed and determined not to impede them, but for the ordering of that fin and fall, the permission was conjoined with his will and providence, and not separate from it, or a nude permission.

10. That malum culps, or fin doth arise by the occasion of a law; for where no law is, there can be no fin, and therefore the Apofile faith: But fin taking occasion by the Commandment, wrought in Rom. 1.8. iti me all manner of concupi scence. So that sin considered as it is sin, is an Aberration or Deviation of the Will of the creature from the revealed law of the Creator, and hath simply and absolutely no other causality, but only the deficiency and aragia of the Creature to produce it, especially in these cases of the Angels and Adam in their first acts of fin.

11. Now we will come to the application of this unto wicked Men as they are under original and actual lins, and that in these few examples. I. It is not by a bare permissive power, but by his will and order in his providence, for he fetteth up the wicked in Sippery Pal. 73. 18. places, and yet a little while and the wicked shall not be : yea, thou Pill 27, 101 shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be. So Cain was fuffered to flay his Brother Abel, but by and by he was sent from the presence of the Lord into the land of Nod: So he set up Saul to be King over Ifrael, and foon after rejected him, and also destroyed him: these were by providence, not only bare permission. 2. For Pai 74.6, 71 promotion cometh neither from the East nor the West, nor from the South: But God is the judge, be pulleth down one, and setteth up another. So wicked Haman was fet up to be the highest in the Kingdom next Abasuerus, and got a decree to have all the Jewes put to death, and had fet up a pair of Gallows to hang Mordecai upon, and yet fee the providence of God, who quickly brought him to be hanged upon them himself: and this will be further made out where we speak of providence.

12. Though those that ascribe so large a power unto Devils and Witches, dotake it for granted that they are only under a bare passive permission, and that the fain Angels do act, what, when where and how they lift, yet is it a meer falsity, for they are under the rule of Gods Divine Will, decree and providence, and do act nothing, but as and fo far as they are licensed, ordered and limited by his will and providence, and are under a punctual restraint, nay kept in the chains of everlasting darkness unto the judgment of the great day, as we shall prove at full in that Chapter where we handle the knowledge and power of faln Angels. And therefore here we shall only say this, that if Devils could do as much mischief as they would, and were under no restraint or chains, then none of the godly would be left alive. But it is manifest that Devils do act nothing (excepting the obliquity and evil of their own wills) but meerly as instruments of the Divine Will and Provi-Rof. Fludan. dence, for as the Christian Philosopher faith : Illa eft impietas ; niad Lanov.p.18. mirum ea falso attribuere creaturie, que radicaliter Deo soli sunt propria, & inter catera, attum aliquem peculiarem in diabolo elle existimare, qui non est originaliter à Deo, & consequenter immediate, cum effentialis Dei acius sit per se fine divisione in omni re.

Concerning Divine prescience, which is as S. Gregory faith, Prascientia est unamquamq, rem antequam veniat, videre, & id quod futurum eft priufquam prafens fit pravidere, we may only note his, That it is certain and infallible, as faith the Lord by the Prophet: Behold the former things are come to pass, and new things do I declare, before they spring forth I tell you of them: Also, known unto God are all his works from the foundation of the World. But this prescience is not to be considered only by it self, as a bare vision, or inspection, but as it is coupled and joined with Pal 33.13, his providence, For the Lord looketh from heaven, he beholdeth all the sons of men. From the place of his habitation he looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth. Forming (or framing) likewise their hearts, and considering all their works. CHAP. IX.

I. As touching Gods Government and Administration of the World by his Divine providence, we shall in the first place lay down fome of the definitions of it from the most found and learned Divines of the Reformed Churches, and that in English, after this order. The acute and learned Rivet describes it thus: "Providence Andr. kivih "is an ineffable force and virtue of the Divine Sapience and Po. diffusit. This "tency, by which God doth conserve and govern to his own Glo-"ry all his Works according to his eternal, most wife, and most "free decree, and directing every thing in time unto its end. Jobannes de Spina defines it thus: "Providence is the prescience und Deprovidiria "counsel of God eternal, most free, immutable, most just, most 1.5 "wife, most good, whereby God worketh and determineth all good "things in all, but doth only permit evil things, and doth difpole " and direct all things to his own Glory and the Salvation of his elect. And much to the same purpose doth Lambertus Danaus speak in these words: "Providence is a most free and most powerful action Vages. christie " of God, by which he not only stirreth up and governeth univer- 6-32-p. 921 "fals, but also fingulars, in every one of their fingle actions. And "(he faith) it is called a molt free and most powerful act, because "It can neither be hindered nor overcome by any law. And to thele for substance do agree Calvin, Musculus, Beza, Zanchine, and the rest of all Orthodox Divines.

2. But we shall chiefly insist on that definition that is given by learned Pifcator in these words: "The providence of God is his "eternal, most wife, most just and immutable counsel or decree. "whereby he doth most freely govern all things by him created to "the glory of himself, and the Salvation of his cleet. To which he giveth this explication: "That it doth conflit of a Genus and Exists 146. 6. "three differences. The Genus is the word Decretum which is h 143144" "illustrated by four adjuncts; Eternity, Sapience, Justice and Im-"mutability. The first difference is taken from the objects ; which "are all created things. The second from the ends, which are two, "the Glory of God, and the Salvation of the elect. The third from "the effect, which is the government of things created, which Gu-"bernation is illustrated by the adjunct which is liberty.

3. The parts of this definition are thus proved. 1. That the providence of God is his counsel and decree, appeareth most plainly from these Scriptures: Peter in his Sermon to the Jews upon the day of Pentecost faith: Him (that was Jesus) being delivered by the Atta 2 25, determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God (7) tusutis fini is to prion oil) ye have saken, and by wicked hand have crucified and flain. And again the Church at Jerusalem in their prayers lay thus: Of a truth against thy holy Child Jesus whom thou hast anointed, both ARI 4. 27,28, Herod, and Pontine Pilate, with the Gentiles, and people of Ifrael were gathered together, For to do what foever thy hand and thy count-

and pleasure. So when the Brethren of Joseph were fully resolved to murther him, God by the means of Renben and Judah, to wrought Gen. 37. 18, upon their minds and wills, that they were contented to fell him Ld. 45. 5. 80 to the Ismaelites, that so the determinate counsel of God might be 30, 200 fulfilled; for though they intended it for evil, that he might never return to his Father, nor to have his dream fulfilled that they might bow down before him, yet God intended it for good, and for brought it to pass. And this he did not by changing or taking away their natures, nor by putting a coactive power upon their wills; but by inclining and bending them to his own purpole, fo that the act was the act of their own wills, but the moving of their wills to spare his life was from the Lord: for as he that made the eve must needssee, so he that made the will must needs have a power to move, incline and turn it. And therefore the Father faid Well, Certum oft, nos velle cum velimus, sed Deus facit, ut velimus bonum. And it is apparent that the hearts of all men are in the hands of the Lord, and he turneth and inclineth them according to his will and purpose, as saith Solomon, The Kings heart is in the hand Prov. 21. 2. of the Lord, as the rivers of water : he turneth it whither seever he will. Upon which the note of Tremellius and Junius is this : Eft quidem animus omnium hominum gubernaculum, quo velut naves in mediis aquis reguntur corpora & actiones nostra: tamen ne ipsorum quidem regum animus ex seipso permovetur, impellitur, inhibeturque. fed Deus in fingulorum animis, veluti clavum tenet. And concerning the wicked God faith: I will harden the heart of Pharaob, and Exod 1. 50 multiply my signes and wonders in the land of Ægypt. And again: And indeed for this cause, have Iraifed (made thee ltand, feoi ut ex- 14, 9, 16, 17, isteres, as Beza notes) thee up, for to shew in thee my power, and Rom 9.174 that my name may be declared throughout all the earth. And as yet exaltest thou thy self against my people, that thou wilt not let them go? And further the Text faith : He turned their hearts, to hate his Pal. 105,25. people, to deal subtilly with bis servants. 2. God also ruleth and ordereth his creatures by leading, drawing, inciting and moving their wills to his own ends and purpoles, as fometimes to good, as in his own people: For as many as are led by the spirit of God, Rom. 8. 14 they are the sons of God. And so was our Saviour led, or driven (insidana, nyero, druxen) into the wilderness, to be tempted of the devil. Match 4-1. To this agreeth the bleffing and prophecie of Noah: God shall per- Luke 4.1. fwade, or allure Japhet, to dwell in the tents of Shem. Sometimes Gen. 9. 27. God inciteth the creatures to evil by the ministery of Satan, as is manifest in these examples. For the Text saith, And again the an 2 Sam. 24. 10 ger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them, to say, Go number Ifrael and Judab. And another place faith : And Satan flood up against Ifrael, and provoked David to num- i Chron 21. 1. ber the people. Whereby it is plain that Satan was the instrument, as sent and ordered of God to move David to number the people, that thereby the King and people might be punished, and the King thereby brought to a deeper fight of his fins, repentance, and a closer trusting and adhering to his God. So when the Lord intended to have Abab to go up to Ramoth Gilead that he might be flain, he sent forth an evil Angel, to be a lying spirit in all Ababs Prophets, 1 Kings 22.12. and faid unto him, Thou shalt perswade him, and prevail also: Go forth and do fo. So that what God orders, Satan doth but execute. So when God intended to punish and destroy Abimelech, and the Men of Shechem, he sent an evil spirit between them to divide them. and so accomplish his will upon both parties, as saith the Text: Thus God rendred the wickedness of Abimelech which he did unto his father, in slaying his seventy brethren. And all the evil of the men of Shechem, did God render upon their heads: and upon them came the curse of Jotham the sun of Jerubbaal. 3. God ruleth his creatures by permission, or his will of not impeding them to act according to their wills and power, as in thele cases. For God Pal. 81.11,12. Speaking of his people of Ifract faith: But my people would not heark. en unto my voice; and Ifracl would none of me. So I gave them up unto their own hearts lufts, and they walked in their own counsels. Att 14.16. Agreeable to which is that in the Acts: Who in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways: which is as Beza notes: Ex arbitrio suo vivere, nulla ipsis prascripta ratione religionis. And Rom, 1. 24. in this fenfe, and to this purpole it is that God gave (majifana) them up to uncleanness, through the lusts of their own hearts; because of that horrible Idolatry that formerly they were guilty of. 4. God ruleth his creatures by his providence, fometimes by repressing, prohibiting and impeding the execution of their wicked wills, as is clear in the case of Abimelech King of Gerar, who took Sarah Abrahams Wife intending to have had carnal knowledge of her. but God plagued him and his Family, and faid; For I also withbeld thee from sinning against me; therefore I suffered thee not to

Now we shall come to consider how the faln Angels are under the rule and restraint of this Divine and all-governing providence, wherein we shall make it appear, that they act nothing in this clementary and sublunary World, after any corporeal manner, but as they are ordered, licensed and limited by the will and decree of the Almighty, and so do not wander and rove at their own pleasures to act in corporeal things, what, when and how they lift, as the Witchmongers vainly suppose, and this we shall clear in these particulare.

1. It cannot rationally be supposed that God is less wife, in ruling and ordering the Prince of darkness, the Prince of Devils, and the head of all Rebellion and Rebels, than he is in ruling his Subjects and Servants, which are all wicked men; but all these he ruleth with a rod of Iron, and breaketh them in funder like a Potters vessel: And therefore much more hath he a restraint upon, and a rule over the fain Angels who kept not their first estates, and therefore are referred in chains in darkness until the judgment of the great day.

2. As he is the Prince and Ring-leader of all Sin and Rebellion against God, though he yet have not his final punishment, unto Manth 23. 4ti which he is referved for the judgment of the great day, and though he be not yet thrust into the abysse or great depth, nor into that everlasting fire that is prepared for him and his Angels; yet is he kept in chains and darkness, and can act nothing but as he is licensed, ordered and limited by the Almighty.

CHAP. X.

2. And though he compass the earth to and fro, and walk about like a roaring lion feeking whom he may devour, yet is that but according to the malice and purpose of his wicked will, for in punishing or afflicting of the godly he must have licence from God first. or else he can do nothing in this Elementary World, as is most manifest in the affliction of Job, neither could he enter into the herd of Swine, but by Christs leave and order, nor deceive Ababs Prophets but by order from the Lord. And therefore an ancient Father faid well: Quod fi super porcos potestatem non habent, multo rom. Aquin magie nullam habent Damones contra homines factos ad imaginem Caten. air. in Dei : oportet ergo Deum folum timere, contemnere autem illos.

Therefore we shall conclude this briefly here, having occasion to handle it more fully hereafter, to wit, that the Witchmongers can have no shelter for their opinion from the Doctrine of Gods permission (if rightly understood) because God doth neither order. nor permit faln Angels to act any thing (especially in corporcal things but what is for jult, good, and wileends, which cannot be flewed in these actions attributed to Witches.

CHAP. X.

Whether faln Angels be Corporeal or simply Incorporeal, and the absurdity of the assuming of Bodies, and the like consequents.

Am not inscalible what great censure I may incurr for entring upon such a ticklish and nice point as the corporeity or incorporcity of Angels, seeing it bath exercised and crucified the wits of the most learned in all ages, especially being but an obscure perfon, and not heightned with those lofty titles that usually elevate Mens fames, more by those attributes than by the weight and strength of their arguments. Yet it being no necessary Article of the Christian Faith, but that a Man may lawfully defend either, it cannot rationally be judged by understanding Readers either to be pride or just offence for me to handle this subject. For seeing that most of the Christian and Learned Fathers for the space of four hundred years after Christ, were of the opinion that they were corporeal, it can be no novelty in me to revive or affert that opinion, and therefore I shall labour to make it manifest in this ensuing order.

1. There is a late way of arguing taken up by Dr. Moore and others, that they will undertake to prove a thing to be fo or fo, or else to make Manto deny his own faculties. And so the said Doctor The immort of doth undertake to prove the existence of immateral and incorpothe Soul, p. 7, real beings, or elfe he thinketh he bringeth Men to deny their own faculties: And these faculties he maketh to be, common notions, external fense, and evident and undeniable deductions of reason. And concludeth that, what is not confonant to all or some of these is meer fancy, and is of no moment for the evincing of truth or falfhood, by either its vigour or perplexiveness. But this will not accomplish the business he intends, for these reasons. 1. Because there is not the common notion of a spiritual and immaterial being in all or any Man, neither is it (to use his own words) true at first fight to all men in their wits upon a clear perception of the terms, without any further discourse or reasoning, but is only a bare supposition without any proof or evidence at all. 2. The being of an immaterial and spiritual substance can no way incurr into the senses nor affect them, because it is manifest (as Des Cartes hath sufficiently proved) that all fensation is procured by corporeal contact, and not otherwise. And though we deny not that there have been, are and may be apparitions, that cannot be rationally supposed to be the ordinary Phanomena of corporeal matter, yet affecting the fenfes, there must be something in them that persormeth that effect, that is corporeal, or else the senses could not be wrought upon, for immateriale non agit in materiale, nift eminenter ut Dens. 3. No right deductions can possibly be drawn from the highest power of ratiocination, where the understanding hath no cognolcibility of the things that reason would draw its conclusions from, for as the same Doctor frameth his Axiome which is this: Whatfoever things are in themselves, they are nothing to us, but fo far forth as they become known to our faculties or cognitive powers. But we affert (which we shall make good anon) that our faculties or cognitive powers (how far soever some would vainly magnific and extol them) have not the power of understanding beings that are simply and absolutely immaterial and incorporeal. 4. There is nothing that is more undoubtedly true than what the Lord Vernlam hath told us in thefe words: Canfa vero & radix fere omnium malorum in scientis ca una eft : quod dum mentis bumana vires falso miramur & extollimm, vera ejus auxilia non quaramm. And again: Subtilitas nature subtilitatem fenfus & intellettus multis partibus superat, the which may be proved from many undeniable instances, which need not here be mentioned, only we shall add what the aforesaid learned Lord speaks to the same purpose which is this: "The fault of sense is twofold: For it either for-" saketh or deceivethus. For first there are many things that escape "the sense, though rightly disposed, and no way impeded either "by the subtilty of the whole body or by the minuteness of the e parts, or by the distance of place, or tardity and velocity of motion, "or by the familiarity of the object, or by reason of other causes "Neither again, where the sense doth apprehend the thing, are "those apprehensions sufficiently firm. For the testimony and infor-"mation of lense is always from the Analogie of Man, not from the "Analogie of the Universe. And it is altogether afferted with great error, that sense is the measure of things. Neither can these notions the Doctor would make so clear, be had or gathered, without some intimation from some of the senses. 2. Further the Doctor tells us that the Idea of a Spirit is as casic a notion, as of any other substance whatsoever. And he also saith: 4s Antidot. "Nevertheless I shall not at all stick to affirm, that his Idea or notion "(speaking of God) is as easy as any notion else whatsoever, and Immortal. p. 21. "that we may know as much of him as of any thing else in the "World. This later he speaketh concerning God. But that these affertions are unfound, these following reasons will sufficiently e-

1. He doth define a Spiritthus: A Spirit is a substance penetrable Real. 1: and indifcerpible. Now if it be true that he affirms before, that, "the "fubject, or naked effence, or substance of a thing is utterly uncon-"ceiveable to any of our faculties, and that if we take away apti-"tudes, operations, properties and modifications from a subject. "that then the conception vanisheth into nothing, but into the Idea "of a meer undiversificated substance, so that one substance is not "then diftinguishable from another, but only from accidents or

"modes, to which properly belongs no subsistence. So then if we take away penetrability and indifcerpibility, which are but the modes and properties of a Spirit, whose genus he maketh substance to be, then it vanishesh into an indistinguishable notion, and so his definition comes to nothing.

2. For if substances be known by their properties and modifica. Real. 2: tions, as we grant they are, the modifications and properties must of necessity be some ways known unto us: but there are no ways either by common notions, evidence of the senses, or sound deductions of reason that can certainly inform us of these properties or modifications of penetrability and indifcerpibility, and the Doctor yet never proved cither, but is only a bare supposition, and a melancholy figment. 3. He tells us that all substance has dimensions, that is, length, Reaf. 3. breadth and depth, but all has not impenetrability, and boldly The Im faith: It is not the Characteristical of a body to have dimensions, p.68. but to be impenetrable; to which we answer. It is strongly afferted by learned Helmont, that by the ultimate strength of nature, bodies do sometimes penetrate themselves and one another, and to that purpose he giveth convincing examples, and conclude th thus from them. Quod aquivalet penetrationi dimensionum, falla Di Maur Subl. in matura, abfq, ope Diaboli. And to the same purpose that most Earle 1. 406, acute person, Dr. Gliffon, handling this very point saith : Verum enimverd, si sola quantitas actualis sit causa impenetrabilitatis corporum (nt ex supra ditibe liquet,) eags, sit naturaliter mutabilies quid impedit ne substantia materialis aliam substantiam, mutata quantitate, novaq, fimul affumpta utrifq, communt, penetret & Aud therefore we may as confidently deny his assumption, that Impenetrability is the Characteristical of body, as he affirm it without proof, and must with all the whole company of the learned, assign Extension to be the true and Genuine Character of Body. And further he granting that substance hath length, breadth, and depth, we must of necessity conclude, that whatsoever hath those properties must needs be material and corporeal, and so that which he would make to be Spirit is meerly Body.

4. Whereas he faith that the notion of Spirit is as easy a notion, as any other whatfoever, it is granted, but is not at all to the purpole: for our inquiry need not be of the facility of anotion, but of the verity of it, that is, of the congruity and adequation of the notion and the thing from whence it is taken; otherwise though the notion be easy, yet without an adequate congruity to the thing it is meerly falle. As for instance, when a melancholy person doth verily imagine himself to be changed into a Wolf or Dog, it is not only an easy notion, but also it is truly a notion, and yet a false notion, because there is no true congruity betwirt it and the thing from whence it is taken, the Body of the person so conceiving. being not at all changed into Wolf or Dog, but still retaining its humane shape and figure. And therefore the Lord Vernlam doth to this point speak truly and clearly in these words: It aq; fi notiones ipfa mentis (qua verborum quaft anima funt, & totim bujusmodi ftruttura ac fabrica bafis) male ac temere à rebus abstratta, & vaga, nec fatis definita & circumscripta, denig, multis modis vitiosa fuerint, omniaruunt. And therefore the Doctor might very well have considered, whether these his new notions had been sitly and rightly drawn from the things, to which he doth so confidently affix them, before he had so boldly afferted them, which though they betruly his notions, that is, that he did think, conceive, and frame them, yet they are not truly abstracted from the things: And so he may be rather judged to be led by speculative and Philosophick Euthusiasm, than by the clear light of a found understand-

5. And concerning his Tenent that the Idea or Notion of God is as easy as the notion of any thing else whatsoever, that the notion may be easy we grant; but whether it be true and adequate, there lies the question. For those old Hereticks that held that God had Eyes, Ears, Head, Hands and Feet and the like, had an casic notion of it, conceiving him to have humane members, but I hope the Do-Ctor will not say that this notion of theirs was a notion truly drawn from the nature and being of God, because there is no corporeity inhim at all. And it is and hath been the Tenent of all Orthodox Divines, Ancient, Middle and Modern, that God in his own nature and being is infinite and incomprehensible, and therefore there can no true and adequate notion of him, as being fo, beduly and rightly gathered in the understanding of creatures; and so the Doctors polition or notion must needs be Phantastry and imaginary Enthufiasm. For as there are many things in nature that in themselves are finite and comprehensible, that as he grants of naked essence or substance are utterly unconceivable to any of our faculties; much more must the being of God that is infinite and incomprehensible, which are attributes that are incommunicable, be utterly unconceivable to any of our faculties. And it is but the vain pride of Mans Head and Heart, thereby to magnifie his own abilities, whereas the Text doth pronounce this of him, For vain man would be wife; though he be born like a wild afi colt; that lifts him up to Job 11. 12. conceit that he can fathom and comprehend the Infinite and Almighty, whom the Heaven of Heavens cannot contain, and therefore cannot frame a true notion of him, whom perfectly he doth not 1 Kings 8.27. understand nor comprehend, and the attributes of God are matters of Faith and not the weak deductions of humane reason.

2. Those that seem to idolize humane abilities and carnal reason. have not only applied those so much magnified Engines to the discovery of created things, wherein they have effected to little, that fufficiently proclaims the invalidity of the instruments or the inauspicious application of them, or both, all the several forts of Natural Philosophy hitherto found out, or used, being examined, coming far short of solving the Phenomena of nature, when even the least animal or vegetable affords matter enough to puzle and nonplus the greatest Philosopher, so that we may justly complain with Seneca, that the greatest part of those things we know are the least part of those things we know not; These engines (I say) though proving ineffectual to find out the true notions and knowledge of natural things, have also (like the siction of the Gyants) notwithstanding invaded Heaven, and taken upon them to discover and determine of Celestials, wherein it is in a manner totally blind, or sees but with an Owl-like vision. For indeed the deciding of this point must be taken from the Divine authority of the Scriptures. and the clear deductions that may be drawn from thence; for this is that clear light, that we ought to follow, and not the Dark-lanthorn of Mans blind, frail and weak reason, for it is a sure word of Prophecie whereunto it is good to take heed, and not to vain Philosophy, old Wives Fables, or opposition of Sciences falfly so called. And therefore we shall conclude this point here concerning the corporcity or incorporcity of Angels with that Christian and learned polition of Dr. Stillingfleet in these words: " But although

4. In handling this point of the corporeity or incorporeity of Angels, we do here once for all exclude and except forth of our discourse and arguments the humane and rational Soul as not at all to be comprised in these limits, and that especially for these reasons.

1. Because the humane Soul had a peculiar kind of Creation differing from the Creation of other things, as appeareth in the words of the Text. And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nosseries the breath of life; and man became aliving soul. Upon which the note of Tremellins and Jubecame aliving foul. Upon which the note of Tremelius and Junius is, anima verd hominis spiritale quiddam est, & divinum. 2. Because I find Solomon the wisest of Men making this question: who knoweth the spirit of man, that goeth upward: and the spirit of the beast, that goeth downward to the earth? 3. Because it is safer to believe the nature of the Soul to be according to the Analogy of Faith, and the concurrent opinion of the learned, than to sift such a deep question by our weak understanding and reason. So having premised these things, and left this as a general exception and caution, we shall proceed to the matter intended in this order.

I. We lay it down for a most certain and granted truth, that God simply and absolutely is only a most simple spirit, in whom there is no corporeity or composition at all, and what other things sower that are called or accounted spirits are but so in a relative and respective consideration, and not in a simple and absolute acceptation. And this is the unanimous Tenent of the Fathers, Schoolmen and all other Orthodox Divines, agreeing with the plain and clear words of the Scripture, as, God is a spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth. And again: Now the Lord is that spirit, and where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty. Therefore we shall lay down this following prosplition.

2. That Angels being created substances, are not simply and absolutely incorporeal, but if they be by any called or accounted spirits, it can but be in a relative and respective sense, but that really and truly they are corporeal. And this we shall labour to make good not only by shewing the absurdates of that opinion of their being simply spiritual, but in laying open the unintelligibility of that opinion, and by answering the most material objections.

sm. 1. And first to begin at the lowest step, Body is a thing that affecteth the senses most plainly and feelingly; for though many bodies are so pure, as the air, ether, steams of the Load stone, and many other steams of bodies, that they escape the sight of our eyes, yet are they either manifest to our feeling, or otherwise made manifest by some sensible effect, operation, or the like; yet for all this, the intrinsick nature of body as such is utterly unknown unto us, for when we speak of the extension of body, as its Characteristical property, we do but conceive of its superficial dimensions, its internal nature quatenus Corpus, being utterly unknown unto us; it being a certain truth, that Quidditates rerum, non funt cognoscibiles; and as Dr Moore granteth, the naked effence or substance of a thing is utterly unconceiveable to any of our faculties. From whence we argue, à minori ad majus, that if the substance of a body, whose affections and modifications do fully incur into, and work upon our fenses, be utterly unconceiveable to any of our senses, much more of necessity must the substance of a Created spirit, conceived as immaterial and incorporeal, be utterly unconceiveable to any of our faculties, because it hath no effects, operations, or modifications that can or do operate upon our senses.

2. And as we know not the intrinsick nature of body, so also Argum. 2. we are ignorant of the highest degree of the purity and spiritualness of bodies, nor do we know where they end, and therefore cannot tell where to fix the beginning of a meer spiritual and immaterial being. For there are of Created bodies in the Universe. so great a diversity, and of so many sorts and degrees of purity and fineness, one exceeding another, that we cannot assign which of them cometh nearest to incorporeity, or the nature of spirit. And many of these being compared with other more groß and palpable bodies, may be and are called and accounted spirits, though notwithstanding they be all Corporcal, and but under a gradual difference. So the vital part in the bodies of men are by Phylicians called Spirits in relation to the bones, ligaments, musculous slesh and the like; nay even in respect of the blood, lymphatick humor, lacteal juyce, or the fuccus nutritius nervosus, and yet still are contained within the limits of body, and are as really Corporeal as any of the rest, and so are the air and æther. And those visible species of other bodies that are carried in the air and represented unto our Eyes, by which we diftinguish the shape, colour, site and similitude of one body from another, though by the Schools passed over with that fleight title of qualities, as though they were either simply nothing, or incorporeal things, are notwithstanding really Corporeal, elfe they could not incur into, nor affect the visive sensories: And these do in the air intersect and pass through one another (as may be optically demonstrated) without Confusion, Commixion, or discerpsion, and may comparatively be accounted spirital and incorporeal, though really they be not so. But what shall we say to that wonderful body, Image or Idolum of our selves, and other things that we behold in a mirrour or looking glass mult this be a meer nothing, or an absolute incorporeal thing? surely not. For it is as really a body as any in the Universe, though of the greatest purity and fineness of any that we know; and how near it approaches approaches to the nature of spirit, is very difficult (if not impossible) to determine; for if it did exist when the body or subject from whence it floweth were removed, it might rationally be taken for a Spirit, and with far more probable ground than many things else that have been vainly supposed to be Spirits. And that these vifible shapes of things, and this Image in the glass, are not meerly imaginary nothings, but Corporeal Figures and steams, is most maniselt, because they vanish when the body or subject is removed, because that nullius entis nulla est operatio, & Incorporeum non incurrit in sensus, and because they would pass through the glass, but only for the foil or Bradea laid on the otherside, by which the Image is reflected. So that if we have bodies of fo great purity, and near approach unto the nature of spirit, we cannot tell where spirit must begin, because we know not where the purest bodies end.

3. Dr Moore maketh substance to be the genus, and spirit and body to be the two species, so that body and spirit are of one generical Identity, and so there must of necessity some certain specific difference betwixt them be affigued and proved, or else the division is vitious, and the property of spirit not proved, and so their opinion of spirit falls totally to the ground. For we affirm (and shall prove) that though a difference be imagined and supposed, yet it was never yet sufficiently proved, for omnia supposita, non sunt vera, otherwise all the impossible figments and vain Chimara's of melancholy and doting persons might pass for true Oracles: but it is one thing truly to understand, and another thing to imagine and fancy what indeed is not, nor ever was. And though the supposition seem never so probable and like, yet it will but at the best infer the possibility of such an imagined difference, but not prove it really to be fo, and therefore here we shall retort the Doctors Axiom The Immortal against him, which is this: "Whatsoever is unknown to us, or is "known but as meerly possible, is not to move us or determine us "any way, or make us undetermined; but we are to rest in the pre-"fent light and plain determination of our own faculties. Now that a spirit is penetrable and indiscerpible, may be imagined as possible to the fancies of some, but cannot be clearly intelligible to any sober mind; for to imagine, and to understand, are faculties that are very different, and however if such a difference be conceived as possible (which cannot enter the narrow gate of my Intellect) yet the difference of being penetrable and indifcerpible, is not to move us to determine that a spirit hath those distinct properties from bodies, because they are but known to us as meerly possible. And therefore that these two differences of penetrability and indiscerpibility assigned by D. Moore, are not sufficiently proved to be to, we shall give these reasons. 1. If bodies in the ultimate act of nature can penetrate themselves and one another, as Helmont and D'Gliffon do strongly labour to prove, then penetrability is not the proper difference of spirit from body, because then common to them both. 2. But if it be taken for a truth (and the one of necessity must be true) that bodies do not, or can possibly penetrate themselves or one another, as the common tenent holdeth, and seemeth most agreeable to verity, for it is simply unintelligible and impossible to conceive, that two Cubes (suppose of Marble or Metal) should penetrate one another, and yet but to have the dimentions of one, and to possess no greater space than the one did formerly fill: And if this be impossible and unintelligible in respect of bodies, whose properties, aptitudes, affections and modifications are apparent to our senses, then must it be more impossible and unintelligible in substances supposed to be meerly incorporeal, because they must needs be more pure and perfect, and therefore less subject to such unconceiveable affections; and however, it can be no wayes known to our faculties or cognitive powers, that they have any such specifical property or affection. 3. As it is not any way manifest to any of our senses, nor can be proved by any sound deductions of reason, so it cannot be manifested to be any innate notion thining from the Intellect it felf, and we ought not to take adventitious ones instead of those that are innate, nor fictitious ones for either, but to make a due distinction of each of them one from another. 4. Neither is indifcerpibility a proper difference of a spiritual substance from a corporeal one, because the visible species of things do in the air interfect one another, and fuffer not difcerpibility: and that these are bodies is manifest, because they affect the fenfes; and therefore that which is a property of some bodies cannot be the proper difference to diffinguish a spirit from a body. 5. This is only an arbitrary and feigned supposition, and cannot be proved either by the testimony of any of the senses, by sound reafon, or innate notions; and what is or cannot be proved by some of these (according to his own position) ought to be rejected. And therefore as indifcerpibility is no proper difference of a spirit from a body, no more is penetrability, which can no more be in a spiritual substance, than either in discreet quantity one can be two, or two one, or in continuate quantity one inch can be two, or two can become one. D' Glisson from his much admired Suarius the great Weaver of fruitless Cobwebs, hath devised another difference of spirit from body which he thus layeth down, as we give it in this English. "I aslign (he saith) a twofold difference betwirt the sub- De natura sub-"stance of matter and that of spirits. The first is taken from the fant. Energitics. " substantial (à substantiali materia mole) heap or weight of the "matter. For I (he saith) besides the actual and accidental ex-"tension, do attribute to the matter this substantial heap or weight "which is denied to spirits. But the sign of this heap of weight is, "that if the matter in the same space be duplicated, triplicated, or "centuplicated, that it will be made more dense twofold, threefold,

"that matter and spirit in this do agree betwixt themselves, that "they both are finite, and from thence that they have this com-

"mon, that neither of them can reduce themselves into a littleness that " is infinite, or into an infinite magnitude. Therefore the difference " betwirt them doth not confist in this; but in this, that a spirit whe-"ther it be contracted or dilated, is not made more dense or rare; but "onthe contrary, matter, whether it be contracted or expanded, is "made more dense, or more rare. To which we return this responsion. 1. It is usual with men, when by their wills and fancies they would maintain an opinion that is weak and groundless, finding they cannot clearly perform it, to bring in some strange, obscure or equivocal word, thereby to make a flourish, though they prove nothing: So here this learned person to make a shew to prove the difference of spirit doth affign moles substantialis as peculiar to body, but not to spirit; but what is to be understood by moles, he might know his own meaning, but I am fure there are few others that door can understand it, and therefore is but a devised subterfuge to stumble and blind mens intellects, and not to prove the thing intended. 2. If by the word moles he intend weight or gravity (and what else it can fignifie is not intelligible) then it will not be a difference betwixt body and spirit, because gravity and levity are differences of bodies in respect of one another, and therefore can be none as he assignes it. 3. To affert that a spirit when contracted or dilated is not made more dense or more rare, but that matter whether it be contracted or expanded, is made more dense or more rare, is easily spoken, but not so easily proved: and rude affertions without found proof, are of no validity, and may with as good reason be denied and rejected, as affirmed or received. 4. We have no density in bodies but in respect of the paucity and parvity of the pores, fothat less of another body is contained in them, and that is accounted rare that hath many or greater, and so containeth more of another body in them, and are qualities or modifications that only belong unto bodies, and not at all unto spirits, and is but precariously taken up by the Doctor without any proof or demonstration at all. 5. If spirits cannot expand themselves into an infinite space, nor contract themselves into an infinite littleness, then where are bounds and limits of this contraction and expansion, or how is it proved that they can do either? seeing they are properties and affections of bodies and matter, and never were proved to be peculiar to spirits.

4. Those that are much affected to and zealous for experimental Philosophie, do often run into that extream, as utterly to condemn and throw away all the ancient Scholastick Learning, as though there were nothing in it of verity or worth: But this is too severe and dissonant from truth, as might be made manifest in many of their Maximes; but we shall only instance in one as pertinent to our present purpose, which is this : Imaginatio non transcendit Continum. And this if we perpend it seriously, is a most certain and transcendant truth; for when we come to cogitate and conceive of a thing, we cannot apprehend it otherwise than as continuate and corporeal; for what other notions foever we make of things, they are but adventitious, arbitrary, and fiftitious, for even non entia ad modum entium concipiuntur. And therefore those that pretend that Angels are meerly incorporeal, must needs err, and put force upon their own faculties, which cannot conceive a thing that is not continuate and corporeal: But if they will trust their own Cogitations and faculties rightly disposed, and not vitiated, then they must believe that Angels are Corporeal, and not meerly and fimply spirits, for absolutely nothing is so but God only.

CHAP. X.

If the Augelical nature were simply and absolutely spiritual Argum. 5. and incorporeal, then they would be of the same essential Identity with God, which is fimply impossible. For the Angels were not Created forth of any part of Gods Essence, for then he should be divisible, which he is not, nor can be, his Essence being simplicity, unity, and Identity it felf, and therefore the Angels mult of necessity be of an essence of Alterity, and different from the essence of God. Now God being a simple, pure, and absolute spirit in the Identity of his essence, if the Angels were simply and absolutely spiritual and incorporeal, then they must be of the same essence with him, which is abfurd and impossible; and therefore they have Alterity in them, and so of necessity must be Corporeal, and not simply and meerly spiritual. And that as much as we contend for here is granted by Dr Moore in these words: "For (he faith) I look upon An-"gels to be as truly a compound Being consisting of soul and body, " as that of men and brutes. Whereby he plainly afferteth their Compolition, and so their Alterity, and therefore that they must needs have an Internum and externum, as the learned and Christian Philo-Sopher D' Fludd doth affirm in these words: Certum eft igitur in. Vid.Rob.Fludd. effe ipsis (scilicet Angelis) alind, quod agit, alind autem, quod mai. com. Hish. patitur ; nec verd illud fecundum quod agunt, alind quam acins c. 2. p. 110. effe poterit, qui forma dicitur, neg; etiam illud secundum quod patiuntur, eft quicquam prater potentiam, hac autem materia appel-

6. Therefore to conclude, these arguments do sufficiently and Argum. 6. evidently prove that Angels are either Corporcal, or have bodies united unto them, which is all one to our purpose whether way soever it be taken. To which only we shall add these authorities; and first S. Bernard tells us thus much rendered into English. "There- Serm. 6. Sup. "fore (he faith) as we render unto God alone true immortality, Cantit. p. 505. "so also incorporeity, because he alone doth so far transcend the " universal Corporcal nature of spirits, that he doth not stand need "of any body whatfoever, in any operation whatfoever, being "content with only a spiritual nodd (or motion) when he will, to " perform whatfoever he pleafeth. Therefore only that majesty of "his, is that, which neither for himfelf, nor for another, hath need "of the help of a Corporeal instrument, by which omnipotent "will he is immediately present at every work. And that of Da. Lib. 5. mascen is full to the purpose, which is this: "That Angels quan-"tum ad nos, are faid to be incorporeal and immaterial: but

"compared to God, are found to be Corporeal and material. And of this opinion besides were Tertullian, S. Augustin, Nazianzen. Beda, and many others, as may be seen in the learned Writings of Zanchy upon this subject : with whose words we shall shut up this particular : Certum enim eft, ex iis que scripture tradunt de Angelis, probabiliorem effe Patrum sententiam , quam Scholasticorum : utram tamen sequaris, non multum peccaveris, nec proptereà inter Hæreticos haberi poteris.

And on the otherside, if they be holden to be simply and absolutely incorporeal, then these absurdities must of necessity fol-

1. If Angels be simply incorporeal, then they can cause no Phyfical or local motion at all, because nothing can be moved but by contact, and that must either be by immediate or virtual contact. for the Maxime is certain, Quicquid agit, agit vel mediatione suppositi, as when ones hand doth immediately touch a thing and so move it; vel mediatione virtutis, as when a man with a rod or a line, doth draw a thing forth of the water, both of these do require a Corporeal contact, that is, that the superficies of the body moveing or drawing, must either mediately or immediately touch the superficies of the body to be moved or drawn. But that which is absolutely incorporeal hath no superficies at all, and therefore can make no contact either mediate or immediate; and therefore Angels if simply incorporeal, can cause no Physical or local motion

2. If Angels be absolutely incorporeal, then they cannot be contained or circumscribed in place, and consequently can perform no operation in Physical things. To which if they answer with Thomas Aquinas: Quod circumscribi terminis localibus est proprium Corporum, sed circumscribi terminis esentialibus, est commune cuili-bet Creatura, tam corporali, quam spirituali, This aiery distinction might have taken place, if Aquinas had snewed us what essential terms and limitations are, but of this we have no proof at all, and what was never proved may justly be denied. For what a definitive place is, was never yet defined, neither can we possibly conceive an Idea or notion of any such thing, but only as we may make a Chimara or figment of that which never was nor is. For though we may apprehend that they are not circumscribed in place, as groß bodies are, yet it is not to be doubted, but that they move from place to place, and do so consist in some place, that they occupy a certain space of place, and this is most certain, if we believe (as we ought) those things which the Scriptures do declare concerning the mission and motion of Angels. And therefore notwithstanding this frivolous and feigned distinction, we may conclude with Theodoret, Angelorum naturam effe finitam, & circumscriptam, coq; opus habere loco. Neither doth that avail to solve the business, and make this a good distinction, which is brought by Dr Moore, to wit, that there are two acceptions of place, the one being imaginary space, the other that place is the concave superficies of one body immedi- The Immoral ately environing another body, and that therefore there being thefe ht. a to past two acceptions of place (he concludeth) that the distinction of being there Circumscriptive & definitive, is an allowable diftinchion. But by the Doctors leave we must affirm, that what he saith is not allowable, and that for these reasons. 1. Because imaginary space bath no existence in nature, but only in the fancy of the Imaginant, & entia rationalia, non funt entia naturalia ex parte rerum existentia. 2. Because it is a certain truth which Des Cartes Princip. Phill hath taught us, to wit : That the names of place or space, do not fignific any thing different from a body that is faid to be in a place; but only do delign the magnitude, figure and fite of it amongst other bodies. And that this fite may be determined, we ought to have respect unto some other bodies, which we may consider as immoveable. And as we respect divers bodies, we may say that the same thing at the same time doth change place and not change place. As when a Ship is carried in the Sea, he who sitteth in the Ship doth alwayes remain in one place, if tespect be had to the parts of the Ship, betwixt which parts he keepeth the same site : And the same person doth continually change place, if respect be had to the shores, because he continually receedeth from some shores, and cometh more near unto other. 3. Neither is this distinction good, because as the same Author tells us : Non etiam inre differunt spatium, five loeus internut, & substantia corporea in eo contenta, fed tantum in modo, quo à nobis concipi foleat. 4. D' Moore granteth that spirits are substances and have extension, and we affirm that nothing can be so but what is Corporeal, and consequently must be in place circumscriptively, and therefore the fancy of a definitive place, is meerly a fictitious foppery, without ground or

And now let us examine the objections that are usually brought Object. 1: against this opinion, the strongest of which is to this purpose, that if Angels be Corporeal, then of necessity they must be mortal, alterable and destructible; to which I answer. 1. Because no Creaturely nature is or can be immortal , per fe & ab intrinfeca & proprid natura, for God only is fo as faith the Text, & pires $ xw abaraciar, Who only hath immortality; Therefore the Angels whether corporeal or incorporeal, are not immortal, neither by themselves or their intrinsick nature, either (as the Schools speak) à parte ante, wel à parte poft, because God only is fo, exclusively considered in regard of any Creature, and fo the objection is of no force. 2. The Corporeity of Angels doth not at all hinder their immortality à parte poff, for as God is only immortal in respect of Essence, Eternity, Infinity and Independency, so Angels nor any Creatures, are immortal in that point or respect, but only in regard of their dependency upon God, who by his conservative power doth keep them by Chrift, that for the time or duration to come, they shall not die, perish, or be annihilated; and this he can and doth as well perform

if they be corporeal as spiritual, even as he doth preserve and conferve the bodies of the Saints in their Graves until the general Refurrection, and in the World to come doth keep them in immortality; though they be changed and made spiritual bodies, yet they remain bodies ftill. For it is he that sustaineth all things by the power of 1 Tim. 6.13. bis word; And it is he that doth wivifie or quicken all things: Job 34. 14,15. and if he gather unto bimfelf his fpirit and his breath, all flesh shall perift together, and man shall turn again unto duft. So that the objection is of no validity, because no Creature is kept in perpetual duration, à parte post, ab intrinseca natura, sed ex causes conservantibus, which is the good will, benignity, and bleffed influence of Tehovab, and not from any internal creaturely power. 3. Every spiritual and incorporeal substance that is created, is as annihilable by the prime power that created it, as is a Corporeal created substance. And on the contrary, a Corporeal or material substance is no more capable of annihilation by any power or efficiency of fecond Causes, than an incorporeal and spiritual substance is; and therefore whether Angels be simply incorporeal, or that they be Corporeal, it neither maketh for nor against their immortality. which confifts only in the benign emanation of the Divine confervative power of the Almighty: And therefore doth profound Bradwardine draw that invincible, and undeniable Corollary of verity, Quod necesso eft Deum servare quamlibet Creaturam immediatiks quacunq; causa creata. 4. Though the most of the bodies that are known unto us be divisible, alterable and discerpible, or distipable in respect of our conceptions of them, yet actually we may find many bodies in nature that are not, nor ever were dislipated or difference fecundum totum, though there may be alteration in their superficial parts, as the Earth, the Sun, Moon, the rest of the Planets, and those great and glorious bodies that we call Stars ; so that for the duration of bodies à parte post we can conclude little of certainty. And as there are bodies that fecundum funm totum, are not severed or dislipated, so there are some bodies that though they may suffer division and dissipation into smaller parts, yet do those parts though most minute, suffer no real transmutation, but remain of the same Homogeneous nature they were before, as is most manifest in Silver dissolved in Aqua fortis, wherein though it be so severed and dispersed, that it appear not at all unto the eye, yet may it be from thence recovered and redintegrated into its own nature as it was before. And also the Masters of the more abstruse Philosophy affirm to us upon their own certain experience, that though metallick Mercury may be divided into infemible and invisible Atomes, yet still it retains the nature of metallic Mercury, De Lithiaf. l. c. and that thus Helmont tells us: Si non vidiffem argentum vivum eludere quameung, artificum operam, aded, quod aut totum avolet adhue integrum, aut totum in igne permaneat, atq, utrolibet modo, fervet impermutabilem sui ac primitivam identitatem, identitatisa; homogeneitatem anaticam: dicerem artem non effe veram, qua vera eft, fine mendacio, atq; longe veriffima. So also there are bodies which although they suffer division and separation by some other bodies diffevering of them, yet by motion of coition they foon close and redintegrate themselves, having thereby suffered no detriment at all, as is most apparent in the pure body of the Æther, the visible species of things, the images in a Looking glass and in shadows; which are all bodies. So that feeing bodies, no more than Spirits to be annihilable by second causes, and that there are some bodies that are not diffipated fecundum totum, and that there are others that though they are separable into more minute particles, yet do they remain in Anatical and Homogeneous Identity, and that there are others that though they be actually for a small moment divided, yet they do instantaneously ecalesce; and by coition unite themselves; yet we may therefore rationally conclude, that corporeity, quaterno fuch, doth notat all take away immortality à parte poft, because bodies as well as spirits may be kept in immortality by the conservative concourse of Divine Power, and so the obje-

ction utterly falls to the ground. 2. There is only another argument that the persons of the other Object. 41 opinion have urged, such as Aquinas, and the rest of the Scholastick rabble, to wit, the Text in the Plalm, which is this: Who maketh Pal 104 4 hie Angels firits : bis ministers a saming fire. From whence they would positively conclude that they are spirits, and absolutely incorporcal; but fail of their purpose for these clear reasons. 1. The Text there cannot be rationally understood of their creation, or of their creaturely nature, but of their offices and administrations, because the word used there is not from NII to create, or form forth of nothing, but from not feeit, that is by ordering them in their offices and ministrations. And again the word my doth not alwaies or of necessity signific an incorporeal thing but that which is a body, as the winds, and fo doth Luther and diverse others render it; and it is commonly attributed to beafts as well as Men, as in that of Solomon. Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beaft that goeth downward to the earth? Where the word spirit, which is all one in the Hebrew, is attributed to beafts as well as to men, but no man (I suppose) will believe that the spirit of a beaft is simply incorporeal, and therefore by the word spirit in the Pfalm cannot necessarily be understood a simple incorporeal substance, and therefore the consequence is not necessary.

But the Author of the Epiftle to the Hebrews must needs be taken for the best Expositor of these words of the Psalmist, who doth quote them only for this purpole, to prove that Christ in dignity and office is far above the Angels who are all ordered to ferve and obey him, and are by their offices all but ministring spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of Salvation. By which it is manifest that this place is to be understood of their ministration and offices, and not of their nature or substances. 2. They can no more be meerly and literally said to be spirits, understanding foirit to intend an absolute incorporeal substance, than his ministers can be literally understood to be flaming fire, they must either be both literally true, which is absolutely absurd, or else those words must have a metaphorical interpretation, as they may and must have, and there is no inconvenience in that exposition. For as the winds, which is but a strong motion of the air, and the shining or flaming fire, are two of the most quick, agile and operative agents that are known un ous in nature, so the Angels and Christs Ministers are strong, quick and most nimble and powerful in performing their offices and administrations. Therefore we shall conclude this as Scheibler doth from S. Angustine: Nibil enim invisibile & incorporeum natura credendum oft, prater folum Deum, qui ex eo incorporeus & inwisibile dicitur, quia infinitus, & incircumscriptus fir. & an. c.8. eft, & fimplex, & fibi omutbus modis Sufficiens se ipso, & per feip. fum : omnie verd rationalis creatura corporea eft, Angeli & omnes Vir-

tutes corpores sunt, licet non substitust in carne.

Now though we have sufficiently proved that they are corporeal, that is, that they have bodies naturally united unto them, and fo have an internum, or moving power, and an externum, or a part moved, that is, as Dr. Meere confesseth, a spiritual and incorporcal part, and a corporeal part or vehicle, yet to assign what kind of bodies they have, or what proper difference there is betwixt their substance and other corporeal substances is no case matter to determine. Only we shall give two differences whereby they are distinguithed from other lubitances that are corporeal, and that as the Scripture holdeth them forth unto us. 1. The first differential diftinction is, that their bodies do not suffer, or are altered or dissipated, by the most strong, and operative sublunary agent that is known unto us: Amongst which we have none of greater force and activity than our culinary fire, yet it is manifest that that Element did not work upon nor burn the Angel that appeared to Manoab and Judges 13 20. his Wife, who ascended in the stame of the altar, and was not touch. ed, or altered at all, which plainly theweth that his body was not to be wrought upon by the fierce flame of sublunary fire, and he is there called the Angel of Jebovah. This also is confirmed by Dan 3. 24,25, that which Nebuchadnezzar faw, and confessed, that though there were three men only cast into the siery surnace, yet he saw a fourth (which by all the learned is judged to be an Angel) and they had no burt upon them, that is, the fire did not work upon their bodies to burn, alter, or consume them. So that in this the bodies of Angels differ from the most of other bodies, because they do not fuffer by sublunary fire, the most violent agent that we know. And this must needs rationally be taken to be proper unto Angels in regard of their created natures, and not as superadded by a Divine and Almighty Power, as in some other cases it may be granted. 2. A second difference is, that what bodies soever spirits or Angels have, or appear in, they have not flesh and bones such as Christ had in his true and numerical body in which he did appear after his refurrection, which was the same individual body which he had before he was crucified. But though they have bodies, yet to feeling and tangibility they have not field and bones as humane bodies have, which have a renitency and relifibility to our touch, which their bodies have not, being as it were ethereal, airy and shadowy, and yielding and giving way to the touch, and though to be divided and separated, yet, may be, do as soon close by counition, and fo fuffer nothing at all by that division.

CHAP. X.

Concerning the properties of their bodies it feems to have been the opinion of Terfullian (as I find him quoted by Mr. Banter) laft reft, o. 7: that they had thin pure and acreal bodies which they could dilate part 2. p. 2551 and expand, condenie and contract at their pleasures, and so frame them into diverse and fundry shapes; his words are these: Demones sua ber corpora contrabunt, & dilatant, ut volunt : ficut etiami lumbrici, & alia quadum infecta. So we be that some worms and infects will extend themselves into a wast length and smallness, that they can pass through a very small hole, or passage, and again contraft themselves into a great bulk, drawing in the length, and increating the breadth and thickness, which though it still be the same corporcal fubstance, and in general doth, in what figure soever it be brought into, but retain the same dimensions in respect of place. yet in regard of accidental shape or figure it may change the dimentions in respect of one another, as one while to be more in longirude, and less in breadth and depth, and sometimes more in breadth and depth, and less in length. So may the bodies of Angels by contraction and dilatation, fundry wayes after their dimensions, and confequently their shapes and figures, and all this according to the motion and act of their own wills, so that still there must be limits to these acts of distention and contraction, that they can do neither in an infinite degree as either to become an infensible and indivisible prick, nor to be infinitely expanded or dilated, and this opinion hath sufficiency of rationality and intelligibility in it. Of this very point S. Bernard speaketh thus modestly: Videntur Patres de bu Sup canila jusmodi diversa senfiffe, nec mibt perspicuum est unde alterutrum ! 504. doceam: O nefeire me finter. And though we cannot punctually enumerate, nor aflign thecertain properties of their bodies, yet we may rationally conclude thus much. 1. That they being creatures ordained for high and noble ends must needs have their bodies and organs fitted and fultably proportioned to fulfil and accomplish those ends, as doth must manifestly appear by the bodies and organs of all other creatures, which are most wifely and fitly framed by the Almighty, according to the feveral ends and uses they were created and ordained for. 2. It is most probable that considering there are creatures that as their wills are moved by their pallions and affections can alter the colours and figures of their own bodies, us is manifelt in worms, and in the colours of the Chameleon, as it is afferted by the experience of the learned Physician Dominieus Panarolus, fo from the less to the more, that Angels have bodies of far more excellency to perform their ministrations in, than those groß and terrestrial bodies have that are here below. And it is no imall wonder to observe our ordinary Gallon Turciem vel Gallopavas, how quiet and demisly sometimes he goes, and then again up. on the suddain by some emotion of spirit, how will his train be advanced and extended, his barbles swelled and pussed up, and the appendicle that comes over the bill or roftrum, be extended or contracted at the pleasure of the animal: And much more to consider the quick and suddain change of the colours of both those parts, as sometimes to a whitishness, or an ash-colour, sometimes purple, sometimes blewish, and sometimes purered, soquick a motion that creature can give to the spirits and blood, that they can fo quickly alter and change, not only the colours, but also the magnitude. And much more may we rationally believe that Angels can alter and change the figure and colour of their bodies according to the ministrations they are imployed about.

3. The Scripture informeth us that in or at the refurrettion, the bodies of men shall be at the Angels that are in heaven, ficut Angeli: Now this Analogy, comparison, or assimilation, would be altogether falle if Angels had no bodies at all, but were meerly incorporeal; then it would follow, that the bodies after the refurrection were made meer Spirits, and so ceased to be bodies, which is false according to the doctrine of S. Paul, who sheweth us plainly that after the resurrection they are changed in qualities into chuara 1 Cor. 15. 44 mouveaund spiritual bodies, for there is a natural Soul or Animal body, and so likewise, there is a spiritual body. From whence we necessarily conclude that Angels have Bodies, and that they are pure spiritual ones. Now we shall come to the other point intended in this Chapter, that is to show that the opinion of Angels assuming bodies of the Elements here below, is a meer figment, as must of necessity follow if this be a truth that we have proved, to wit, that they have bodies; for then assuming of other bodies must needs be in vain and to no purpose: but we shall also shew the weakness and folly of that Tenent by these positive reasons following.

1. Those that maintain the assumption of bodies dare not affirm that they are so invested with those bodies, as are humane souls with their bodies: for then there must be vital union, which cannot be but by Divine Ordination: But it doth not any where either by Scripture, or found rational confequence, appear that either God appointed, or gave power to Angels to assume to themselves bodies of what shape they pleased, or that he ordained avital union, betwire the Angels and those bodies they are supposed to assume either by Creation, or Generation, and therefore if they did assume any such bodies it must but be as we put on and off our Garments, or as Players put on and off their Perukes, Vizards and Garments according to the several things or persons they intend to represent ad personate. 2. But

supposed Witchcrast. CHAP. XI.

2. But the great question will be, who are the Taylors that shape and frame them these vestments? what! must it be themselves that shape and figurate these bodies, as snails are supposed to frame and make their shells and houses? Surely not, because if they be fimply incorporeal, then they can make no contact with corporeal matter, and without a corporeal contact there can be no alteration nor organization of matter, and confequently they cannot frame or shape themselves such veltments; neither can any other actor or agent be assigned that can frame them, and therefore the Tenent is a most ridiculous sigment. And again if they should have such solid bodies framed of the inferior Elements, as the body of a Serpent, as the Witchmongers do suppose the Devil assumed when he decrived Evah, and such bodies as Demons are vainly supposed to assume to carry the heavy bodies of Men and Women in the air, then those bodies must needs be of that solidity and compactness that they cannot suddainly be wasted and dissipated, and then doubtlefly we should find them sometimes, as we do the floughs, Examin, or skins of Snakes, for they could not be confumed in a moment. And it were horrid to suppose that God should instantaneously create them, and as suddainly dissipate and waste them. So that in verity there is nothing of certifude, but it may be looked at as a Chimera and a Poetical Fable.

3. And if the Angels had not fuch bodily organs wherein they could move, walk, speak, and perform other such actions withal, before they affumed or crept into fuch veltments, their being inclosed and invested with them and in them would no more fit and inable them to walk or speak in them, than would an hollow Image inable a lame Man to walk, or a dumb Man to speak that were inclosed in them. Therefore (suppose) as the Witchmongers hold, that the Devil should appear to a Witch in the assumed shape of a Cat, Dog, Foal or fuch like, and walk and talk with him or her, if before that assumption of such a shape, the Devil could not walk and speak, the having crept into such a vestment would no more inable him to speak, than a dead Cat in an empty hogshead.

CHAP. XI.

Of the Knowledge, and Power of faln Angels.

Hele evil Angels of which we treat, did doubtless, before they left their habitation and did not keep their first estate, participate of the same knowledge and power, that those Angels Still recein that did not fall into that defection and rebellion; so that our disquisition must be, what knowledge and power they 216 have loft, and what they still do retain, and this we may consider in these particulars. I. That there are many things of which they are totally ignorant and nescient. 2. The knowledge that they have is dark and confused.

1. Concerning the first, this must of necessity be a certain rule that what the holy and elect Angels do not know, the evil and fain Augels must much more ignore, except the knowledge of evil and guilt, from which the good Augels are free; and these may be reduced to these few points. 1. We here may consider that the knowledge of Angels, is to be restrained into these three ranks; first either their innate and congenerate knowledge, or fecondly their infused or revealed knowledge by God in his Son Jesus Christ, or thirdly their experimental knowledge that they gain by observation and experience, and it is of the first only that we speak in this Paragraph, and the rest we shall handle anon. 2. That our cogitations, defires and affections are not known to the Angels, unless they manifelt themselves either by external ligns, or effects, or be revealed from God; Andtheseways they may be known, but not otherwife; for it is manifest that Satan had darted it, or put it into the mind of Judas to betray Christ, yet had he so cunningly carried himself, that neither by any effect nor fign did the Disciples know it until our Saviour did reveal it unto them. So that the Scriptures 1 Con. 2. 11. do plainly inform us of the truth in this particular, as, For what man knoweth the things of a man, fave the fairlt of man which is in him? For this is only proper to God to fearch the heart, and to a Chron. 6.30. understand the cogitations, as faith the Text: For thou only know-

eft the hearts of the children of men, he only knoweth them, and neither Angels nor men: and though the heart be deceitful and de-Jer. 17. 9, to Sperately wicked, yet God doth fearch the beart, and try the reins.

So that if the good Angels do not know the cogitations, defires and affections of Mens hearts, except God either reveal them unto them, or they be made manifest by figns and effects, much less must the bad Angels know or understand them. 3. Those things that are meerly contingent, and those which depend upon free will, cannot be known of the Angels, unless they be revealed by God, as is manifelt by the Text. Produce your canfe, faith the Lord, bring forth your firong Idols, or Diviners, faith the King of Jacob. Let them bring them forth, and shew as what shall happen: let them show the former things what they be, that we may consider them, and know the later end of them, or declare so things for to come. Shew the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that ye are Gods : yea, do good, or evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together. And as the good Angels know not contingent things, understand them, as is manifest in these examples. The Angel that was Muh. 2. 13. Sent of God to warn Joseph to take the child Jesus, and fly into E. gypt, did not of his own innate knowledge, either in it felf, or in its cause (as the Schoolmen speak) know that Herod would seek or those that depend upon free will, much less do the faln Angels

the child to destroy him, because it was truly a contingent thing, and did only depend upon the free act of Herods will, and therefore by Divine Goodness and Providence it was revealed to the Angel, thereby to preserve the life of the child, and to fulfil the Scriptures. Neither do the faln Angels know future events that are contingent, or depend upon the free will of men, as is manifelt in Satans tempting and afflicting of Job, which he intended to have been his destruction, and therefore did fallly divine and foretel that Job would carfe God to bie face, but the event was not according to his lying conjecture, but to the manifestation of Jobs Faith and Patience, and produced his glorious restoration. So thelying spirit in the mouth of Ababs Prophets, did not know that Abab would go up to Ramoth Gilead, or that he should be slain there. but that God did reveal it unto him, and fent him forth with a powerful commission to prevail. So that all the predictions and Divinations of the Devil or his Angels are nothing but lying gueffes and uncertain conjectures; for what can be expected from him who was a liar from the beginning, and the father of lies? Neither were his Idol-priests, Wizzards, Diviners or Prophets any better but meer conjecturers and lyars, as was most manifest in all those Oracles that were amongst the Grecians, which uttered nothing but cheats, lies, equivocations and ambiguous responsions. And those amongst the Jews were no better, who took upon them to foretel and divine for others, but could not or did not foresee their own destruction. as is manifest in Ababs Prophets slain by Elijah, and the Priests of Baal flain by Jehn, and therefore must all those needs be deceived that run to Divining Witches and Wizzards, of which fort of couzeners we have too many.

And if against this it be objected that the Devils did know and object. confess that Jesus was the Son of God, and therefore if they could tell this that was fo great a mystery, much more easily may they know other inferior things, and so may foretel future contingencies, to which we give this responsion.

1. We only affirm that Devils did not know Christ by their innate or inbred knowledge, but they might know him by the revelation of the Father, and by the things that were written of him by the Prophets, and by the observation of those things that were manifested at his birth, and shewed and done in his life time.

2. And it is manifest that God did not altogether intend to have him hidden from the knowledge of Devils, because he ordered that the spirit should lead him into the wilderness, that he might be tempted, that his power and victory might be shown over the Prince of darkness. And the end that the wisdom of God had in this, was that the Devils to their greater terror and horror might know their Conquerour, and by whose power they should be tormented and thrown into the Abyss or bottomless pit, and this made Matth. 8. 291 them cry out faying, Art thou come to torment us before the time, Luke 8. 34. and also force us not into the Abysis or deep.

3. The Devils might know this because the Angels had proclaimed his birth to the Shepherds, and told them, that unto them was Luk. 2. 11. born that day, in the City of David, a Saviour Sohich was Christ the Lord : And they might know it from the appearing of the Holy Choft in the form of a Dove, and refting upon him, and by the voice which faid from Heaven, this to my beloved fon, in whom I am well pleased. And they might know it by the conquest that Christ had over the Devil, and by their daily being cast out by the power of his word, and command, as by the finger of God. 4. The mysteries of Salvation cannot be known unto the good

Angels, but by Divine Revelation, much less unto the bad ones. as witnesseth the Text : For what man knoweth the things of aman, save the spirit of man which is in him ? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. The mysteries therefore of Salvation, as they have been decreed by himself in his eternal counsel, are not known unto the Angels, but by the revelation of the spirit of God and the complement and fulfilling of his promises. So concerning the restauration or precise day and hour of the coming of Christ, do not the Angels in Heaven know, though their knowledge be valt and great, and therefore much less those fain and rebellious Angels that are chained in everlasting darkness, untill the judgment of the great day. 5. And as that which is not understood of the blessed and elect Angels must needs be unknown unto the faln Angels, so likewise there are many things known to the good Angels, that are hidden or but conjectured at by the bad ones, as may be manifest in these instances. 1. The blessed Angels know and see the face of the Fa-Math. 18. 10. ther in beatifical vision, as saith the Text: Take beed that ye offend not one of these little oness, for I say unto you, that in heaven their Angels do alwayes behold the face of my father, which is in heaven. Upon which Beza hath this note: Loquitur more feculi bujue, ubi consistere in conspectu regis faciema, ejus perpetud videre pose, signum est domestica intimag, familiaritatie. But the faln Angels are totally deprived of this bleffed Vision, being cast forth of Heaven,

Revel. 12.9. as faith the Text. And thegreat Dragon was cast out, that old Serpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the world: he was cast out into the earth, and his Angels were cast out with him.

And S. Peter tells us, that God spared not the Angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness. 2. And as they have lost the vision and fruition of the mercies of God, so they have utterly lost the knowledge of his will, concerning his Covenant of Grace and mercy to the elect, for they are only ministring spirits sent forth to tempt to sin, to afflict and punish, and have itill enough for the advancing of the Kingdom of darkness, but have no knowledge of saving grace nor the mysteries of the Gospel, but are all enemies and adversaries to God and the Kingdom of Christ, and goeth about feeking continually whom he may devour. But it is the bleffed elect Angels that are ministring

supposed Witchcrast. CHAP. XI.

Spirits, fent forth for to minister to them, who shall be beirs of Sal. Heb. 1.14. vation. 3. The good Angels have the bleffed messages revealed unto them for the affilting and delivering of the godly. So an Angel did comfort Joshua, and another warned Joseph to take the child Josh 5.13. Jeshu, and to fly into Ægyps, thereby to preserve the childs life 1 and an Angel delivered the Apostles forth of prison, and many such Ass 12.7.

happy errands are made manifest unto them, and they imployed about them, of all which the faln Angels are utterly ignorant, and they are concealed from them.

6. There are some things that the evil Angels know of, which the bleffed ones have no sensibility of, that is the knowledge of their own guilt, and the experimental fense of the loss of Gods Favour,

Love, Grace and Mercy. 2. The second thing that we proposed to handle, is, that the knowledge that the fain Angels have is dark and confused, which is plain because they are reserved in chains under darkness, unto the Jude 6. judgment of the great day. Now those that are kept or reserved in darkness, must of necessity have their knowledge dark, and confequently confused; and he also that is the Prince of darkness, and the Father and Author of the works of darkness, must needs like his children have his understanding darkned also. And therefore we will conclude this point with the opinion of S. Augustine who speaking both of the Augels that stood, and those that fell, saith thus: Ante peccatum autem tam ift quam illi perfette omnia intel. De civilate ligebant. Accessit igitur istu propter peccatum aliquid tenebrarum. Dil, i 91 Proinde ctiam tenebra appellantur, & in tenebris effe dicuntur, calefti illa luce destituti, & in locum caliginosum pracipitati. Ut inde intelligamus nonnibil tenebrarum naturali etiam illorum menti accessife, in panam admissi peccati in Deum, Deig, filium. But we shall only here speak of their knowledge in reference tothings acted in this elementary and sublunary world, and that in these particulars. 1. Though they retain the same faculty of understanding that they had before their fall, of the generation, motion and mutation of natural things here below, yet is it much darkned, and far inferior to the knowledge of the good Angels in natural things, the one fort living and abiding in light, and the other being flut up in darkness.

2. What knowledge soever they have by their natural faculties, or that they may be supposed to gain by acquisition, is by them gotten or learned for no other end, but for the hurt and destruction of mankind, and not as the good Angels who make use of theirs for the benefit of those that shall be heirs of Salvation. For as a good Phylician labours and studies to know the nature and virtues of Animals, Vegetables and Minerals, and their parts and products, for the good and benefit of mankind, but a Witch or poyloner laboureth to know their virtues thereby to destroy and kill; even so do the evil Angels, and not otherwise.

3. The knowledge of Devils whether natural or acquisitive is spurious, erroueous, fallacious, deceitful and delusive, both in respect of themselves and others, for as saith the Scripture: He man a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he to a liar, and the father of it. Therefore faith learned Rollock upon this very place: Hoe eft loqui ex ingenio fuo, qued naturale est sibi facere ; suum enim & quod ex sese deprompsit, non autem quod aliunde accepit, profert. For as all the endeavours of the fain Angels tend to the feduction and delution of others, fo are they, and were they the deceivers and deluders of themselves: For it is most manifest that their minds are so obcacated and covered over with darkness, that although they be not altogether in general destitute of the knowledge of that which is just and unjust, good and evil, pious and impious, yet they do not acknowledge their own fin, as they ought, for they are to pertinacious in their fin and wickedness, that they do not attentively perpend and consider their own evil, and therefore are not truely sensible, or do understand that it is evil, and therefore are by the just judgment of God so absolutely obezeated that they cannot acknowledge their own evil and fin. And as that knowledge they have is so darkned that they have deluded and deceived themselves, so all their knowledge in respect of others is erroneous, fallacious and lying, as the 2 Thes. 2. 9, Text witneffeth of Antichrift : Even he whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power and signs, and lying wonders: And with all deceiveablenofs of unrighteonfuefs, in them that perift. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusions, that they Mould believe a lie.

4. In regard of the words, intentions and actions of wicked Men they both know and may foretel much, because they are the Authors and devifers of those evils and wicked thoughts; as it was the Devil that pushed on the Scribes and Pharisees to accuse and put Christ to death, for it was their hour and the power of darkness, and it was Satan that had darted it into the mind of Judas Iscariot to betray his Master: And therefore the Devils might pro-

to pass; so that they may easily foretel what themselves have projected and prepared instruments to accomplish.

5. The acquired knowledge of the faln Angels must needs be great in regard of their vast multitudes and their being dispersed in this caliginous air or Atmosphere, for the Devil is called the Prince of the air (if that be literally to be understood) and he compasseth the earth and walketh to and fro in it, and goeth about feeking whom he may devour, and therefore by their agility of body and celerity of motion may easily know what is done and spoken, and may so very quickly convey it one to another, and so may most readily communicate things that are acted or spoken at an incredible distance one from another; but yet all this no further than Divine Providence will permit and allow of.

fciency to Devils in respect of their acquired knowledge, which we by no means can allow them, and that for these reasons. 1. Though it be granted that they do grow and increase in the knowlege of fin, evil, and wickedness, therewith to hurt, devour and destroy, or gain more skill and craft to lie, cheat, delude and deceive; yet that they either gain or gather any knowlege that is good, or for any good end, is absolutely faile, for they abode not in the truth, neither are they lovers of truth, but are utter Enemies to all good knowledge and verity. 2. That they may be Malters of all the arts or wayes of deceit, lying, cheating and delution, is no way to be denied, but that they should (as many suppose) by reason of their longevity and duration, learn and be perfect in any or all of the good Arts or Sciences, is to me utterly incredible, because they are the Corruptors of all, but the perfectors of none, else should they be the greatest Philosophers in the World, which is faise. And therefore most Christian and pious was that Sentence of that unjustly censured Person Paracelsus in these words: Et licet Diabolus qui- De ver. infin. dem plurima machinetur : hoc tamen cum omnibus suis legionibus vo. 1.p. 425: praftare minime poteft, ut vel abjestam ollam frangat, nedum eandem faciat: multo is minus quenquam occidere, aut jugulare poteft. nifi id mandato, permissu jussug, ac vi divina faciat.

The other main point that we undertake to handle in this Chapter, is, touching the power of the faln Angels, and that is to be confidered in these three particulars : 1. In general in respect of their power, either in spiritual and moral things, or in things natural. 2. Or in respect of spiritual and moral things in particular. 3. Or in respect of Physical and Sublunary things.

I. And for the first it must of necessity be granted, that their power fince their fall is much diminished, or at least restrained and chained and fettered up. For they becoming Rebels against the Almighty, and not keeping their first Estate, but having left their own habitation, it was most agreeable to the wisdom and justice of God to take away from them the greatest part of that power and authority that he formerly had given them, and so to imprison and chain them up, that they might never be able to attempt or perform the like Rebellion again; otherwise the Almighty should not have used that wisdom that is ordinary with earthly Princes, who haveing overcome those that rebelled against them, do not only disarm them, but also confine or imprison them. And to this very thing do the Scriptures allude, when they say, that they are delivered into chains of darkness, and that they are reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day. So that though the Devils Still-retain their cruel, wicked and devouring will and mind; yet they are but like the Lyon within the Bars of Iron, or Bajanet in the Cage of Iron led about by Tamberlan, and fo though they be never fo cruelly bent to do mischief, yet they are under the Chains and cooped up in the Grates of Darkness, and kept in Everlasting Chains that they are never able to break or unloofe. 222

And though he be called the God of this World and the Prince of it. vet that is not to be understood, that he is the Prince and Ruler of the Creatures of the World, or that he giveth riches, health, honour or the like, for those are the gift of God only and not of the Devil; John 12-31. but he is the God and Prince of the evil and wickedness that is in the World, for in that, and by that, he reigneth and ruleth; and to this purpose faith Rollock : Damnatio eft Satana, qui peccati Ephol. 2. 2. author of. Nam vita hujus mundi est secundum principem cui potestas est aeris, &c. Dicitur autem Princeps hujus mundi, quia per Rom. 14. 17. peccatum, & mortem regnat in mundo: ut enim tefte Paulo, Regnum Dei positum oft in justitia, & pace, & gaudio per Spiritum sanctum, sic regnum Satana positum est in injustitia, & morte. Unde ipse propter peccatum per quod regnat, dicitur rector tenebrarum. Propter mortem per quam regnat, dicitur imperium mortis habere. And up-Ephel 6. 12. on this place St. Augustin faith thus : Nunc Princeps hujus mundi ejicietur foras, absit ut Diabolum principem mundi ita dictum exi-Rimemus, ut eum Cæli & terræ dominari poffe credamus : fed mundus appellatur in malis hominibus, qui toto orbe terrarum diffusi? funt. Sic ergo diclum est: Princeps hujus mundi, id est princeps ma-Vid.Caton.dur. lor um hominum qui habitant in mundo. Appellatur etiam mundus in bonis, qui similiter per totum orbem terrarum diffust sunt : Ided dicit Apostolus, Deus erat in Christo mundum reconcilians sibi : Hi funt ex quorum cordibus principes mundi eficientur foras. And whereas also Satan is called the Prince of the power of the air, that. worketh in the Children of disobedience, it is not literally so to be understood, as though he had the natural power of ruling the air, and caufing of winds, hail, fnow, frost, rain, thunder and lightning, for these are all ordered according to the will of divine providence and the causes that he hath established in the Elements: So David speaking of the Heavens, the Earth, and the Elements, doth con-Pal. 119 89. clude thus; They continue this day according to thine ordinances, for all thy fervants: And it is he that ordereth all thefe, as faith the Text: Who covereth the Heavens with Clouds, who prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh grass to grow upon the mountains. He 16, 17,18. giveth snow like wool, he scattereth the hoary frost like ashes. He casteth forth his ice like morsels: Who can stand before his Cold? Pal. 148. 8. He sendeth forth his word, and melteth them: he causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow. And all these fulfil the will and command of God, and not the will of the faln Angels; for the Text faith: Fire and hail, snow and vapour, stormy wind sulfilling his word; so that if they have any thing to do in the sublunary changes or motions of Meteors, it is but only as instrumental and organical Causes, working meerly as they are ordered and acted by the first cause that worketh all in all, as the Christian Philosopher Doctor Fludd hath most learnedly proved in his Treatise of Cosmical Meteors, which I feriously commend to those that defire full Satisfaction in this particular. But the Devil is chiefly called the Prince of the power of the air, because he is the proud, high, airy and spiritual Prince and Ruler of wickedness in high or super-coelestial places, by which proud, airy, and spiritual wickedness, he worketh Epich 6.12 in the Children of dishedience. For we wrestle not against stell and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places, to role wression. Upon which learned Beza saith thus: Hominos quorum fragilis & caduca est natura, cui opponuntur versuite spirituales, infinitis partibus potentiores. And again, Ista nomina tribuis angelis malis, propter essentiores. And again, Ista nomina tribuis angelis malis, propter essentiores. And therefore S. Chrystophen upon this place saith thus: Mundi verò dominos eos vocat, 257 non quod mundum gubernent, sed solet scriptura malos allus hunc mundum vocare, ut quando Christus dicit, vos non essis ex hoc mundo quemadmodum ego non sum ex mundo.

CHAP. XI.

2. To consider their power in spiritual and moral things particularly, we shall find they have no power in some things, but by their fall have utterly lost it, as is apparent in these sew points. 1. They have loft that freedom of will that they had by Creation. and were partakers of before they fell, and agreeable to this is the Thefis of learned Zauchy, which is this: "That all Devils have to De optib. Del " far their wills made obstinate in sins, the hatred of God, Christ, 1.4. 6.6. p. 175. "and of Mankind, that from this evil they cannot will to repent, "and thereby be faved; and this he thus proveth. 1. Because in the Scriptures they are called, worned near if on they are now become such, that they cannot be changed from their malice and wickedness; because it is become natural unto them. 2. From whence it is manifest, that the whole time since their fall, never yet any of them hath given any fign of relipiscence. 2. If they could repent and believe in Christ, then for them and their fins Christ also should have died ; for he saith, that he prayed for those 10, 14. that were to believe in him ; but they neither believe in him, neither did he die for them. 4. But the chief cause of their impenitency is the just judgment of God, that hath given them up to hardness of heart, because they finned knowingly and wilfully against the truth. And this point is sufficiently proved by Thomas Aquinas, the rest of the Schoolmen and many others. 2. So that as they have loft freedom of will, so they cannot at all will or act to be faved, or to repent. 3. And as they cannot will or act to repent or be laved, to the whole acts of their wills are evil, malicious and wicked, being liars and murtherers from the beginning.

3. The third is to confider their power in sublunary and elementary things which is the most pertinent to our present purpose, it being the thing that some have magnified even to a kind of omnipotency, and therefore we must the more narrowly ventilate and examine it, which we shall do in this order.

1. How great soever the power of the fain Angels may be supposed to be, yet neither in knowlege can they be deemed to be omissient, or in power to be omnipotent, because they are created Beings,

Beings, circumscribed, limited and finite, and consequently can perform no act that necessarily must require an omnipotent power, and fo can neither create things de nove, annihilate or transubstantiate any Creature or substance, or pervert or put forth of order. the things that God by Creation, Decree and Providence hath set into their certain orders of Generation, alteration and cor-

2. How great soever their power may be supposed to be, yet rationally it must be taken for a truth, that they have not the same power that they had before their fall. For as Zanchy faith: Certum eft enim in universum, & in genere, bac etiam in parte illos punitos fuife, ut non poffint quicquid poterant, cum boni effent, nec etiam quiequid nune velint. Because the Holy Ghost beareth witness, that they are bound in Chains, and that Satan begged leave of God to invade Job, that they fought with the good Angels, but were overcome, and that they may be so resisted of believing men that they may be overthrown. Ac ve nobis, nist potentia Demonum insirmata effet, & à Domino comprimeretur, & compesceretur.

Ut Supra.

3. And what power soever be granted to the faln Angels, yet it is by the opinion of all the learned, restrained only to these sublunary and inferior bodies, and that they have neither power by Creation or Ordination, to work upon, move, or alter things that are Angelical, Celestial, Ethereal and Superior, but only are chained in this Caliginous Atmosphere, and impure air. For it is manifest, that superior bodies work upon those that are inserior, but not on the contrary, neither have we any examples that can prove that they do operate upon Celestial bodies, and so their power (how great foever some may suppose it to be) is only restrained to these inferior sublunary things.

4. The operations and actions performed by the faln Angels, may be considered, either in the simple respect of their natural and created power, and this how great soever it was before their fall, is not only lessened, but that which remains, is limited and restrained with the Adamantine Chains of the decree of divine providence: or in respect of what power they may have superadded by God, when they are Commissionated and sent by God to effect some particular actions, as for example, Moses and Aaron had but the ordinary strength and power that was common to other men, before they were fent upon the message to Pharaoh, and made Instruments to deliver the Israelites, for then were they armed and indowed with the power of working great and stupendious Miracles. So it cannot rationally be imagined that the two Angels that were fent as Instruments to destroy sodom and Gomorrha, did or could of their own proper, individual and created power, bring down Fire and Brimstone from Heaven to burn those two Cities, but that it was brought to pass by the Power of the Almighty, as granted and given to them for that judgment only, and not by that ordinary power that they could always exercise, for the Text saith: Then the Lord rained upon Sodom, and upon Gomorrha brimstome Gen. 19.24. and fire from the Lord forth of heaven. Neither can it rationally be supposed that one Angel hath by his created power, that ability, that he can flay in one night an hundred four score, and five thon- 1611. 37. 36. fand, as it is written the Angel did in the camp of the Affyrians, but that it was brought to pass by the power of Jehovah superadded unto him, to work the great deliverance of Hezekiah and his people. Upon which place the learned Expositor John Calvin faith thus: Solm quidem dominus fatte per fe poteft, ac certe folus nos fervat : Angeli enim, manus quodammodo funt ipfius : Unde etiam Virtutes & Potestates vocantur. Interim bac vis foli Deo tribuenda, cujus organa tantummodo sunt Angeli, ne in superstitionem incidamm. From whence we may note these two things. I. That even Devils are but the organs and instruments by which God accomplisheth his will, and executeth his wrath and justice, and so are but as tormenters and executioners to act no more than what they are appointed and commanded to do. 2. We may observe that in times past they had large Commissions given and great power superadded to perform great wonders for the destruction of the wicked, which was done for great and extraordinary ends, such as in these days the Lord doth seldom or never use, and therefore there can be no reason now shewed why Devils should have any extraordinary power added unto them in working strange feats for Witches and Sorcerers.

5. It will much conduce to the clearing of this point of the power of Devils to examine into what place they are faln, or fince their rebellion into what Prisonthey are shut, and this we shall give in the Thesis Deop. Det 1.40 of learned Zanchy who faith thus: "All the evil Angels were "47-174 "thrust down from Heaven, into places that are below the Celesti-"al Orbs, to wit into this air, and below, as it were into a cali-"ginous Prison, where they are reserved unto the Universal Judg-"ment as bound with chains. And this is plain from the words of S. Peter, who faith : For if God fpared not the Angels that finned, but 2 Pet. 2.4. cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness to be reserved unto judgment. To which accordeth that of Jude: And the Angels that kept not their first estate, but left their own ha. Ide 6. bitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness, unto the judgment of the great day. For as learned Musculm tells us: De- Lac. com. p. 12: ces Christianum hominem ca modestia, & cautio, ut nibil affirmet, nec fique alim affirm werit, inconsiderate recipiat, quod non certo veritatis testimonio è sacris literis desumpto, consirmari queat. To this we shall only add what the acute and learned Theologue Amesium notes upon this place of Peter, which in English is this: "In general (he "faith) we are taught, that they did not keep their first estate, that "is, they did forfake righteoutness and that station in which they "were placed of God, and afterwards they have exercised from the "beginning, envy, lies and murther against Men. Also (he saith) we "are taught, that they were a great number that were partakers of

"this defection, and therefore the Apollle speaketh in the plural "number. 1. They are faid to be thrust down in Tartarum into "Hell by reason of the commutation of estate and condition, because "that from a most high condition, which they received by creation. "they were cast down to an estate most low. 2. By reason of com. "mutation of place, because they were thrust down from a place "of beatitude, where they were conversant about the Throne of God "with the rest of the Angels, into an inferiour place subject to fin "and mifery. But that this place is in the lowest parts of the earth. "as the Papilts do hold, cannot be made forth from the Scriptures. "but rather the contrary, for they are said to be conversant, and "to rule in the air, and to walk to and fro in the earth feeking the "subversion of Men. This at the least is manifest from the Scri-"ptures, and ought to fatisfie those that are not too curious. "1. That they suffer a great change of estate and condition. 2. That "they are excluded and thut out from their first habitation. "3. That they are in such a place where they suffer both the pain "of loss and of sense. They are said to be delivered over to dark-"ness, partly in respect of sin, and partly in respect of milery; for "darkness in Scripture doth denote both: and they are said to be "delivered in chains, by a metaphor taken from facinorous per-"fons, that are condemned and kept bound in prison with chains, "and the chains are these. 1. Obsirmation or obduration in sins. "2. An utter despair of any freedom or deliverance. 3. A terrible "expectation of extream milery, and an horrid fear of being cast "into the abysse or deep. 4. The Providence of God which con-"tinually watches over their custody, imprisonment, and punish-"ment. They are faid to be referved to damnation, because they "are so bound up in these evils and miseries, that they never can "escape; and yet these are but the beginnings only of their miseries, "for they are hereafter to go into that everlasting fire, that is prepa-"red for the Devil, and his Angels.

6. Though the Devils be faid to be referved in everlasting chains of darkness, yet are they said sometimes to be loosed, and to go to and fro in the earth, and to walk up and down in it, and that Satan doth like a roaring lion walk about seeking whom he may devour. Which must be understood (as we have shewed before) that in respect of his evil will, malice and envy, he seeketh and desireth the overthrow of all mankind, but yet is so restrained that he doth but act, what, where, when and so far only as God doth limit and order him. For though it be usually said that God doth permit him, yet it cannot be understood as a bare and nude permission, as though God should suffer him to go so loose and at liberty, that he may exert and exercise his power to the uttermost, for then all the godly should be destroyed both in Souls and Bodies, and God should

vernour, even as though an hungry fierce Lion that had been chained up in a grate, should be let loofe to rage and run where he would,

and to kill and devour what he could, and thus the Witchmongers do suppose of him, which is false and contrary to the testimony of Gods word. But when the Almighty maketh use of Satan or his Angels, they are only so let loose that he hath a hook in their Nostrils, and their Necks in a chain, that they can act no more nor no further than he ordereth, and gives them leave to accomplish, and thus are they limited not only by his irrefiltible will and decree, but they are also watched over and ruled by the good Angels that are as it were their keepers and overseers. So when the Devil is used as an instrument to afflict Holy Job, he is first let loose to afflict him in his Children and Goods, but not to touch his Body; and the second time he hath leave and power given him to lay his hand upon Jobs Body, but not to take away his life: which do plainly shew, that he is not only and barely suffered to do what he will, but hath his limits fet how far he shall act, and no farther. And when God maketh use of him for the punishment of the wicked, hegiveth him power, and ordereth him how far to act or prevail. As in the case of the lying spirit in the mouth of Ahabs Prophets, the evil spirit is sent forth with this commission, And God faid thou shalt 1 Kings 22, 22. perswade him and prevail also: go forth and do so. By which it is manifest that he prevaileth more by the virtue of Gods command and commission, than by his own proper created power.

7. It is manifest that as the good Angels are the Ministers of God

for the Salvation of mankind, so the evil Angels are ministring spirits only feeking the destruction and damnation of Men; and though vid. Lamburt. God doth use the Ministry of these that are evil and have an evil Dam. Ifages.

will, yet he useth them well, and to good ends, that is, as the ex- 6.24.9.68. ecutioners of his justice to chasten the godly, and to restrain, or destroy the wicked. Therefore God and the Devil do not afflict, tempt or do any other thing for the same ends; for God acteth to prove, preserve, and stir up to goodness, but the Devil acteth to bring into fin and evil, to destroy and to bring to despair, as is manifest in the History of Job. And therefore here we may consider the several ways wherein God useth the evil Angels as his instruments, and that is in these particulars. 1. God useth him generally for temptation both of the good and the bad; so he tempted David, Christ and the Disciples, for Satan had destred to sift them as wheat, and therefore he is called & meekon, the tempter: and these temptations are internal and spiritual, for we fight not against fiest and blood, but against spiritual wickedness in high places. And in these as far as concerneth the faithful, he acteth but only as God permitteth or ordereth him, as is plain in the case of David, where one Text faith, Jehovah moved David to number the people, and in another place, and Satan stood up, and moved David to number the people: where it is to be noted that God did it as the director

able, but would with the temptationalso make a way to escape, that they might be able to bear it. 2. God maketh use of him for the challifement and affliction of the godly, as is most manifest in that of Job; but this only to far as he is limited, ordered and commanded from God and no further. 3. When Satan as a commenting or punishing instrument is used of God, he bath his commission given him how far only he shall act and proceed, beyond which he can-not go one hairs breadth, as is manifest in the case of Abab and the Gadarens Swine, so that we may conclude this with the learned Exago. Aphorism of Pifcator in thefe words: Etft autem Satan fen Diabolus cum fuis Angelis Des & filits Det adverfatur quantum in ipfo eft, nimirum voluntate & conatu : non tamen effecin; ita nimirum ut vel fidelibus perniciem afferre, vel quicquam efficere poffit quod Dem nolit. Dens enim illum potentia fua frano vinctum con-Aricuma tenet: ut ea modo exequatur que ei divinitus mandata. ant concessa fuerint.

8. Lastly, we shall now examine the particulars wherein learned Zanchy doth acknowledge the fain Angels to have power over our and other fublunary bodies, and they are principally thefe.

r. Upon the supposition granted that the fall Angels have permission, he holdesh that by their own proper created natural power, they can as they please move in place: as to lift a Body up from the earth on high, and then to let it fall or throw it down to the earth; that they can transfer or carry a body from one City to another in a very thort space of time: Lastly, that they can move and agitate bodies with every kind of local motion that none can relift them. And that therefore all those strange transportations of Witches in the air into forraign and far distant places (he holdeth) need not bethought strange or impossible, and that they may be done with great celerity, and in a short time. And this he thinketh he pro-Adis 39, 40. Veth by the example of Philip, who when he had instructed the Eunuch in the faith and baptized him, was caught away by the spirit of the Lord, that the Ennuch saw him no more, and that he was found at Azotus. Upon which we must make these animadversions. 1. That upon the supposition or ground that faln Angels are simply and meerly incorporeal, this must be falle, for then they cannot move in place, nor agitate any bodies, as we have sufficiently proved before. 2. And though upon the supposition that they are corporeal, they may move in place, and may move and agitate other, bodies, yet that mult be understood in a proportionable measure, according to their power and strength, and not in an infinite, or indefinite respect; for though one Devil may be suppofed to move or lift up that which would load an Horse, yet it will not follow that he can move or lift up as much as would load a Ship of a thousand Tun; and though one Devil might remove a Millstone by his own created power, yet it will not follow that he can remove the greatest mountain that is to be found. 3. And whatsoever motion Devils may have here in the air, or power to remove and agitate bodies, yet the least of these cannot be performed but by licence and permission from God, which licence and permission is always for ends agreeable to his Wildom and Justice; but for God to license or permit Devils to appear to Witches in the shape of Cats, Dogs, Squirrels or the like, to the end to fuck upon their bodies or to have carnal copulation with them, or to transport them in the air to places far distant, to dance, revel, feast and to do homage to the Devil (as the Witchmongers alledge) is for so impure, filthy, horrid and abominable ends, as can no way agree with the Wifdom or Justice of the Almighty, and therefore must needs be falle and frivolous. 4. And that which the fall Angels are in the Scriptures recorded to have performed, may be confidered, whether they accomplished those things by their own created power, or by the power of God granted to them when they are lent forth to perform fuch or fuch ag act: For as it may not be rationally granted that the two Angels that were instruments for the destroying of Sodom and Gomorrha did bring down fire and brimfrom Heaven by their own created power, nor that the destroving Angel in Egypt did in one night kill all the first born by his own power, but by the power of the Almighty granted unto him in that mission, so it is not rational to suppose, that although Satan might by internal motions and spiritual temptations prevail with the Sabaans and Chaldaans who were his Vassals, wherein he could work what he would, to take away the Oxen, Affes and Camels of Job, and to flay his Servants: though (I fay) he might do this by his created power; yet that he hould bring fire from Heaven to destroy the sneep, or that he by his created power could raise such a wind, as could blow down the house in which the Sons and Daughters of Job were, and flay them, is not probable, butthat it was performed by that affilting power that was granted him of God, to effect that affliction upon Job, that God had determined for the trial and manifestation of his Faith and Patience, which cannot in any reason be said to be done by Devils in their transactions with Witches, and therefore must needs be Fables and Chimeras. 5. And whereas he addeth that the Devils can perform all kind of motions with natural bodies, and that none can refift them, it is too large by far; for by that rule they might shake and remove the earth, which they cannot do, for it abideth firm according to Gods appointment in the creation: And it is abfurd to think that the superior and good Angels cannot resist them, who have far greater force and might than the faln Angels have. 6. And whereas he would prove the power of Devils by that of the spirit of the Lord conveying of Philip from the Ethiopian Eunuch, which supposing it to be a good Angel, it must likewise be granted to be furnished from God to have that power to carry him away, and doth not necessarily conclude that the Angel did it by its proper created power: neither is the confequence good, to argue that what a good Angel may do, that therefore a bad one may do the fame or the like, for their powers and strength are not equal, the one retaining what he had by creation, the other losing much by reason of his rebellion and fall; as an outlawed person hath not in a civil respect the same power that another person hath that is under a legal capacity, and as a prisoner that is loaden with chains, gives and setters, can neither walk, leap, or run so fast, as he that hath none, no more can the settered Devils move with that agility and celerity that the good Angels can do that have no setters nor chains at all.

2. A second kind of actions that he assigneth unto Devils is, that they cannot only move bodies locally, but also can alter them diverse and sundry ways, as to make hot things of cold, and so on the contrary, white things of black, and black of white, and can make of fair things deformed ones, and so on the contrary, and can make found bodies fick, and fick bodies found, affecting them with various qualities. But these particulars he leaves altogether without proof, except one Text in these words: And he cried with a lond voice unto the four Angels to whom it was given to burt the earth and the feas. From whence we shall observe these things. 1. It is granted that God doth make use of evil Angels to punish the wicked, and to chastise and afflict the godly, and in the effecting of these things that they have a power given them to hurt the earth and the Sea and things therein, as to bring tempelts, thunder, lightning, plague, dearth, drought and the like; but that in the effecting these things, they have a dative power above what they had in Creation, and that they are commissioned and sent by God upon purpose to fulfil and effect these things, and so are as the organs and instruments to perform the will of God in his juftice, and are always for such ends as tend to the Glory of the Creator: But for Devils to be sent to play such ludicrous, filthy and wicked tricks with Witches, as is commonly affirmed, fuits not at all with the Wisdom and Justice or Glory of God, neither have we any such examples in holy Writ, no surther, but that Devils only are Gods Executioners or Hangmen. 2. It doth no where appear that the Devils can alter, or change the shape or qualities of things at his own will and pleasure, but the contrary is manifest in the Priests of Baal in the time of Elijab upon the Mount Carmel, where their Idols or Gods were to shew their power by firing the Sacrifice, a thing which if Satan could have done for them with all his power, it had been most advantagious for his Kingdom; but it is evident that he neither did nor could procure as much fire as would burn the Sacrifice, though earnestly called upon by his best Servants the Idolatrous Priests. But thou wilt say, his power was then restrained and withholden at that time from effecting any such thing. Well, grant it were so, what was the end that God used that restriction upon him at that time for ? was it not because God would not contribute to magnifie the Devils Kingdom? nor to suffer him any longer to deceive his people? But to discover the weakness of his power, who is not able of his own created power, to bring forth fire where there is none, not able to break a paper window, unless he have leave and power given him from God. And therefore much less can, for the magnifying of his own power, and to dishonour the Creator, appear as a Cat, Dog, Squirrel or the like to Witches, suck upon their bodies, have carnal copulation with them, or transport them in the air, for this were to advance his credit too much, and utterly derogatory to the Glory of God. 3. Concerning Satans being an instrument and means to bring and cause diseases, it may be considered these two ways. 1. In an ordinary way he seduceth and draweth men to gluttony and drunkennels, by which way of ingurgitation and excels they draw and contract to themselves diverse Discases, as Coughs, Catarrhs, Dropsies, Scorbutick Distempers and the like. Others he draweth to infatiable lust and concupiscence, that thereby they fall into the Luci Venerea, and the whole troop of those dire and horrid Symptomes that accompany it, whereby Men and Women undergo great milery, pains, sickness, and sometimes death. Sometimes he pusheth Men on to far in malice, wrath, choler and passion, and many other such like ways, that they wound, lame and sometimes kill one another; and in this sense he may be said to cause diseases diverse ways. 2. But there is another way more extraordinary wherein as an instrument he may be said to cause diseases and sometimes death, as in that case of Davids numbring of the people, where there died of the Pestilence seventy thousand, and though this Pestilence wassent by Jehovah, yet was a destroying Angel the instrument and minister in the execution of it, for the Text saith: And 2 Sam. 24 16. when the Angel of the Lord stretched forth his hand upon ferusalem to destroy it, the Lord repented him of the evil, and faid to the Angel that destroyed the people, It is enough: now stay thy hand. And Herod for assuming to himself that honour that was only proper to God, was immediately smitten by the Angel of the Lord, and was Alts 12.2 eaten up of worms, and gave up the Ghoft. And the Pfalmift faith: He cast upon them the sierceness of his anger, wrath, indignation and trouble by fending evil Angels among them, the Hebrew giveth it, the emission or sending out of evil Angels. From whence it is manifelt that evil Angels are the organs and instruments of Gods wrath, and as Ministers cause Plague, Pestilence and other diseases. 3. Thirdly, there is another great question whether or not the Devil by his vassals, to wit, Sorcerers and Witches doth not cause diseases and death, as is believed by those vomiting up of strange things exceeding the bigness of the Gullet to get either up or down, of which we shall speak largely where we handle the opinion of Van Helmont concerning the actions of Witches: Here only we shall say thus much, that the Devil is author and causer of that hatred, malice, revenge and envy, that is often abounding in those that are accounted Witches, which defire of revenge doth stimulate them to seek for all means by which they may accomplish their intended wickedneß, wickedness, and so they learn all the wicked and secret wayes of hurting, poyloning & killing, but yet we affirm, that what evil soever they perform, it is by causes and means that work naturally, and so the evil is only in the use and application, and not in the efficients or means.

And whereas he holdeth that Devils as they can cause Diseases. fo they can cure them and take them away, we must crave to be excused if we cannot subscribe to his opinion, and that for these reasons. 1. Because of their causing of Diseases we have sufficient evidence in the Scriptures, but of their curing of any, we have not any mention at all; and though some will think this but weak because it is negative, yet it is not probable, but as it expresseth the one fully, so it would have given some hint of the other, if there had been any such matter. 2. But the Scriptures do inform us. that the gift of healing or curing Diseases, is not in the power of Devils by their Creation, much less since as a gift bestowed upon them, but floweth folely from God by the Ministry of good Angels, of whom Raphael (that is, the Medicine or health of God) is the chief. And that it is reckoned amongst the gifts of the Holy 1 Cor. 12. 8.9. Choft is most plain: For to one is given by the fairit the word of wisdom, to another the word of knowledge by the same spirit. To another faith by the same spirit: to another the gifts of healing by the same firit , but thefe gifts of healing are not given to Devils, but to the chosen ones of God. And the Pialmist where he is speaking how God afflicted and brought low the people of Ifrael by reason of their sins. Pal. 107. 18, faith: Their foul abhorred all manner of meat, and they drew near unto the gates of death, but he fent his word and healed them. And God declareth, that if his people Israel would keep his Statutes, he would bring none of those Diseases upon them that he had threatned, for (he faith) I am the Lord that bealeth thee, and this he doth by the ministry of good Angels, or by natural means, and not by Devils. 3. That Devils are no causers or instruments in curing Diseases is manifest, because that were to make him act contrary to his original destination after his fall, wherein in his own propriety, he is a murderer from the beginning, and that both of fouls and bodies, and never did, nor doth any good to mankind, either spiritual or natural, either real or apparent; for that were to all contrary to his will, nature and disposition, and contrary to the Ordinance and appointment of God who hath Created the destroyer to destroy. Therefore Satan after his fall was not ordained of God to be an healer, preserver, or sanator of diseases, but to be a destroyer, a wounder and murderer; for his nature is be come so wicked and malignant, that his whole endeavour is the destruction of mankind, both in souls and bodies, and so no healer, no not of the least infirmity. 4. But he is that grand Impostor, that by lying, cheating and delusion, laboureth to make his Vassals and others believe that he can cure and heal Diseases, when he can do no such thing, and therefore hath and still doth amongst

lieve, that if the fick persons be brought before their Idols, and there worship and pray, that they shall be Cured, when there is not any jot performed in the way of fanation, but what is by natural means, fancy, and imagination, or what is pretended to be done fo, by cheating, counterfeiting and imposture. And the very same thing is practifed by the Papists unto this day, in the pretence of their false and lying Miracles; fathered upon their Saints and Images, which are nothing else but lying cheats and Impostures, as we shall fully make manifest hereafter. 5. The Devil internally deludeth the minds of men, in making them believe, that Pictures, Charms, Amulets, and fuch other inefficacious and ridiculous means, have power to Cure these and these Diseases, when indeed they are meerly inoperative, and effect nothing at all; but yet the Witchmongers will needs have them to be media operativa, when they are utterly inefficacious, and are only means of feduction and delusion, to alter, change, or fortifie the imagination, by which alone the Cures (if any such be effected) are brought to pass, and not by any power of the Devil at all 3 and he operateth nothing at all in them, except a mental and internal delution, in making the Witchmongers and others believe, that those things are wrought by a Diabolical Power, which are only performed by the force of imagination, and a natural agency and virtue. 6. Again, where there are many occult and wonderful effects wrought by natural causes and agents, as by appendions of vegetables, animals, or their parts, and minerals, by magnetism, as the Hoplochrism, Sympathetic Powder, by Transplantation and many other very abstruce and secret waves bolum retulisse que non capimus. 3. A third kind of power that he ascribeth unto Devils, is their changing and transmuting of bodies; which is either in regard of substantial transformations, or of those that are but in the external figure or shape, or in the qualities, accidents and adjuncts only. Of real transubstantiations, after a long dispute, he granteth, that they cannot be brought to pass but by a Divine and Omnipotent Power. which we have lufficiently proved before, and therefore (hall forbear to fay any further of it here. CHAP. XI. 234 that mention the figns and wonders that Antichrist and faile Prophets, that are Satans Instruments, can or do work, and they are Deut. 13. 1, 2, thefe. If there arife among you a Prophet, or a dreamer of dreams. and givet bthee a fign, or a wonder: And the fign or the wonder come to pasi, whereof he spake muto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods (which thou hast not known) and let us serve them : Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that Prophet, or that dreamer of dreams : for the Lord your God provetb you, to know whether you love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your foul. And that Prophet, or dreamer of dreams, shall be put to death, because he bath spoken to turn you away from the Lord your God .-Deut. 18. 20, Another place is this: But the Prophet which fall presume to freak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to fpeak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that Prophet shall die. And if thou fay in thine heart, How fall we know the word which the Lord bath not spoken? When a Prophet Beaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord bath not Spoken, but the Prophet bath Spoken it presumptuously : thou shalt not be afraid of him. From whence

1. That we may know he is a falle Prophet, that speaketh a thing in the name of the Lord, if the thing do not come to page: But yet this must be understood with limitation, where God fendeth a Message by a true Prophet, where the thing is spoken positively, but the condition is concealed, and not expressed, as in the Message of Jonah to Nineweb : yet forty days, and Nineweb shall be overthrown: which was intended if they repented not, but implicitely was understood (as the event showed) if they did repent, the

orig. Sacr. La. Lord would spare them: of which Learned D' stillingfleet hath this Propolition: "Comminations of judgments to come do not in "themselves speak the absolute futurity of the event, but do only "declare what the persons to whom they are made are to expect, "and what shall certainly come to pass, unless God by his mercy in-"terpose between the threatning and the event. So that Commi-"nations do speak only the debitum pane, and the necessary obli-"gation to punishment; but therein God doth not bind up himself " as he doth in absolute promises; the reason is, because Commina-"tions confer no right to any, which absolute promises do, and "therefore God is not bound to necessary performance of what he " threatens.

2. That there are those that do foretel, or shew signs and wonders, that do come to pais, and yet those that foretel them are false Prophets, because sometimes God sendeth false Prophets with power to work figns and wonders, thereby to try his people, whether or no they will cleave unto him with all their hearts and fouls, or turn to other strange gods, or Idols; and this is ordered by the Providence of God for the trial of the faithful, as was in the Cafe of Job. But though these may be great signs and wonders to amaze and amuse men, and likewise come to pass, yet are they no true miracles, but are distinguished in this, that true miracles are alwayes for the citablishing and confirmation of the true Doctrine and Worship of Christ, but the other are lying wonders, wrought only to try the godly, or for the deluding and punishing of those that received not the knowledge of the truth. And though there are, and may be signs and wonders that are wrought by Antichrist and false Prophets, by and in the power of Satan, yet these are all ordered by the Wildom and Providence of the Almighty, and Satari is no more but an organ and instrument in the performance of

There are two other remarkable places of Scripture concerning the Devils power in working figns and wonders, the first of which is this: For there shall arise false Christs and false Prophets, and Manh 24, 241 hall hew great figns and wonders, insomuch that (if it were possible) they hall deceive the very elect. The other is this: Even him a Theft 2.91 whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and 10,11,14. figns, and lying wonders: And with all deceiveableness of unrighte. ousness, in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be faved. And for this cause God Shall fend them firong delufion, that they fould believe a lie. That they all might be damned, who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. From whence we may take these remarkable observations. 1. Though there arise false Christs, and false Prophets, and e- Observ. 1.

ven the Antichrist himself, working after the power of Satan, with figns and lying wonders 3 yet though Satan be the organ and inftrument in performing thefelying wonders, God is the Author and efficient cause that doth inflict them, because they are mala pene, and come not by a bare permissive power, but are inslicted by him as punishments upon the wicked, even those that received not the love of the truth, and therefore thefe lying wonders cannot possibly deceive the elect, but prove all deceiveableness of unrighteousness in them that periths and the reason why they are thus punished with the deceits and delusions of Satan, is because they received not the love of the truth, and therefore God doth fend such strong delusion, that they might believe a lie, and this he doth rightly and justly, that as Beza notes, Ita tamenut foli increduli fint illim fraude perituri. Upon which place learned Rollock tells us this: "We are (he faith) to observe "that Antichrift is nothing elfe, but Gods Executioner by whom "he punisheth those, by his just judgment, who have not received "the love of the truth, but have contemned the Gospel: which is "fo far forth true, that if there had not been, and now were a con-" tempt of the truth, then altogether Amichrift had not been, that is, "the Executioner had not been, whom God fendeth to execute "his just judgment upon those that despise the truth of his Oospel. "So that it is manifest that God doth make a just, and good use of "the very malice, and lying nature of Devils, in punishing those "that did not receive the love of the truth, but deceiving them by "frong delusions that they might believe a lie; and this he doth " as fent and commanded of God, and so cannot go one jot further "than his Commission, or as far as he is limited by God.

2. We may observe that how great soever these signs and wonders be, yet they are but lying ones, both in regard of the end for which they are done, and in respect of their substance. And therefore how great soever the signs and wonders be that evil Angels do perform, yet they are totally different from true miracles. those being alwayes wrought for the confirming of the true Doctrine and Worship of God, but these have their end only to establish false doctrine, lies and erroneous opinions, or Idolatrous Worthips. So they differ in their substance, for those miracles that God sheweth for the confirmation of his truth, are alwayes true and real, being against and above the whole power and course of nature, but those wonders wrought by Satan are but delusions. cheats, juglings and impostures, which though they may seem strange to those that are ignorant of their causes, yet do but all arife from natural causes, or from artificial cunning, confederacy and the like. And therefore we may conclude that what miracles foever are wrought by a Divine Power, tend to the overthrow of Satans power in the world, but all false miracles are wrought to uphold the power of Satans Kingdom in the world, and following delutions, lies and falle doctrines.

3. Therefore what figns and wonders foever Satan doth work, they are no real and true miracles, for as Dr. Stilling fleet faith: Orig. Sar. they are no real and true minates, as the sar. I fpeak not (he la.c. 84.253. "God alone can really alter the course of nature. I speak not (he "faith) of fuch things which are apt to raile admiration in us, be-"cause of our unacquaintedness with the causes of them, or man-"ner of their production, which are thence called Wonders; much "less of meer juggles and impostures, whereby the eyes of Men are "deceived; but I speak of such things as are in themselves either "contrary to, or above the course of nature, i. e. that order which "is established in the universe. And this cannot be altered by any diabolical power, but only by that which is Divine and Omnipotent, which never doth it but for confiderable ends and important causes, as may be manifest from these unshaken grounds. 1. That Devils can work no true miracles is manifest from the definition of a miracle which is this: Verum miraculum eft opus, quod fit prater, & contra naturam & secundas causas, cujus nulla Physica ratio potest reddi. But Satan cannot alter or change the order and course of nature. Therefore Satan cannot work or effect a true miracle. The proposition may be illustrated by an induction made of many great miracles, of which there is mention made in the Old and New Testament, all which are of that fort, that are repugnant to the order and course of nature, and of which no natural or physical reason can be rendered and given. Such were the taking of Enoch and Elias into Heaven, the conserving of Noah and his Family in the Ark, the confusion of tongues at the building of Babel, the fecundity of Sarah being old and barren, the passage of the children of Ifrael over the red Sea and over Jordan, the standing still of the Sun in the battel of Joshnab, its going back in the dial of Ahaz, its ecliple at our Saviours fuffering, the preservation of Da. niel in the Den of the Lions, and of the three companions of Daniel in the fiery furnace, the preserving Jonas in the belly of the Whale, the raising up of the dead, and the curing of the Man born blind, and all the rest of those most true and wonderful miracles wrought by our bleffed Saviour and his Apostles. 2. The assumption of the Syllogism is thus proved. It is the part of the same power to change the order of nature, and to create things that were not existent, and so the mutation of the order of nature is a certain kind of new creation. But Satan hath not power, by which he can create things that as yet had no existence, as all persons of reason must needs confess. From whence it must follow that Satan hath not power to change the order of nature, and consequently that he cannot work true and real miracles. 3. The working of true miracles is only a proper attribute of God, and incommunicable to any creaturely power, for the Text faith: Bleffed be the Lord Pal. 72. 18. God, the God of Ifrael, who only doth wondrow things. And again. Id. 77.14. thon art the God that dost wonders. And these two things the changing of the order of nature, and creation S. Paul attributeth to God as only proper to him: God who quickeneth the dead, and Rom. 4, 170 calleth those things that be not, as though they were. Upon which Beza gives this note. Eo qui vita restituit. Apud quem jam sint, que aliequi reipsa non sunt, ut qui vel une verbe quidvit possit ex nihilo efficere.

But if it be objected that though Satan and his Angels of themfelves, and by their own proper power, do not work true miracles, vid. Rolloc. it vet may not God work real miracles by them, as he did by the Thiff 2. Prophets, Apostles and his Ministers? It is answered: That the wonders which are wrought by Satan, do tend to that end, that they might confirm lies against God and his glory. But God doth not accommodate his power, to confirm lies, contrary to his glory, and against himself. Therefore Satan by the power of God, as his Minister, doth not work true miracles, for God doth use the faln Angels as executioners of his wrath and judgments, for the afflicting and punishing of men, but when God worketh any thing for the good of mankind, either in Soul or Body, he doth not use Devils as his Ministers, but the good and bleffed Angels, who are ministring spirits sent forth for the good of those that shall be heirs of Salvation.

And if it be queried, what things and of what fort and kind, are those wonders that are wrought by Satan and Antichrist? I answer, that either they are indeed nothing but prestigious juglings and illufions: or if they be any thing, they are not brought to pass contrary to the order of nature and second causes, although they may feem fo to us, who do not know the causes that are in nature, so well as that old serpent: neither do we apprehend the manner by which he workethand acteth his tricks. From which ignorance it proceedoth, that those wonders, that in themselves are no true miracles, nor done contrary to the order of nature, are by us taken to be true

But we will draw towards a conclusion of this point, with that definition and corollaries that learned Zanchy gives us in these particulars. Miraculum (ait) igitur eft externum & vifibile, verum & simpliciter mirabile factum, ad optimos fines atq, imprimis ad falutem bominum & ad Deigloriam promovendam editum. From whence these points are to be observed.

1. That a Miracle is external and made visible. For so (he faith) are all those things that we read of in Scripture that are taken to be true miracles : And therefore that the pretended invilible miracle of Transubstantiation (as they call it) in the ordinance of the Lords Supper, is a meer figment, because no such thing was ever made vifible, or truely witnessed. But let us pres this his argument a little further. If it be (as indeed it must be) a certain property of a true miracle that it be external and visible, that there may be witnesses of it, otherwise that which none ever saw or knew may be the property of a miracle: Then those great wonders that Witchmongers do affirm that the Devil worketh with and for Witches, as having carnal copulation with them, sucking upon their bodies, making a corporeal and oral league with them, carrying them in the air, changing them into Cats or Dogs, must of necessity be a meer figment and an impossibility : Because never yet feen, witneffed, or proved by any that were of found judgment, right understanding or of clear reason, but are meerly the works of darkness, having existence no where, but in the minds and brains of the Witchmongers, who are ruled by the Prince of darkness.

2. A miracle ought to be really and truly done, that is, that indeed it be such a thing as it appeareth, as the water that Christ changed into Wine, was really fuch, that is, it was truely Wine to the light and talte of all those that drank of it. Therefore those things that are brought to pass by the prestigious juglings of Devils and Magicians, are indeed no true miracles. And to apply this to our present purpose, it is manifest that those things that Witchmongers do believe that the Witches do or suffer, as to fly in the air, to be present at dancings and banqueting, and yet toremain empty and hungry, and the like, are but meer delusory dreams and cheating fancies in their brains, and if any thing be done ad extra, it is but meerly as Juglers do by drawing the eyes from obferving the manner of their conveyances, by substituting one thing in the stead of another, and the like. So that at the best Satan in respect of what he performeth in these aforesaid actions, is but as a chief Hocus Pocus fellow, or Jugler, and one that afteth to a worse end, than our common Juglers do, who act but to move sport and delight, and thereby to get something to be a livelihood. but Satan works his tricks to blind and delude the Soul, and to lead it to error and destruction.

CHAP. XI.

3. A true miracle ought to be simply miraculous and wonderful, that is with and unto all. And fuch are those miracles, whose causes are hid from all, and therefore are those things that are done contrary to the order of nature, by the only virtue and power of the Almighty God. Therefore those things that are done by natural causes, though occult to many, as are oftentimes done by Devils, are no true miracles. From whence therefore we may conclude, that whatfoever is performed in Physical actions, by natural causes, (and it is the general Tenent of all, that Devils in these cases can work nothing but by natural causes,) are no miracles, and that as they are agents, are not evil, but only become so in the use and

4. Every true miracle is wrought above all for most good ends, and especially for the Salvation of Men, and the true Glory of God. By this particular therefore all those signs and wonders that are wrought by Devils, are excluded from the name of true miracles. because they are all wrought for evil ends, and contrary to the Glory of God, and for the deceiving and perdition of Men. And therefore all prodigies wrought by Devils, are called lies.

4. The fourth and last particular that he setteth down, that the Devils have power in, and operate here below, is, that they can infinuate themselves into and penetrate our bodies, and so move Men diverse ways, driving them into the solitary places and Monuments, and by throwing them into the fire or water, by ftrange tearing and tormenting of them, and by manyother ways, of which we shall only note thele few things.

1. It is manifest that in the times of our Saviours being here upon earth, and his Disciples, that there were many Demoniacks or Men possessed with Devils, or Men that were devillished, or over whom the Devil exercised an effective and ruling power, and the reason was plain and manifest, for our blessed Saviour being to establish the Doctrine of the Gospel, by great and true miracles, it was necessary that there might be fitting subjects for the effecting of such stupendious miracles in and by, and therefore the Father in his providence had prepared and provided Lunaticks, Demoniacks, those that were born blind, and other strange Diseases that the power of Christ and his Apostles might be manifest in their miraculous cures. But whether or no that Devils have at all times the same power over mens bodies is much to be doubted, there being not the same causes or ends for permitting the same now that was at that feafon, as we perhaps shall thew hereafter.

2. The manner of the Devils possessing of the minds and bodies of Men, he laboureth to prove, to be affential and personal, and not virtual and effective, which he thinketh he sufficiently proveth by the words to enter, and to dwell, of which we shall only say Vid. Dialog. dife. of Spir. Dialog. 2. p. 34. 5.

1. That upon the supposition that Devilsare corporeal and have thin, pure and etherial bodies, it may be granted that they may really and substantially enter into bodies, for he faith: Demones autem habent corpora aerea, & aere etiam subtiliora & tenniora. Deinde, ut Tertullianus ait, Demones sua bec corpora contrabunt, & dilatant, ut volunt, ficut etiam lumbrici, & alia quadam infetia. Ita difficile illio non est penetrare in nostra corpora. 2. But secondly, there is none of those places that he citeth.

nor any other that fignifieth a local, or personal possession, or any fuch local inherency in the bodies of Men, but only a spiritual rule. be (that is Satan) worketh in the children of disobedience, or an effective dominion over them, by which he doth actually afflict, vex and torment Men fundry and diverse ways. Neither is the word Demonizomenos translated or understood by learned Men of an essential, or personal possession of Devils to be inherently in men, but only of an effective dominion in afflicting and tormenting of

3. And this is most manifest, that as the Text saith, that Christ Ephel 3. 17. may dwell in your hearts by Faith, where it were absurd to understand by Christs dwelling in the hearts of the faithful, a perfonal, effential or substantial dwelling, but only an effective one, because he worketh effectually in them by his spirit : Even so were it abfurd to take the other places of entring into, and dwelling there, in fo groß, and literal a fense, as personally to inhabite, but only effective by his power and dominion. For though the Text John 13.2.27. faith ; that after the fop, Satan entred into Judas, yet in the fame Chapter the Evangelist expoundeth what manner of entrance it was; not a personal one, but an effective one by putting, or darting it, sesaustree, into Judas heart to betray his Master. And whereas it is faid that Satan had filled the heart of Ananias to lie to the Holy Ghoft, no man can rationally understand it of a personal and effential repletion, but only of an effective one, having by his Acts 5. 3. power seduced the heart of Ananias, and filled it with deceit by his effectual operation, and not otherwise. And whereas it is said by S. Luke and S. Mark, of the legion of Devils that our Saviour did cast out, that they entred into the swine, desiloses de rois xelous Luke 8. 33. S. Matthew makes it clear, faying, they went into the berd of fwine, ois this dyinter tas xister, in gregem, or as Tremellim renders it ad gregem porcorum, by which it is manifest that they did go amonght, or into the herd of Swine, and put them into such a fright or fury, by an effective power working upon them, that they ran down a steep place into the Sea, and perished in the waters; but not that they did personally and essentially enter into the bodies of the Swine, for that were absurd and needless, for the Swineherd can with his Horn and Whip drive them without creeping into their bellies, and much more might the Devils drive them into the Sea (according to the Proverb, They must needs run whom the Devil drives) without a personal and local being in their bellies as though a Piper cannot effectively play several tunes upon his Pipes, except he creep into them.

CHAP. XII.

CHAP. XII.

If the Devil, or Witches have power to perform strange things, whether they do not bring them to pass by meer natural means, or otherwise. And of Helmonts opinion concerning the effects cansed by Devils or Witches.

Having handled the knowledge and power of the fain Angels as far forth as there is any thing manifelted in the Scriptures, or that may be deducted from thence by found reason, and finding their knowledge and power to be much less in these inferior bodies and elements than is commonly supposed; we are now to proceed to examine what they do simply of their own power, and what they perform by natural means. And first it cannot be denyed but that they can of themselves dart in evil thoughts, suggestions and temptations into the minds of Men immediately of their own power, as also to allure Men to sin by the irritation of external objects presented to the senses, as also by means of the phantalie, and especially by the melancholy humour which is Balneum Diaboli. But secondly the great question is, what they work in elemental and corporeal things, and whether it be not only by natural means, as the applying of fit actives to agreeable passives, whereby the acts ascribed unto them are performed, or not? Which we affirm from these grounds.

1. Because it is the common and unanimous opinion of Philofophers, Theologues and Physicians, that what the Devils operate vid. Gatter. de in sublunary bodies, or in causing diseases in humane bodies, Fascino dub. 9. is by the applying fit actives to convenient passives, by which 1.125. the effects are brought to pass. And this is an argument sufficiently preffive, and convincing, if there be any force in arguments brought from humane authority, especially considering that no other causes besides what are natural, could ever yet be assigned, much less proved.

2. And this is more plain if we consider what a that the quoted last in the Margent saith to the same purpose, Danion propria virtute nequit transmutare materiam corpoream, nist adhibeat illi alliva proportionata-effelibm ques intendit. As for example, the Devil may cause burning, by reason that there is a combustible subject, as also a fiery and burning agent in nature, and this agent being fire, being applyed to combustible matter would produce that effect which we call cremation, or burning: But if there were no combustible matter in nature, or that there were no igneous a. gent, then it is plain, the Devils could produce no burning at all ; and so where there is no agent and patient in nature, to produce the effect intended, (as in pretended fascination there is neither) there such an effect could not possibly be produced: so that from hence it must necessarily follow, that Devils can operate nothing in corporeal matter, but by applying fit agents to convenient pati-De lajell. ms. ents, and therefore Helmont faid well: Quafi Satanas supra naturam twial. p. 597. effet, operareturg, nature impossibilia. Hift. 1.

3. And that many strange things that are vomited up by such as are supposed to be bewitched do proceed from natural causes, and that the Devil worketh no more in them but by instigation, to move wicked persons (such as are commonly those that are accounted Witches) to give and administer strange things, Philters, or fecret poisons, to such as they would kill, torment, makemad, or draw to unlawful love, or rather luft, as may be made manifest from the testimonies of persons of unquestionable veracity and judgment, some few of which we shall here relate. Philip Salmuth chief Physician to the Prince of Anhalt recordeth this which we shall give in English: "The Daughter of a certain Inkeeper was "desperately in love with a principal Nobleman. To whom go-"ing away the offers a most beautiful apple. This he suspecteth "and throweth into a Basket. After three days he remembers it, "and looks at it; and then it altogether appeared blackned. He "expecteth for the space of other three days, and then findeth abund-"ance of little Frogs there. Therefore he returneth into that Inn. "where the Maid lived, and doth counterfeit fickness and huge tor-"ments. The Maid willeth him to use warm milk. That he pour-"eth upon the Frogs, who take it greedily, and by little and lit-"tle do increase. But he every day feigneth greater pains, where-"upon the Maid pitying him doth will him to take the urine of "a Mare newly made and warm. This he also poureth upon the "Frogs, whereupon they die. After some time the servant of ano-"ther Nobleman is afflicted with miserable torments, and there "is suspicion of a Philter given by a person of quality. They exhi-"bite Mares urine, and the vomiteth up two Lizards, and two "Frogs. By which it is manifest that such strange vomitings up of Frogs, Lizards, Askers and the like, though attributed to Witchcraft, and the operation of Satan, do but proceed from natural causes. And doubtless the sperme, or ova ranarum, were but conveyed into the Apple, that so by the heat of the Stomach, and the Chylus, (that is like warm milk) they might grow and increase And this kind of witching, or fecret poyloning, we grant to be too frequent and common, because those persons commonly accounted Witches are extreamly malicious and envious, and do fecretly and by tradition learn strange poylons, philters and receipts whereby they do much hurt and mischief. Which most strange wayes of . poyloning poyfoning, tormenting, and breeding of unwonted things in the stomach and bellies of people, have not been unknown unto many learned men and Philosophers, but they respecting the good of mankind, and the multitude of evil minded persons, have altogether forborn openly to mention such dangerous receipts in their writings, or at the best so to publish them, that not one of a thoufand could understand what they intended, and so these secrets of mischief are for the most part kept in obscurity, amongst old women, superstitious, ignorant, and melancholy persons, and by them delivered over from hand to hand, and commonly one learns it of another according to the Proverb, Popery and Witchcraft go by Tradition. And to this very purpole I cannot but infert that remarkable paffage of Paracelfus in thefe words. Poffem equidem (ait) Di Peffil, Walt peculiarem de ipsis tractatum edere, ut artes ac machina illarum 2.9.388. manifestarentur. Sed propter malitiosos ista talia penna seu calamo minime evulganda sunt, multa enim flagitiosa simul induci possent : que satius est reticeri. And that strange productions may be brought to pass, and stupendious effects brought into action, from secret and hidden natural causes, that are better known to those malicious persons that are accounted Witches, than others, may be made manifest by another observation set down by the forementioned salmuth, and is this: "Galen and others have recorded, that the fa. Observ. Medica "liva, or spittle of a mad dog, if it touch an human body, and be #3. p. 99. "not forthwith washed off, may cause madness. But in the Hydro-"phobia, there is so great force of the poyson, that the persons that "are bitten do also pis or void by urine, little whelps, or pieces " of fielh like them, as Avicenna lib. 3. Fen. 6. tr. 4. c. 7. hath de-"livered, though doubted of by others. But (he faith) I cer-"tainly know notwithstanding that of such faliva or spittle only "left in the Garment, after biting, have Worms been breed, plainly "resembling little Whelps with their heads. For a mad Dog did "meet a Servant Maid of an honest Matrons going to the Market, "and flies furiously and violently at her feet. She that she might " avoid the danger, inclineth her felf, and a little bendeth her knees, "whereupon the Dog doth with his teeth catch hold of her Gar-"ment, and especially the seam or low selvidge, and did bark a lit-"tle while, and forthwith ran away. Which being done the Maid "remained terrified, and at the first doubted whether the Dog was "mad or not, but having recollected her felf, she suspecteth his ra-"biousness, because he had been very familiar, even almost dome-"flick with her. Therefore she returneth home, and hangeth the "torn Garment upon a piece of wood in the Houle. But afterwards "upon the fourth day the goeth to it; with an intent to mend it. "But oh a wonderful thing, the findeth Worms altogether like lit-"tle Whelps in the head, to he bred in those places of the hem in which the Dog had fastned his teeth, and those as a new Miracacle (as they did call it) were shewed unto certain of the Neigh-66 bours being called together.

4. Another instance to prove the strange effects that may be produced by natural Causes, and yet are so occult, stupendious, and unufual, that they are commonly fathered upon Devils, when they have no more at all to do in or about them, but only the mental perswading of the persons to use them to wicked and destructive ends, as those wonderful compositions that produce the Plague and fuch like grievous Diseases and Symptoms; For this kind of veneficium (call it Witchcraft if you please) is and hath been often practifed by most horrible, malevolent, and wicked persons, who by an art more than Diabolical (especially in respect of the end and use) have so framed, and prepared, and commixed things naturally, that in the form of unguents have produced the Plague and divers other most pernicious and venefical Diseases, which may be confirmed by undeniable examples, of which we shall give some gareat. Rediv. few. Josephus Quercetanus, that famous Chymist and Physician to Henry the Fourth of France, tells us thus much : "The Contagion "of the Plague is not only contracted by the mediation of the air "and water, things in a manner universal, or from other things more "particular, as vestments, linnen, and other moveable things in-"quinated by the attraction of pestiferous Atomes: But also by "the detestable Crafts, and Diabolical Arts of certain most wicked "persons, which we call poysoners, or witches, by means of which "they contemperate and mix certain poylons into the form of an "unquent, and use to rub some of it upon the handle of doors, so "that those that do but lightly touch them, are forthwith infected "with the Plague, this subtile poison forthwith creeping by the "pores of the skin into the extremities of the veins, is quickly com-"municated to the heart, to which human industry can hardly ad-"minister any remedy. Unto which the Lord Verulam gives this cau-Syl. Syl. Cent. tious atteltation: Pestem quoq; excitavit januarum, rimarum, aliorumg, inunctio, non tam ex contactu, quam quod homini in more positum, si quid humidi adharescat digitis, naso illud admovere. Moneri sepatientur, apud quos ea inolevit consuetudo, ut pracaveant. Tohannes Wierus a learned Phylician, and a person of credit and veracity, reciteth this History from Antonius Sabellicus, Ennead. 4. lib. 4. This strange venefice or witchcraft, was practis'd at Casal in the City of salaffia, a Region of Italy, in the year of our Lord God 1536. "About forty persons men and women, amongst whom

"there was one Hangman, had combined and sworn together, That "feeing the Plague had ceased that before did rage, they would "compound an unguent, with which the handles of the doors being "besmeared, they should be insected that touched those handles. "They did also prepare a Powder which being secretly sprinkled in "the Garments, should produce the Plague. The Villany lay hid "for some certain time, and many were taken away of such as were " joined in blood or affinity: Also money was given (as was said) "to the Poyloners, instead of inheritance. But when they had mur-"thered the Brother and only Son of one Necus, and that scarcely "others

"others than the Masters of Families themselves, or their Sons, did "perish: And that also they had marked, that into what Houses "those Conspirators had infinuated themselves, that those for the "most part did perish into whose Houses they entred: but the Con-" spiracy being found out, they were all put to death with most ex-"quifice torments. They also confessed, that they had determined " to kill all the Citizens upon a Festival day, by anointing the Seats, "and to that purpose they had prepared twenty Pots full of that "pernicious and hellish Ointment. And Paracelfus tells us, that at De Pofill. lib. " pernicious and neithin Onthinent. And raracejus tens us, that at Traff.2. p. 388. " St. Vitum and Villacum, certain of the Poylon-makers in the Hiftor. 2. " time of a Plague, did take the Earth and Dust from the Graves "of those that had been buried, and did so prepare it with their "Magical Art, that they raised up a most cruel and raging Plague, 66 whereby many thousands of men were infected and flain. But that the manner of that preparation is by no means to be revealed. Those that defire more satisfaction in this particular may have recourse to that learned Treatife, de Peste, written by the learned and industrious Matthias Untzerus.

5. But there is no where a more strange accident written, than stow, annali what is recorded in our own Annals in the year 1579, the nine genth p. 681, year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, in these words: The "4, 5, and 6. days of July, were the Assis holden at Oxford, "where was arraigned and condemned one Rouland Jenkes for his "Seditious Tongue, at which time there arose such a damp, that "almost all were smothered, very few escaped that were not taken "at that instant: The Jurors died presently: Shortly after died "Sir Robert Bell, Lord Chief Baron, Sir Robert de Olie, Sir Williams "Babington, M' Weneman, M' De Olie, High Sheriff, M' Davers, " M. Farcurt, M. Kirle, M. Pheteplace, M. Greenwood, M. Foster, "Serjeant Baram, M' Stevens, &c. There died in Oxford 300. per-"fons, and fickned there but died in other places 200, and odd, "from the fixth of July to the twelfth of August, after which day "died not one of that sickness, for one of them infected not ano-"ther, nor any one Woman or Child died thereof. This is the puncrual relation according to our English Annals, which relate nothing of what should be the cause of the arising of such a dame, just at the Conjuncture of time when Jenkes was Condemned, there being none before, and so it could not be a Prison Intection, for that would have manifested it self by smell or by operating sooner. But to take away all scruple, and to assign the true Cause, it was thus: It fortuned that a Manuscript fell into my hands, collected by an antient Gentleman of Tork, who was a great observer and gatherer of strange things and facts, who lived about the time of this accident happening at Oxford, wherein it is related thus: "That "Rouland Jenkes being imprisoned for treasonable words spoken "against the Queen, and being a Popish Recusant, had notwith-" ftanding during the time of his restraint, liberty sometimes to walk 66 abroad with a Keeper, and that one day he came to an Apothecary, er and shewed him a receipt which he defired him to make up; but "the Apothecary upon the view of it told him, that it was a strong "and dangerous receipt, and required some time to prepare it, but "also asked him to what use he would apply it? he answered to kill "the Rats that fince his Imprisonment spoiled his Books; so being " satisfied he promised to make it ready. After a certain time he "cometh to know if it were ready, but the Apothecary faid the "ingredients were so hard to procure that he had not done it, and " fo gave him the receipt again, of which he had taken a Copy. "which mine Author had there precisely written down, but did "feem so horribly poysonous, that I cut it forth lest it might fall "into the hands of wicked persons. But after it seems he had got "it prepared, and against the day of his tryal had made a week or "wick of it (for so is the word, that is, so sitted, that like a Can-"dle it might be fired) which as foon as ever he was Condemned "he lighted, having provided himfelf a Tinder-box and Steel to "ftrike fire. And whosoever should know the ingredients of that "Wick or Candle, and the manner of the Composition, will easily be perswaded of the virulency and venenous effects of it, and this "in him in regard of the use and end was meerly Diabolical, though "the agency and effects were meer natural.

6. It is very strange to consider what learned and grave Authors have left recorded of the Ligation or binding of Husbands that they might not be viripotent, or be able to have to do with their Wives for a longer or a shorter time; nay some even have proceded so faras to write it, and seem also to believe it; that by venifice or Witchcraft, the virile members may be quite taken away; as is related by the morb outsifie. Codronchine, of a certain young man that had his members quite taken away by a Woman Witch, which not with standing she restored again, by beating and putting her in the fear of death. And of this incredible story, Sennertus a professed maintainer of the impossible De fastino lib. power of Witches, doth notwithstanding give this censure. "The 6. Part 9. 6. 5 . Devil doth often delude men by prestigious and jugling deceits, and perswadeth them that he hath brought such Diseases as indeed

l. 3. c. 5. Hi,lor. 5.

"are none at all, as this taking away the virile member, related by "Baptista Codronchius. For although some be of that opinion, that "the genital members may really be taken away and restored by the "Devil: notwithstanding (he faith) I had rather hold with those "that believe such things are meer juglings and delusions; seeing "it is not in the power of the Devil to reltore unto man a member syl. syl. cent. 9. "lost or taken away. The most learned Lord Bacon doth affirm, "that this kind of Ligation or binding, to make men impotent for "Coition, is frequent in Santonne and Gascoigne, and is used to be "done upon the Marriage day, and that it is often performed by "the Mothers to prevent that incantation by others, and that they "may loofe it when they please. And doth think it no light mat-"ter because punishable by their laws. And saith after, If it exceed on not nature it hath its force from the Imagination of the binder of

"the virile member, and adds: Putem ego illud ab incantatione alienum esse, quia non à certis personis tantum (quales incantatores) fed à quolibet fieri potest. But that which puts it forth of all doubt that it is nothing but melancholy, and the abuse of the fancy, is manifest from the observation of perspicacious Salmuth, which is this: "I have known two (he faith) who did imagine themselves impo- Obf. Medic. cent. "tent to the act of Venery, and thought themselves maleficiated Hist. 6. " or bewitched, when as before they had afforded themselves suf-"ficiently strenuous in that warfar also with their Wives. But "both being (he faith) handled and cured by me, as persons me-"lancholick and Hypochondriacal, have afterwards sufficiently

"laughed at themselves. But I did conjecture them to be melan-"cholick by this, because they did complain, that about that act "they were overwhelmed with an heap of Cogitations. From "whence it is manifest from what cause that effect did proceed.

"And therefore it is deservedly doubted of Wierus, whether or no "there be any true impotency at all, but what is from natural " Caufes. 7. That the most of those vomitings of strange things is only caused from natural Causes, as poysonous Potions, Philters and the like, is manifest by another example given us by that famous Chymist and learned Physician of Frisniga in Bavaria, Martinus Rulandus, which is this: " David Held Student in the Arts about Curat. Emp. "the twentieth year of his Age did receive from a wicked Wo- CHR. 11. 12.22. man Cakes, which he did ear, and departing from her forthwith Hift. 7.

"in the way he began to doat, and being brought home he began "to rage more, and fell into madness. And to help this madness "the Students came unto me and declare the infanity, the Philter "that he had taken, and his being infected or brought into that "madness by it, and desire some help against it. To oppose which "(he faith) I gave fix Ounces of my Aqua Beneditta, which I "commanded straightway to be given him in the name of Jesus. "And this being taken foon after by vomiting he cast up the Philter, "or invenomed Cakes that he had swallowed, which being cast "upon the Earth, they did with the admiration of the by-standers "begin to wax hot and to boil, as meat with the fire doth grow "hot and boil. So that this poilon being cast up as a thing unhoped "for, soon after the infanity is driven away, and within two days "his understanding was perfectly restored, and by the power of the "Almighty did totally recover. So that it is manifest that these kind of people that are commonly called Witches, are indeed (as both the Greek and Latin names do signisse) Poysoners, and in respect of their Hellish intentions are Diabolical, but the effects they procure flow from natural Gaules. If any require more ample satisfaction in this point, they may find divers Histories recorded in Schenkins his Obsetvations, lib. 7. de venenis, to verific this par-

8. There is no one Argument that doth more confirm, that what effects soever Devils, or those called Witches do bring to pass in humane bodies, are wrought by natural means, and proceed from natural causes: Because what diseases soever are cured by natural causes and agents, must of necessity be brought into humane bodies by natural means. But many diseases attributed to the Devil. or Witches as instruments, have been cured by natural means and applications, as we shall prove both by authorities and matters of fact. And therefore those diseases must of necessity grow and arise from natural causes. And for authority we find Helmont affirming Injural at mod. thus much: "And also partly the curing of these diseases is to be Intrand. p.603, "had by certain Simples, to which the omnipotent goodness hath "given a gift from the beginning of the Creation, of resisting, "preventing and correcting of Veneficia, Witchcrafts, or poylon-"ings, and of bringing forth things injected. For (he faith) cer-"tain Simples do drive away evil spirits (a milerable company of "Men, who give worthip to Gods, that are not able to relift the "natural efficacy of Simples) and reckons some that take away "the penetration of the formal light tied to the excrements. Some "do hinder the touch, entrance or application. And that there "are many fuch like, that do correct the poylons, and kill them.

p. 214. Hift. 8.

To confirm this affertion of Helmonts, we shall transcribe what Useful of Ex- the Honourable person Mr. Boyle hath set down to this purpose. "Since the beginning of this Essay ('he saith) I saw a lusty, and ve-"ry sprightful Boy, child to a samous Chymical Writer, (I judge "it to be Joachimus Poleman) who as his Father affured me and "others, being by some enemies of this Physicians, when he was yet "an infant, so bewitcht that he constantly lay in miserable torment, "and still refusing the breast, was reduced by pain and want of "food, to a desperate condition, the experienced relator of the "ftory remembring that Helmont attributes to the Electrum mine-"rale immaturum Paracels, the virtue of relieving those, whose "distemperscome from Witchcraft, did according to Helmonts pre-"scription hang a piece of this noble mineral about the infants "neck, fo that it might touch the pit of the Stomach; whereup-"on presently the child, that could not rest in I know not how "many dayes and nights before, fell for a while afleep, and wa-"king well cried for the Teat, which he greedily suckt, from "thenceforth haltily recovering, to the great wonder both of the "Parents, and several others that were assonishe at so great and "quick a change. And though I am not forward (he faith) to "impute all those diseases to Witchcraft, which even learned Men "father upon it; yet it's confiderable in our present case, that what-"foever were the cause of the disease, the distemper was very great, "and almost hopeless, and the cure suddenly performed by an out-

"ward application, and that of a Mineral, in which compacted fort "of bodies the finer parts are thought to be lockt up. Another example he giveth us in these words? "The same Henricm ab Visprapary "Heer among his freshly commended observations, hath another Hist. 9. " of a little Lady, whom he concludes to have been cast into the "ftrange and terrible distemper, which he there particularly re-"cords, by Witchcraft. Upon fo fevere an examination of the "Symptomes made by himself in his own house, that if, notwith-" flanding his folemn professions of veracity, he mif-relate them not, "I cannot wonder he should confidently impute so prodigious a "difease to some supernatural cause. But though the observation, "with its various circumstances, be very well worth your perusing a "yet that, for which I here take notice of it is, what he adds about "the end of it, concerning his having cured her, after he had in "despair of her recovery sent her back to her Parents, by an out-"ward medicine, namely, an Oyntment which he found extolled "against pains produced by Witchcraft, in a Dutch book of Car-"richter's (where alfo I remember I met with it fet down a little dif-

But to conclude this tedious particular, I shall only add one obfervation more from learned Salmuth, which is this: "The fcr. Offire. Midle. "vant Maid (he faith) of Cafars à Breitenbach was taken with a 44 p. 127.
"most intense pain of her left arm, which when it did not at all "most intense pain of her lest arm, which when it did not at all "remit or abate, but that the dolour was augmented more and "more, and that no tumour, nor any other preternatural thing did " outwardly appear, the beholders did fear some fort of venefice or "Witchcraft. Therefore they apply a well tryed medicine, which " in such a case is said to be much approved, to wit red Corals well "beaten with the leaves of Oak, and with Rofe-water brought " into the form of a Cataplaim, and leave it on for the space of 24 "hours. In which space of time the place is brought to suppuration, and within as many more hours, the same remedy being apply-"ed again, the ableefs is broken, and in it needles, hairs and burne "coals are found. All these together with the Amulet they put "into an hole made with an Augur or Gimlet in the root of an "Oak, towards the East, in the morning before the Sun rife, and "they stopped up the same hole with a wedge or pin, made of the "wood of the same Tree. The pain thereupon plainly ceaseth, "and the place is with other medicaments brought to Cicatriza-"tion. But some deriding such things, and thinking them to be "prestigious delusions, do pull them forth of the hole again. Here-"upon forthwith that miserable servant was again afficted with "cruel pains, more raging than the former. Therefore they repeat "the former medicaments, and more copious matter doth iffue "forth, which being taken together with the Amulet, and put in "the former place in the Oak, all the pains did forthwith vanish, "and the afterwards lived altogether found. And fo I conceive that by these reasons, authorities and instances of matters of fact, it is sufficiently proved, that what Devils or Witches work in humane bodies or in corporeal matter, is by applying fit actives to fultable passives, and so the effects are only produced by natural causes and means, which was the thing I undertook to make good.

The next thing that in this Chapter we have to confider and examine is the opinion of Johannes Baptista van Helmons, that great Phylician, Philosopher and Chymist, which we shall open in these

1. He reciteth a large Catalogue of things, that are in a most ftrange manner brought or injected into the bodies of Men and Women, as darts, thorn-pricks, or pins, chaff, hairs, dust of wood that hath been fawed, little stones, egg-shels and pieces of pots. hulls and husks or swads, insects, things of linen, needles and the instruments of artificers, which have been injected insensibly, and entred altogether in an invilible manner, but were detained and ejected with direful pains and tortures. And that sometimes they are greater than the holes or passages by which they are intromitted. 2. And to confirm this affertion he bringeth instances of matters of fact, as these following. " For (he faith) of late there was a part "of an Oxe-hide injected by the porce of the skin, it being in-"tire, which the Chirurgeon did draw forth with a pair of For-"ceps, it being of the magnitude of the ball of a Mans hand, the "Apostume first being ripened. And a Witch burned at Bra-"ges, did confess, that she had injected that hide into the good "man. So (he faith) we have in times past seen at Lira the chil"dren of Orphans to have caltup by womit an artificial Horse and "Cart, drawn forth by the hands of the by-standers 30 to wit a "four footed board accompanied with its ropes, and wheel. And "what way foever it were placed, it was callly greater than the "double throat. Further he faith,I have fcenat Antwerp in the year " 1622, a young Maid, who had vomited, perhaps two thouland " pins conglomerated together, and with them hairs and filth. Ano-"ther Maid (he faith) at Mechlin in the year 1631, who we being

"present, did vomit up shavings of wood or chips, cut off in "plaining with the Hatchet, with much flimy stuff, to the magni-"tude of two filts. It is (he faith) a frequent thing every where "admitted by learned Men. Upon which we will only give these Animadversions.

1. That things as strange as these, that Helmont scems to avouch of his own light and knowledge, are also attested by other persons of great learning and credit, as, besides what we have immediately before shewed from Salmuth, of the needles, hairs and burnt coals that came forth of the Maids arm, these examples may ratifie. We will pass by Sprenger, Bodin, Remigion and Del Rio as Pontificial Authors, and therefore partial and interested, only in the first place Prafi. 1.7.1.25. we shall give this from Alexander Benedition, who telleth this: "That he saw two Women his neighbours upon one day, being in-

"fected by potions of evil medicaments, who afterwards were "wonderfully tormented with strange vomitings: That the one "cast up with great strainings an head bodkin very great bended "like an hook, with a great lump of Womens hair, wrapped with "the pairing of nails, who died the day following. The other vo-"mited up a Womans Quoif, pieces of glass, with three dried "pieces of a Dogs tail that was hairy, to that the had voided "by vomiting as much, (if fet together,) as would have equa-"lized the quantity of the whole tail. But the most strange story "that possibly can be read is recorded by Thomas Bartholinus who "was Physician to Frederick the third King of Denmark, of Anna "Erici, who vomited up at several times a piece of sharp wood, Hist. Rev. Anatt 46 greatstore of black blood, an hem or fring of silk or linen cloath cin. Hist. 52. "of a blew colour, fowed with a green thred, in which were hid Hift. 4. "three pieces of lead, two pieces of glass, three Almonds, three "pieces of a Tobacco pipe, and white stones or flints: And after-"wards many other horrid, strange and incredible things that may " be read in the place quoted in the Margent. 2. It would feem a point of strange Scepticism or infidelity to Anim. 26 distrust and reject these relations as lies and fictions, seeing the Authors that recite them do for the most part attest them upon their own view or knowledge, or at least from unquestionable eye-witneffes, and that they were Men of great Reputation and Credit, that lived in several Countrys, and in different times, and therefore could not conspire in a lie. But notwithstanding all this, we find persons of great learning Anim. 3. and fober judgments, to use much hesitation about these things, and either to suspend their belief of them, as having never seen any fuch things themselves, and therefore may well conclude as many Wise Men do, that he that hath seen a thing may better believe it than he that hath not seen it, or else are utterly diffident and believe no such matters of fact at all. And indeed there is no greater folly than to be very inquisitive and laborious to find out the causes of such a Phenomenon, as never had any existence, and therefore Men ought to be cautious and be fully affured of the truth of the effect, before they adventure to explicate the cause. And I find both my Lord Bacon, and that honourable and learned person Mr. Boyle, when they have occasion to mention these things, do it with extream caution, and always with an If or some other note of fignal dubitation, and also the Lord Mountaigue in his Essays. and our Countreyman Mr. Orburne (-no-contemptible persons) in his writings feem utterly diffident of any fuch matter.

4. Again if we consider how easy a thing it is, for the most vi- Anim. 41 gilant, attentive and wisest person either to impose upon himself, being drawn by those overruling notions that he suckt in from his childhood, whereby the will and affections being never to little byaffed the judgment will be presently swayed that way: or how subject the most wary and perspicacious person is to be imposed upon by the cunning craftiness or confederacy of others, or drawn to believe a meer impossibility, by the perseverant asseverations of what others have feen and known, may certainly induce us. though not utterly to reject all relations of this nature, yet to stand like Janus in this field of doubtful perplexity.

5. If to this we add the confideration, how rare and seldome these thingshappen, and howlong (though it argue but negatively) many Physicians have practifed, and yet have never met with any fuch strange accidents: and withal that many of these vomitings of strange stuff, and the like have been meer counterfeit juglings and Impostures, as was manifest in the Boy of Bilson Sommers of Nottingham and diverse others: besides, I that have practised Phyfick above forty years could never find any fuch thing in truth and reality, but have known many that have counterfeited these strange vomitings, and the like, which we and others have plainly laid open and detected. So that though we shall not simply deny the verity of these relations, so we cannot but believe, that some of them have been cheats and delusions, and others meer mistakes of ignorance and vain credulity, and in the belief of any of them. that we ought to proceed with much cautiousness and careful fore-

3. The next thing that Helmont lies down (after he thinketh that he hath proved the matters of fact sufficiently) is the assigning of the true cause (as he thinketh) of the bringing to pass these wondrous effects; And these he maketh twofold, first the Devil. by reason of the league with the Witch, doth bring and convey the things to be injected to the place, or near the object, and makes them invisible by his spiritual power: Secondly that the Witch by the strength of her imagination and the motion of her free will, (which he holds to be the only peculiar prerogative of mankind, and to remain both with Men and Women after the fall, namely a power by their free wills and force of imagination, to create or frame seminal and efficacious Ideas to work as it were ad nutum) doth convey or inject these strange things into the bodies of those they would hurt or torment, and that in this case as the ultimate attempt of nature, there is and may be a penetration of dimensions, and these things he attempteth to prove after this manner, which we shall first amply lay down and relate, and afterwards we shall give some notes and observations upon them, as things of great weight and confideration.

" 1. He granteth that the evil spirit hath a power motive, yet "therewith cannot hurt the innocent as he pleaseth. And further "he tells us that these injected things do enter invisibly. And that "this one thing is meetly Diabolical. For the most miserable scof-"fer (he faith) feeing he hath nothing that is real left to his liberty, "yet he hath vain appearances: Because he is the Father of lies, he "feigneth those things and maketh them to appear falsly, or other-"wile than they are, from the beginning of the World. And in "these juglings the Man that is the Devils bondslave worketh no-"thing at all. But by what manner the Devil maketh things visi-"ble in themselves to be invisible, or how he involves them in his "invisible spirit, he confesseth that he is not a sedulous searcher "of the works of Satan, that belong unto him in propriety. And "therefore that the Devil doth transfer the things to be injected, "being made invisible, unto the object, the Idea of humane de-"fire directing. And because it is not permitted to the Devil, to "enter into Man, much less that he may hurt him, and least of all "with an invisible burden; therefore he useth the free motive "power of the Man bound unto him. The Man doth therefore "impress his free motive Blas into the body made invisible, but "the Devil doth carry it unto the Man, into whom it is to be in-" jected. And as a knife by the defire and consent of the person "wounding is fixed into the flesh of him that is wounded : So this "body made invisible by the Devil, is injected into the body of "the person to be inchanted, by the Idea of the motive power of " the Witch: Satan conspiring to this because of the purposed di-"rection of hurting the person.

"2. Truly I believe (he faith) that it doth fight with Piety, if a Real, 2. "power exceeding nature be attributed to the Devil. As though "Satan should be above nature, and should operate things impos-"fible to nature. I grant that the manner is exotick and strange, "but yet notwithstanding it ought to be contained within the li-"mits of nature. And if it be faid: the manner is unknown by "which nature should do it. The manner is also equally unknown "by what means Satau flould do it. 'Therefore they gain nothing "who refer the work of nature unto the Devil. But whether they "offend or not, let others look to it. For at least it is an inventi-"on of immense southfulness, to refer all things to the Devil that "we do not understand. Neither would I (saith he) have the De-" vil called upon to fatisfie our questions by a temerarious attributi-

"3. Therefore (he faith) I will shew, that the aid of Satan is Reaf. 2. "not at all needful, that some solid body may be drawn without "the comminution of it felf, by a passage far less than it self. For "the evil spirit, though he have a motive Blas; yet notwithstand-"ing it is against piety, that he can hurt the innocent at his plea-"fure. Which certainly should come to pass, if every where he " could inject these things, according to his nesarious will, for (he " faith) I have feen these things happen to innocent children, to "Virgins that were pions and devoted to God after a fingular man-"ner. And to prove this point he giveth these instances. Corne- Hist. 11 " lius Gemma de Cosmocriticio doth recite that he had seen a piece of three pounds or 48. ounces weight, of a brafs Cannon, which "a Maid the Daughter of a Cooper had voided by stool, with its "characters or letters, together with an Eele wrapt in its fecun-"dines. But it is impossible to nature to melt powdered metal in

"us, and to be detained so many months in its pristine figure in the "Intellines, or that the Eele should so often be made into small pow-" der and to arise again from death. And that pieces of wood and "leather should so often be turned into small powder, and again "restored into their former condition. For (he saith) I have seen Hift. 2. "at Bruxells in the year 1599. that an Oxe having taken three "Herbs did vomit a Dragon with a tail like an Eele, a body as of "leather, a Serpentine Head, and not less than a Partridge. There "is (he faith) an History of a Polonish Countryman, seen lately "of the Son of the Lord Ericius Puteanus. A certain ruftick did " attempt himself to cut the Squinsie that he had in his throat with " a short Knife, which at unawares he swallowed, and that at the clength he did void the same at the right side of the Abdomen, or "lower belly, with much rotten matter after great tortures, and " survived in health. Also at Vilvordia in the year 1636. a Coun-"tryman known unto me ('he faith) intending to feed a Cow, did "daily give her a bowl, in which he had boiled Pot-Herbs with "bran. At last the waxeth leaner more and more every day, and be-"gun to halt upon the right thigh: The Cow being killed the short "Knife of his Wives bended back into the haft of Box, is found "hid betwixt the ribs and the shoulder blade: For the Country "Woman in cutting the rape root, had left her Knife amongst the " Pot-Herbs, and the Cow by drinking had swallowed it. Also (he "faith) Ambrosius Paraus relateth a story of a certain man whom "Thieves had compelled to swallow a Knife, which he afterwards "being found did void by an Apostume of the side. Alexander Be-"nedittus (he faith) doth mention another, to whom an Arrow "had penetrated into his back, the hook of which of the breadth " of three fingers he did void by stool without hurt. The same "Author relateth of a certain Girl of Venice who had swallowed "a Needle, and that after two years she voided it by urine, crusted "over with a stony substance. Also (he faith) Antonius Beneve-Hift. 5. " wine doth relate, that an Hetruscan Woman had swallowed a Cop-"per Needle or Pin, which three years after she voided at the Na-"vil, and was found. Valesus de Taranta (he faith) mentioneth "a Girl of Venice (perhaps the same) who voided by urine a Pin "of three fingers long. A certain Capucine at Eburum called Bullo-"nint, by Sirname Hamptean, did with much aversion of mind "drink up an huge living Spider, which he had seen fall into the "Chalice in the time of the Sacrifice of the Mass. Within a few "days he had a Phlegmon or bile that did arife in his right thigh, "and with much rotten matter from thence he voided the whole "Spider, but being dead. A young Merchant of Antwerp being Hift. 7.

Also Writers do commemo-"rate, that the young one sometimes dead and wasted in the Womb "hath voided the bones through the Womb, the belly, by the na wil, and fometimes by the fundament. More things of this nature "do every where occur amongst Authors worthy of credit. . From which matters of fact he thus concludeth t " By which Reas. " (he faith) it is manifest, that folid bodies sufficiently great, have " penetrated the Stomach, the Bowels, the Womb, the Caul, the "lower Belly, the skin upon the infide of the Ribs, the Bladder. "Membranes (he faith) impatient of fo great a wound. That is "to fay, that Knives have been transmitted through these Memof branes without wound, which is equivalent to the penetration "of dimensions made in nature without the help of the Devil. And "that an human body may be drawn through a small hole, through "which a Cat might only pass, but not through a Wall. Verily "that the Devil cannot break a paper Window without the confent "of his Master, is (he saith) manifest by the process and arrest of "Ludoviens Godfredns the Witch, pronounced at Aix in Narbona, "the last of April 1611. I pray you where have the three pounds "of brais, of the Cannon of War, marked with its letters, laid hid? "how for so many months hath the dross shined, in what part was "the piece of brafs greater than the intestine contained? While I "was (he faith) shewing a necessary vacuity in the air, I promised "that I would declare, that although the penetration of bodies by " the primary law of nature, and by the common way of Artificers "be forbidden: notwithstanding that while a body doth totally " pass over into the dominion of the spirit, and is carried over, and "is by that as it were weakened; then bodies do naturally and mu-"tually penetrate one another, at least in that part that is porous; "Because that the spirit then doth inclose the body under it self, "and therefore as it were taketh away the dimensions. 5. And to confirm and open this point more fully, he faith: Reaf. 5. "I will premise some things. The desire of eating Muscles did in-"vade a Woman with Child. And the eateth fome of them fo very Hift. 1 "hastily, that she did devour the raw shells, twice or thrice broken "with her teeth. Thereupon by and by within an hour, she bring-"eth forth a found and adult Child, with the same half chewed shells, "and wounded in the belly. Therefore the shells without the aper-"ture of the membranes, had forthwith penetrated the Stomach, "Womb and Secundines: or else there were new shells generated "upon the young Child. Neither could this later be true. For they were the true fragments of the Muscles, and not figuratively fra-"med to the imitation of them. Furthermore, the appetite is not "carried to a thing unknown: Therefore the appetite of eating "the Muscles was not of the Child, but of the Woman. Therefore "it was not necessary that new Muscles should be generated about "the Child; for they were defired by the Mother that they might

CHAP. XII.

"become nutriment to her, not the Child. Otherwise by the same "argument of Identity, what things foever should by the appetite " be desired, should be generated about the young Child; of whom "when they could not be digested, they should be always either "left remaining about the Child, or should there putrefie. Which "is falle both ways: for if it should putrefie, that which is desired "would cause abortion; or if it were conserved there, it would be "found regularly. For the Child is only nourished by the Navil: "Therefore those external Muscles could neither be wished by the "Child, nor could be profitable unto it, and by consequence, "were neither for an end made anew, but fent to the young one by "reason that it was an uterine appetite. The appetite is always di-"rected from the end; but the Woman with Child defired the "Muscles not the shells, neither that the Muscle being a living ani-"mal might remain in its former state, in which it was unprofitable "to the Mother, nor could fatisfie her appetite; and therefore much "less hath had occasion of generating new and unprofitable thells "about the young one. But however it be taken, the appetite was " not to the shells twice or thrice broken. For if the Fishes had been "taken forth of the shells, she had eaten the fish the shells being left. "Therefore the concomitance and concision of the shells were acci-"dental to the appetite. I suppose truly (he saith) that as the de-"fire, terrour, &c. do generate seminal Idea's, which the hand of " the Woman with Child doth fend down to the young one, and "doth depinge or figurate it in a set time: So the joy of finding "" that which the appetite did desire, doth bring that very thing to "the Child. So verily the heaviness of heart of him that swallowed "the Knife, the horror of having drunk the Spider, and of the Ear "of Barley devoured, did repel or drive back those things beyond "the membranes not able to suffer a wound without death. And "these things (he saith) of things injected, entring by the ordi-"nary power of nature, without the suspicion of Diabolical co-"operation. 6. Now he proceedeth to prove penetration of dimensions by natural power in another way. "Something like to these (he saith)

"appeareth in things that from within are to without taken away,

"which I will dispatch (he saith) in one or two examples. The

"Married to a Merchant of Amsterdam, by name Hoochcamer, and " is yet living this year 1638. But the right Arm was no where to "be found, neither the bones or any corruption did appear, into "which the Arm might be wasted in a little hour, But the Souldier "not being feen, the Child had two Arms, neither could the Arm that was torn off be annihilated. Therefore the Womb being flut "the Arm was taken away. But who tore it away naturally, and "whither was it taken? certainly trivial reasons do not square or "agree in fo great a portent or Paradox. I am not he that will fay "these things. I will say this at the least: That the Arm was not taken away of torn off by Satan. Furthermore it was of less weight "to carry away elsewhere the Arm torn off, than to have torn "the Arm from the whole body without death. The Wife of a Mer- Hift, 1. "chant (he faith) known unto us, as foon as the heard that thir-" teen were to be beheaded (it happened at Autwerpe in the time of "the Duke of Alva) and Women with Child are led with inordi-"nate appetites, the determined to fee the decollations. Thereupon "fine ascends the Chamber of a Widdow that was a familiar friend "to her that lived in the Market-place. And the spectacle being "feen, forthwith the pain of Child birth took her, and the brought "forth a full grown infant with a bloody neck, whose head did no " where appear.

7. From these most stupendious and almost incredible stories, he Real. 7. draweth these conclusions. "I do not find (he saith) that human "nature doth abominate the penetration of dimensions, seeing it is "molt frequent to the feeds of things. For in the feeds of things, "that primevous Energie of penetrating bodies, doth yet confilt but si not subject to force, art or human arbitrement. For there are ma-"ny bodies many times more ponderous than the matter of which "they are framed. It is necessary (he faith) that more than fifteen " parts of water do fall in together into one, that one part of gold " may from thence be made. For weight is not made of nothing: "but argueth the ponderating matter in the ballance. Therefore water doth naturally penetrate its body so often as the gold doth overweigh the water. Therefore the domestick and daily progress " of seeds in Generations, doth require that the body doth penetrate it felf by condensation, which is altogether impossible to an Ar-"tificer. We grant (he faith) that there are pores in the water, "these notwithstanding cannot contain so much as fourteen times "the quantity of its whole. Therefore it is ordinary, that some esparts of the water do penetrate themselves into one place.

8. And to illustrate this going before he saith: " By an example, Reas. 8. " Aqua fortis doth by its spirit make Bras, Iron or Silver remainering opacous in their natures fo transparent that they cannot be "feen, and doth pass the metal thorough filtring paper, which " otherwise will not transmit, no not the most small powder, which es metal doth effentially remain still a metal in specie or kind. But "not that the similitude of penetration of dimensions doth uniformly " square with the propounded example of the metal. Because rea-"fons do not agree to fo great a Paradox, wherein (he faith) I " willingly acknowledge the manner to be indemonstrable à priori. Even as no man can know by what means the Idea impressed in the feeds doth figurate, direct, and dispose the things that it hath framed. And therefore we are forced to hunt forth the same & posteriori.

9. From all which he draweth this Conclusion. ' There is there-"fore another far different power of incantation, besides the Devils. "And therefore natural and free. He hath no Dominion over the "just. But if the power of inchanting were free to the Devil, also "it would be equally free to him to kill by a Knife or a Maul. And "fo none should be free. Therefore the Witch (he saith) doth. o per ens naturale, form imaginatively a free Idea, which is natural and noxious. Which Idea Satan cannot form. Because that the " formation of Idea's do require the Image of God and a free power: "And therefore the Witches do operate by a natural force, no less "against the just and innocent, than against wicked men. Seeing "that inchantments do more easily infect Children than those of ripe "age, sooner Women than stout Men: A certain natural power is "fignified to be limited to the inchantment, to which it is easily "refisted by a stout and couragious mind. The Devil therefore " offereth filth and poylons to his Clients, that he may knit fermen-"tally Idea's formed in the Imagination of the Witches unto them. "And he preserveth that Ideal poyson, that it may not be blown "away with the wind, or being covered in the earth, it be not de-"stroyed by putrefaction. But he carrieth that poison locally near "to the object, to be inchanted: But to apply it, or carry it in-"to the man, he by no means is able. And therefore the Witch "doth also send forth another executive medium, or mean emana-"tive and commanding, which mean is the Idea of a strong defire. "For it is inseparable to the desire to be carried about things with-"ed for. To all which the Devil as a Spectator doth affift in the "conduction.

10. "For (he faith) in truth, I have demonstrated already, that " operative means are folely in the power of man. For only God is "the most chiefly glorious Creator, to be infinitely praised, who "hath Created the Universe forth of nothing. But man as far forth as "he is the Image of God doth forth of nothing create certain Entia "rationis, or non-Entities in their beginning, and that in the pro-per gift of the Phantastical virtue. Which are notwithstanding "fomething more than meerly a privative or negative being. For "first of all while these conceived Idea's do at length cloath them-"felves in the species or shape fabricated by the Imagination, they "become Entities now subsisting in the middest of that Vestment, "to which by the whole they are equally in them. And thus far "they are made seminal and operative Entities: of which, to wit "their assumed subjects are forthwith totally directed. But this "power opower is given to man alone. Otherwise a seminal power to pro-"pagate, is given to the Earth, to Bruits, Plants, &c. Also the Dog by his madness can transfer or change his spittle or faliva into " poyfon, because it is peculiar to his kind or species. Which also " is obvious in divers poylons of animals. But to form Idea's ab-"ftracted from their species and adjacent proprieties, that is given "to none but man.

Having thus far at large traced his footsteps in these abstruct and mysterious matters, we shall come now to examine them and make fome observations upon them. And although we may be sharply censured for taking upon us to question the things that he hath afferted, having been suo gradu an Adeptist, a person of profound judgment, great experience, general learning, high reputation, and now generally followed as the Chief Standard-bearer for Philosophy, Phylick and Chymistry, that many esteem it no small glory to be called and accounted an Helmontian. Yet notwithstanding this we shall note some observations in this order.

I. He holdeth that the Devil doth only make the things invisi- observ. 1. ble, or hides them by his spirit, and brings them near to the object into which they are to be injected, and that the Witch by the feminal Idea of her imagination, and the strength of her desire as the agent, or efficient cause, doth inject or thrust them into the body of the person, intended to be hurt or tormented; whereby he necessarily supposes a league or contract betwixt the Devil and the Witch, and therefore he calls them the Devils clients and those that are bound unto him. But what kind of contract this should be, explicite or implicite, internal and mental, or corporeal and visible, he tells us not; the latter of which we utterly deny, that it is in the power of the Devil to practile when he pleaseth, as we have before with sufficient arguments demonstrated at large. And for an implicite or mental league, we grant that all thieves, murderers, these kind of malicious and poysoning Witches and all other wicked persons are bound in a spiritual contract unto him: For he is the spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience. And what wickedness soever he hath tempted and drawn them unto, to be willing to commit, he prompteth and pusheth them on with all his skill and power to perpetrate and execute the same. But still this is to be understood only of his spiritual and invisible assistance, and not of any visible or corporeal aid, for else (as this Author confesseth) he might as well kill with a knife or a maul. And therefore we cannot here pass by the bold and groundless (if not impious) affertion of Sennerties, who though a very learned De meaniperson in diverse parts of humane literature, yet drawn with p. 677. the sway of popular opinion, did most miserably lapse in affirming that although Witches do purpose to burt men, yet "that they neither "do nor can effect those things, but that the Witches being cast in-"to a profound fleep, the Devil in the mean time afteth those things "by himself; and thinks he proves this sufficiently by a fabulous I. l 2

"and lying story feigned to be told of a Witch, that being in a "deep fleep, when the waked, told that the had been transformed "into a Wolf, and had torn in piecesa Cow and a Sheep, which were found to be fo, and therefore the Devil must needs have done it. But inthis he neither nameth the place, time, nor Author to avouch it, and therefore all reasonable Men may judge how palpable a fallity it is, for then if true it would follow that none could be safe, and that the Devil might kill immediately with swords or knives, which he cannot do.

De Lithiaf.

2. Whereas he holdeth that the Devil doth bring or convey the things to be injected near unto the place, and that he offereth filth and poysons to his clients, that thereby he may fermentally conjoin the Ideas of these formed in the imaginative faculty with these. If the Devil be taken to be meerly and simply incorporeal, then he cannot remove matter (as we have before proved) and so cannot convey the things near to the object; and if he be taken to be corporeal (as we have afferted) his help is needles, because the Witches may do it themselves, as we find sufficient stories of their hideing of strange and poysonous things under the thresholds of houses and Churches; and to this purpole this same Author telleth us this ftory: "A certain person (he faith) did by custome use to make "water in a corner of the Court, whereupon he was afflicted with "abloody and cruel Strangury. And all the remedy of the Phy-"ficians proved in vain, except that as often as he did drink of Birch-"Ale he did find a fignal eafe: But as oft as he rose and walked, "and made water in the same place, so often his pains did return. "At the last a pin of old black Oak-wood is espied to be fixed in "the place where he used to make water. Which being pulled "forth and burned he remained free from the bloody Strangury, by "drinking Ale of Birchen-twiggs. Also (he saith) that he re-"membred, that Karichterus had written that he had loofed fuch "kind of inchantments by only pilling through Beesomes of Birch. Now from hence it is plain that this making water constantly up. on this pin of old black Oak-wood did cause his bloody Strangury, and that the pulling of it up and burning of it, was with the help of the Birchen Ale the cure; but it can no wayes be judged necessary that the Devil should fix the Oak pin there, but that the Witch might do it himself. Neither can it be thought to be any power given by the Devil to the Oaken pin, that it had not by nature, for in probability it will constantly by a natural power produce the same effect; only thus far the Devil had a hand in the action, to draw some wicked person to fix the pin there where the Man was accustomed to make water, thereby to hurt and torture him, and so was only evil in respect of the end.

3. We observe and affirm that whatsoever effects are brought to pass by that which is commonly called and accounted Witchcraft, if they be not brought to pass by jugling, confederacy, delusion and imposture (as the most of them are, if not all) then they are performed either by meer natural causes, or the strength of the Witches fancy, and most vehement desire of doing of misshief to those she hateth, or by both joined together, and that Satan is no further an author oractor, but as he leadeth and draweth the minds of the Witches to do fuch mischievous actions, and pusheth on to feek about to learn of others such secret poysons, charms, images and other hidden things, that being used so or so, may produce such destructive ends as their wicked and diabolical purposes are led to, and in this sense they are his clients, and bounden vasfals, and not otherwise.

4. The stories that he relateth are either all to be taken to be obsered. As true, or none of them; and if they be all alike equally to be credited, then it will undeniably follow, that they were all alike produced by natural causes, and so no need at all of the Devils assist stance in performing of them, no more than by working upon the minds of such as used those natural means to a wicked and mischies yous end. For first he giveth these instances of things that were very strange that were voided either by vomit or stool, by the ordinary power of nature, without suspicion of diabolical cooperation, as the voiding of the piece of the brass Cannon with its letters, with the Eele wrapped in its secundines: The Dragon that the Oxe voided by taking three herbs, with a tail like an Eele, a body like or of leather, with a Serpentine head, and not less than a Partridge: The knife that the Thieves forced a man to swallow. which he voided by an Apostume in the side, and was after sound ? also the arrow head of three fingers broad strucken into the back, and after voided by stool, with diverse such which we recited before. And that these being solid bodies should have penetrated and passed through parts that are impatient of wounds, and in which a wound is mortal, must of necessity be very wonderful, and might as foon and upon as rational grounds be taken to be diabolical, as those that he enumerateth to be so: For from these it is manifest that either nature put to her last pinch doth make penetration of dimensions, or else so inlarge the porcs, that those solid bodies may pass without wound, which (if seriously considered is a stupendious operation and effect. And as there needeth no cooperation of a diabolical power, for the performing of these, no moreneedeth there any concurrence of Devils to the others, that to that purpose he relateth. Only here is all the difference: these are wrought by the ultimate endeavour of the Archanto fave life, without the concurrence of external causes; the others (that are therefore called diabolical) are commonly wrought for a bad end. namely to hurt or to take away life, and have an external cause, to wit, the force of the Witches imagination and strong desire of doing of mischief, which is stirred up to that end by Satan, and therefore in regard of the end are devilifh, though they be both wrought by the agency of nature, the one in the body of the imaginant, the other in the body that the Witch intendeth to hurt by the force of her

5. The arguments that he bringeth to prove penetration of dimensions to be in nature, or something equivalent thereunto, seem to be strong and convincing. For in the generation of things, whosoever shall seriously and strictly mark, shall find (as he alledgeth) that the spirit of the Archeus (though not altogether incorporeal) doth in the feeds of things penetrate it felf, and their parts one another, which he further maketh good by the instance of Gold generated of water; for it must of necessity be, that more than fifteen parts of water must fall in or penetrate one another, that from thence one part of Gold may be made, for weight is not of nothing, but argueth the matter ponderous in the Ballance. Therefore naturally the water must so oft penetrate its body as the Gold doth preponderate the water. And though it be granted that the water hath pores, yet notwithstanding it cannot contain so much as fourteen times, it whole. And therefore he irrefragably concludeth: Eft ergo ordinarium innatura, quod alique partes aque fe penetrent in unicum locum. And this he backs with an unanswerable story of a Woman that longing for Muscles, did in greediness eat some of them with the shells twice or thrice broken with her teeth, and that the brought forth a child with the same half eaten shells, and a wound in the belly 3 therefore those shells had penetrated the stomach, womb and secundines, or otherwise the force of the Archeus had opened the pores and letten them pass in an unconceiveable manner So that if these things be granted to be true (and we confess we know not how they can be answered) then there need no diabolical power be brought to folve the injecting of strange things into mens bodies, feeing nature is sufficient of it felf, and therefore we can allow no power at all unto Devils in effecting these things (if they be truly done, and be not delusions) but only in drawing the minds of the Witches to these wicked and mischievous courses; and therefore the Lord Bacon said profoundly syl. syl. con. and wifely these words: Ot in operationibus illis earumq; cansis error cavendus eft, ita quoq, danda vel imprimie opera eft, ne effetta nobie imponant, temere judicantibus talia effe, que confq, nondum processerunt. Sic prudentes judices, prascripta velut norma, fidem habert temere nolunt confessionibus sagarum, nec ettam sactorum contra illas probationi. Sugas enim turbat imaginationis vertigo, nt putent se illud facere, quod non faciunt, populuma; bic ludit credulitas, ut natura opera imputent fascino.

6. And to confirm this point he addeth far more stupendious matters of fact than the former, of things that were within, being taken to without or invilibly conveyed away, as the woman at Mechlin that saw the Souldier in a conflict lose his hand, and forthwith brought forth a Daughter wanting an hand, which was never found, and the wench died of the Hæmorrhage. Another at Antwerpe feeing a Souldier begging with his right arm that off and bloody, forthwith brought forth a Daughter wanting the right arm whose bloody shoulder the Chirurgeon cured, and the was married after; and that the arm was never found, neither did there appear any bones or putrefied matter into which the arm might wafte. Also another Woman going to see the Decollation of thirteen men. did foon after bring forth a mature Child with a bloody neck, the head no where appearing. I confess it would rack the judgment even of the most credulous to the highest pitch to believe these upparallel'd Stories; but the Author relating them as of his own knowledge, and being a person of unquestionable veracity, I cannot conceive how they can rationally be denied, especially finding M. Borle to affirm, that in those experiments (much more relations of matters of fact) that Helmont avouched upon his own knowledge, he durst be his Compurgator. Who would not believe but that these things could never have been done, but by a supernatural and Diabolical power, but that this Author (to which all judicious persons in reason may adhere) doth utterly deny, that the arm was either pull'd away or conveyed none can tell whither, by Satan, and therefore that in such a strange Paradox, trivial reasons are not to be allowed; and it were too much floathfulness to ascribe all effects unto Satan, of which we are ignorant. And therefore if an hand, an arm, nay an whole head, could be separated from the rest of the body, and conveyed forth of the Womb by the Archeus or natural spirit, thereunto excited by the impression of horror and terror in the Women: In like manner by the same power of the natural spirit of man or woman, excited by a vehement and sierce imagination to revenge and to do mischief, may strange things be injected (if there can be any found proof of such a matter of fact) into the bodies of such men or women as the Witches intend to do hurt unto, and yet Satan hath no more hand in it, but only as a spiritual agent to move the wills of those wicked and malicious people to do mischief unto those that they hate, though without cause. And the great secret of that which may be called Witchings is the learning of others, who likewise have had it by tradition. the great force of imagination, and the natural spirit with the wavs and means how to excite it and exalt it; herein stands the mystery of all Magick, and it becomes only evil in the use and application, and they are to be condemned that use it to such devillish ends, even as those that use those good Creatures that nature doth produce to poylonous, wicked, and destructive purposes. And lastly, here we may note, that if things or bodies that are without may be injected into the bodies of others, by the force of exalted imagination and a vehement defire, then the same power that doth injest them through skin, flesh and bones, must also be able to bring them near to the place, and need not at all the affiftance of Satan. because it is far easier to carry them near the place, than to thrust them into the body; and fo this Author hath here introduced the

7. The other matters of fact that he relateth are prodigious. and are brought to prove that Satan is an actor to convey these strange things into the bodies of men, and are these. A piece of an Oxe Hide taken forth of a mans Arm, fo also that Equaleum, a Wood-Horse, or a four-footed board with a wheel and ropes twice as broad as the gullet. Another that vomited up perhaps two thoufand pins conglomerated together, with filth and hairs; another that vomited up, he being present, wooden Chips that had been cut off with the Hatchet in smoothing of wood, with much slime to the bigness of two filts, of which we shall note these Conclusions. I. It doth no way appear (if these things be granted to be true, both for matter and manner) neither doth he offer to prove it, that these are any more than the former Diabolical, but only in the end, because they are for the hurt and destruction of mankind and not otherwise; and there being no proof of the Devils Cooperation any further but in working upon the minds of those that are agents and instruments to bring these things to pass, we may very well reject those things that are supposed, but not proved. 2. The ejecting or voiding of such strange things as here he hath related, doth not necessarily suppose their injection or thrulting in, because they may be bred there by natural Causes, fo Worms of many forts and strange Figures, also Frogs, Dracuncu. los and Askers have been voided, and doubtlefly bred there by natural causes, and were not injected or thrust in, and for proof of this I refer the Reader to the relations of learned schenching lib. 3. p. 363. of those strange forts of Worms and other Creatures that he from divers Authors sheweth have been vomited up, which without all scruple, were not injected, but bred there. To confirm this and to prove what strange things are sometimes bred in Apostumes and Tumors, we shall translate a passage or two, and first take this from Levinus Lemnius that learned and famous Phylician of Zeland, who written thus: "Also forth of fordid Ulcers and Impostures Descende nate "(he faith) we have known that the fragments of nails, hairs, mirac. L. 2. " fhells, little bones and stones have been taken forth; which were "concreted and grown together forth of putrid humours: As also "little creatures, worms with tails, and little beafts of an unaccu-"fromed form, cast up by vomiting, especially in those who were "oppressed with contagious diseases, in whose urines I have often "discerned to swim little Animalcles like to Pismires, or to those "creatures we observe in the estival months to move in the celesti-"al dew here in England we call it Woodsoar, or Cuckow-spittle. Take another from that learned and expert Chirurgeon De Tamor. 1. C. Ambrosius Paraus where he is speaking of strange tumors, in these words; " Also in these tumors being opened thou maist see bodies "of all kinds, and far differing from the common matter of Tumors,

"as stones, chalk, sand, coals, cockies, ears of corn, hay, "horn, hairs, flesh as well hard as spongious, grisles, bones and "whole Animalcles, as well living as dead. The generation of "which things (by the corruption and alteration of the humors) "will not much aftonish us, if we consider, that even as nature hath "framed Man as a Microcosm forth of all the seeds and elements " of the whole great world, that he might be as it were the lively "image of that great world: So in that Microcosm, nature "hath willed, that all the species of all motions and actions "might be manifest, nature being never idle in us, as long as matter "is not a wanting to work upon. So that it is most plain that these strange things may be bred within, and so the opinion of injecting them, is but a meer figment. 3. Neither can the vomiting up of such strange things as he relateth, conclude necessarily that they were injected either by the power of Satan or the Witch, because they may be performed by jugling, fleight of hand, confederacy and the like, as was manifest in the Boy of Bilfon, and diverse that we have known, that had made some numbers of others to believe that they had voided strange things, as pins, needles, crooked knitting-pricks, moss, nails, and the like, but upon a strickt fearch, have but proved delutions and fleight, fuch as our common Hocus Pocus Men use, when they make the people believe they fwallow a long pudding of white tinn, and again pull it forth of their mouths, or in pulling ribbins, or laces of diverle colours forth of their throats. 4. And again the most of these relations are but commonly taken upon trult from the affirmations of the by-standers who might be confederate parties, or ignorant persons, and to easily deceived; and it appeareth not that Helmont was by at the very instant when the children vomited up the wooden horse, of fourfooted board, but that it was the by standers that drew it forth, who might be parties to the cheat, or be themselves deluded, and so aver it pertinaciously to others. For I have in my practice known a young Wench about 9 or 10 years old, who that the Hife might be pittied and have an idle life, had made her Father and Mother believe that quick worms came forth at her ear, and alfoI taking her into mine own house she had perswaded all the family that it was true, and did often open her head-cloaths, and holding down her car a quick worm would drop forth of the hair, who notwithstanding by diligent watching, was found out to get them privately from under stones or wood, and so did cunningly convey them into her hair, but being discovered, was by due correction reclaimed, and so the wonder ceased. And it is as common to mistake things, either by absolute judging them to be such a thing indeed, when it hath but some slender resemblance of it, or by judging a thing to be really so, because of such a name but metaphorically given unto it; fo it is usual to call a Carcinoma in the highest degree Lupus or a Wolf, because as a Wolf is a most voracious creature, so thisulcer is the most devouring of all others, and therefore Мm

therefore have we known after that such have been by incision eradicated by our felves and others, and exposed to the view of the vulgar people, they would presently most earnestly affirm to others that they had feen it, and that it was a living creature, and had mouth, eyes and ears; fo far will ignorant mistake induce cre-

But that it can at distance work upon another body, though denied by Fiense and the whole rabble of the Schoolmen, yet is itrongly proved by this learned Author, and allowed of by all others that truly understood the operations of nature, which we also take to be a certain truth, and doasser that if those people that are esteemed Witches, do really and truly (of which we utterly doubt) inject any of these strange things into the bodies of men, that they are brought to pass meerly by the imagination of the Witch, and the Devil aftern nothing in it at all, but the fetting of his will upon that mischief. As for the handling the dispute concerning the manner of the injecting of these ftrange things, fo ftrongly pursued by this Author, Seunertwo and others, we shall totally supersede and suspend our judgment, until the 171 be sufficiently proved (which yet lies under water, and unfeen and then it will be time enough to dispute the manner, when the matter is certainly made evident. Therefore we will flux up this with that modelt and grave advice of the Lord

CHAP. XIII.

THE opinions that we reject as foolish and impious are those we have often named before, to wit, that those that are vulgarly accounted Witches, make a visible and corporeal contract with the Devil, that he sucks upon their bodies, that he hath carnal copulation with them, that they are transubstantiated into Cats, Dogs, Squirrels, and the like, or that they raise tempests, and fly in the air. Other powers we grant unto them, to operate and effect whatfoever the force of natural imagination joyned with envy, malice and vehement desire of revenge, can perform or perpetrate, or whatsoever hurt may be done by secret poysons and fuch like wayes that work by meer natural means.

And here we are to shew the chief causes that do and have advanced these opinions, and this principally we ascribe to mens ignorance of the power of Nature and Art, as we shall manifest in

1. There is nothing more certain than, that how great foever the knowledge of Men be taken to be, yet the ultimate Sphere of natures activity or ability is not perfectly known, which is made most manifest in this, that every day there are made new discoveries of her secrets, which prove plainly that her store is not yet totally exhausted, nor her utmost efficiency known. And therefore those Men must needs be precipicious, and build upon a sandy foundation, that will ascribe corporeal effects unto Devils, and yet know not the extent of nature, for no Man can rationally affign a beginning for supernatural agents and actions, that does not certainly know where the power and operation of nature ends.

2. And as it is thus in general, so in many particulars, as especially in being ignorant of many natural agents that do work at a great distance, and very occultly, both to help, and to hurt, as in the weapon salve, the Sympathetick powder, the curing of diseases by mumial applications, by Amulets, Appensions and Transplantions, which all have been, and commonly are ascribed unto Satan, when they are truly wrought by natural operations. And fo (as we have fufficiently manifested before) by many strange, and secret poysons both natural and artificial, that have no bewitching power in them at all, but work naturally, and only may be hurtful in their use through the devilishness of some persons that use them to diverse evil ends.

3. There is nothing that doth more clearly manifest our scanted knowledge Mm a knowledge in the secret operations of nature, and the effects that the produceth, than the late discoveries of the workings of nature, both in the vegetable, animal and mineral Kingdoms, brought dayly to light by the pains and labours of industrious persons: As is most evident in those many elucubrations, and continued discoveries of those learned and indefatigable persons that are of the Royal Society, which do plainly evince that hitherto we have been ignorant of almost all the true causes of things, and therefore through blindness have usually attributed those things to the operation of Cacademons that were truely wrought by nature, and thereby not smally augmented and advanced this gross and absurd opinion of the power of Witches.

4. Another great means in advancing these Tenents hath been Mens supine negligence in not searching into and experimenting the power of natural agents, but resting satisfied in the sleepy notions of general rules, and speculative Philosophy. By which means a prejudice hath been raifed against the most occult operati-De occub. Pli- ons of nature, and natural magick (which is ($ Agrippa truly faid) "The comprizer of great power, full of most high mysteries, and "containeth the most profound contemplation, nature, power, "quality, substance and virtue of most secret things, and the know-"ledge of all nature) to be condemned, as the work of the Devil "and hellish fiends, which is the handmaid and instrument of the Almighty. And from this diabolical pit of the ignorance of the power of nature (especially when assisted by art) have sprung up those black and horrid lies in the mouths of Erafine, Conringine and above all of Kircherse, denying the possibility of the transmutation of metals, by the power of Art and Nature, and aferibing the performance thereof by Paracelfus, Lullius, Sendinogius and others to the Devil; so malevolent do men grow when they are led by nesci-

ence and ignorance. 5. The ignorance of the strange and wonderful things that Art can bring to pass hath been no less a cause, why the most admirable things that Art bringeth to pass by it are through blind ignorance ascribed unto Devils, for so have many brave learned Artiste, and Mechanicians been accused for Conjurers, as happened to Roger Bacon, Dr. Dec, Trithemim, Cornelius Agrippa, and many others, when what they performed was by lawful and laudable art. The strange things that the Mathematicks and Mechanicks can perform are hardly to be enumerated, of which were those most wonderful catoptrical glasses mentioned by Nicero, Aquilonius, Baptista Porta and many others, those wonderful engines in the shape of Birds, Men, Beasts, and Fishes that do move, sing, his and many such like things mentioned by Heron of Alexandria, and our Countryman Dr. Fludd; and those that would have more ample I tisfaction concerning the stupendious things that are produced by art, may receive most large satisfaction in reading that most learned and elaborate Epillie written as a preface before the Book of Johannes Johannes Ernestus Burgravius called Biolychnium vel de lampade Vid. Thatr. vite & mortis, by Marcellus Oranckheim Doctor of both laws, as p. 943. alfo in reading that profound and mysterious piece written by Roger Bacon, de admirabili potestate artie & nature, & de nullitate magie, with the learned notes of Dr. Dee upon it, of which he faith this: Of videatur quod omnie poteftas magica fit inferior bie operibus & indigna. And therefore there can be nothing more unworthy, than for any man, that pretendeth to any portion of reason, so far to dote, or suffer himself to be led with ignorance and rathuels, as to afcribe those strange things that Nature and Art. or Borff joined rogerfier do produce, unto Devils: And yet there is nothing that is more common not only by the blind vulgar, but even by those that otherwise would be accounted learned, and wife enough; pride and folly attendeth the most of the Sons of Men. 6. Another groß miliake there is, in supposing those strange things that are performed by vaulters, tumblers, dancers upon topes, and fuch like, not possible to be done but by the affishance of the Devil, when they are altogether brought to pass and effected by use, custome, exercise, nimbleness and agility of body. And yet we have known some not only of the popular rank, but many that thought themselves both wise, learned and religious that have been so blind as to father these things upon Devils and seri- Hist. oully to feem to believe, that the actors of these things had made a league and compact with the Devil, by whole help they performed them. And I do remember that a pretty active young man, within these few years went about in this North Countrey with a neat Bay Mare for money to thew tricks, which were very odd and strange, for if she had been blindfolded, and several pieces of money taken from several persons, and wrapped in a cloath, the Mare would have given every one their own piece of money; and this and many other feats the plaid, were not only by the common people, but by others that should have been more wife, judged to be performed by no other means but by the Devil, and fome were fo stack mad as to believe and affirm that the Mare was not a natural one, but that it was the Devil that plaid those strange tricks in the shape of a Mare: when more sober judgments knew that they were performed by the masters eye, and rod directing the Mare. Error & credulitas multum in hominibus possunt.

7. In like manner are often both those that are learned, as well as the vulgar most wofully imposed upon by the odd and strange feats performed by Legier demain, fleight of hand, and by wonderful things brought to pass by subtile and cunning Impostors that act by confederacy, and the like, of which we have given fome inflances before in this treatife. And it was no evil piece of fervice, that Mafter scot did in his book of the discovery of Witchereft, when he laid open all the leveral tricks of Legierdemain and Height of hand, thereby to undeceive the ignorant multitude; and that is no less praise-worthy that is performed by the Author of that little treatife called Hoens Poens junior, where all the feats are fet forth in their proper colours, so that the most ignorant may see how they are done, and that they are miracles unknown, and but bables being discovered, which treatise I could commend to be read of all Witchmongers and vain credulous persons, that thereby their ignorance may be laid open, and they convinced of their er-

8. The ignorance or mistaking of these things, joyned with the notions Men have imbibed from their infancy, together with irreligious education, are the true and proper causes, that make so many ascribe that power to Devils and Witches, that they neither have, or ever had, or can ever bring into act. And therefore it behoveth all that would judge aright of these abstruse matters, to labour to understand the secret operations of nature, and the ftrange works of art, to divest themselves of their falle imbibed notions, and truely and rightly to understand the Articles of the Christian Faith, to be daily conversant in reading the Scriptures, they will then be more fit to judge of these things, and not to call light darkness, nor darkness light.

Of diverse Impostures framed and invented to prove false and lying miracles by, and to accuse persons of Witchcraft, from late and undeniable authorities.

IN the treatise preceeding we have often made mention of delusions and Impostures, which we shall largely handle in this place: and though Mr. Glanvil, and others do object, that though many pretended possessions or Witchcrafts have been proved to be meer couzenings and impostures, yet therefore it will not follow that all are fo. To which we shall render these answers.

1. If it do not necessarily conclude, that they are all impostures, yet it gives a most shrewd cause of dubitation that they may be so. And the objection depends not upon a necessary connexion betwixt the subject and predicate, for some being direct and palpable Impostures, it is not of necessity, but by contingency or accident that the others are not fo, and ought fir't to have been proved, which never yet was performed.

2. But we affirm that a general conclusion drawn from an indu-Give argument is good and found, where no instance can be clearly made out to the contrary. But as yet no true instance, really and faithfully attefted, hath ever been brought to prove that any of thefe things that we deny, were ever effected by diabolical power. For who were ever by and prefent, that were persons of sidcerity and found judgment, that could truly tellifie and averrthat the Devil in a visible and corporeal shape made a contract with the Witch, or that he suckt upon his, or her body, or that he had carnal copulation with them, or that faw when the Witch was really changed into a Dog or a Cat, or that they flew or were carried in the air? Seeing no instance can be given to prove any of these to be undoubted truths, it must needs follow that they are meer figments, or at the best all but absolute Impostures. And again it is but precarious, and petitio principii, to imagine that any persons have vomited up or voided strange things that saw or knew that they were injected by Devils, for they were either naturally bred there; or else were meer Impostures and delusive Juglings.

And therefore we shall propose some Histories of strange and prodigious cheats and Impostures from late and unquestionable authorities, whereby all the rest may be judged and discerned; of which take this for one.

2. And that we may be certified how frequent and common these counterfeited Impostures have been, and yet are practifed, take this other from undoubted authority. The 15 of August being "Sunday in the 16 of the raign of Queen Elizabeth, Agnes Bridges "a Maid about the age of 20 years, and Rachel Pinder a Wench a-"bout the age of 11 or 12 years, who both of them had counter-"feited to be possessed by the Devil (whereby they had not only "marvelloufly deluded many people both Men and Women, but al-"fo diverse such persons, as otherwise seemed of good wit and "understanding) stood before the Preacher at Pauls cross; where "they acknowledged their hypocritical counterfeiting with peni-"tent behaviours, requiring forgiveness of God and the world, and "the people to pray for them. Also their several examinations "and Confessions were there openly read by the Preacher and after-"wards published in print, for posterity hereafter to beware of "the like deceivers. From whence we may take these two Observations.

1. We may from hence note, how subject the nature of man is Observ. to both to deceive and to be deceived, and that not only the common people, but also the wifer and more learned heads may most easily be imposed upon. And, that therefore in things of this nature and the like, we cannot use too much circumspection, nor use too much diligence to discover them.

2. We may note, that when such strange Impostures or falle Mira Observ. 21 cles are pretended, there is commonly some simister and corrupt end aimed at, under the colour of Religion, and that those that are most ready to publish such things as true Miracles and Divine Revelations, are generally those that did complot and devise them. And therefore the greater number they be that cry them up, and the more esteem the persons are of that blow abroad such things, the greater suspicion we ought to have of the falsity and forgery of them. Always remembring that the greater the fame and number of the persons are that conspire and consederate together, the greater things they may bring to pass, and be more able to deceive, as was manifest by the Priests attending the Oracles; who, though they laboured to father their predictions upon some Deity, yet it was manifest that it was nothing elfe, but their own Confederacy, Impostures and Juglings.

3. But these Diabolical Counterfeitings of possessions, and the Hist. maintaining of the power of dispossession and casting forth of Devils, was not only upheld and maintained by the Papifts to advance their superstitious courses; but also in the said time of Queen Elizabeth, there were divers Non-Conformilts, to gain credit and repute to their way, that did by publick writing labour to prove the continuation of real possessions by Devils, and that they had power by falting and Prayer to cast them out. Of which number were one M. Neither was that discourse containing the certain posfession of feven persons in one Family in Lancashire, at Cheworth in the Parish of Leigh, in the Year 1 594. (though believed by many for a truth, because of the streight tale told by the said Darrell in that Narrative) of any better grain, but full of untruths, impossibilities, absurdities and contradictions.

4. Our next instance shall be a most strange imposture acted in 1716. The cum the time of King James, and in a manner known unto the whole 1714. The cum that is of the Boy of Billon in Stafford bire, in the year of M(M,)-55: 1620. by name William Perry, whose condition as he had been taught, and so left by the Popish Priests, take as followeth. "This "Boy being about thirteen years old (but for wit and subtilty far "exceeding his age) was thought by divers to be possessed of the 6 Devil, and bewitched, by reason of many strange fits and much "diftemper, wherewith he feemed to have been extreamly affected. "In those fits he appeared both deaf and blind, writhing his mouth "alide, continually groaning and panting, and (although often 46 pinched with mens fingers, pricked with Needles, tickled on his " fides, and once whipped with a Rod, besides other the like ex-"tremities) yet could be not be discerned by either shricking or "Ihrinking to bewray the least passion or feeling. Out of his sits "he took (as might be thought) no sustenance which he could di-"gelt, but together with it, did void and cast out of his mouth. "rage, thred, straw, crooked pins, &c. Both in and out of his fits chis belly (by wilful and continual abstinence defrauding his own "Guts) was almost as flat as his back, besides, his throat was swoln "and hard, his tongue stiff and rolled up towards the roof of his "mouth, infomuch that he feemed always dumb, fave that he would " speak once in a Fortuight or three Weeks, and that but in very few " words.

"Two things there were which gave most just cause of presump-"tion that he was possessed and bewitched; one was that be could "still discern when that Woman (which was supposed to have be-"witched him) to wit Jone Cocke was brought in to any room "where he was, although the were fecretly conveyed thither, as "was one time tryed before the Orand Jury at stafford: The fe-"cond, that though he would abide other passages of Scripture, "yet he could not indure the repeating of that Text, viz. supposed Witchcraft. CHAP. XIV.

Yet notwithstanding, this most devillish and cunningly contrived counterfeiting and diffimulation was discovered and fully detected by the fagacity of that pious and learned person, D' Thomas Marson then Bilhop of Coventry and Lichfield : To whole memory I cannot but owe and make manifest all due respect, because he was well known unto me, and by the imposition of whose hands I was ordained Presbyter when he was Bishop of Durham, and also knew his then Secretary, M. Richard Baddeley, who was the Notary, and writ the examination of this crafty Boy. The manner how such a doubtful and intricate piece of Impolture was found out and difcovered, you may read at large in the Treatife called a Discourse concerning Popish Exercising. And his publick Consession we shall give in the Authors own words: "He was finally brought again to the Summer Affizes held at Stafford, the 25. of July, Anno "1621. where before Sir Peter Warburton and Sir Humfrey Winch "Knights, his Majesties Justices of Assize, and the face of the Coun-"ty and Country there affembled, the Boy craved pardon first of "Almighty God, then defired the Woman there also present to forer give him; and lastly, requested the whole Country whom he had "To notoriously and wickedly scandalized, to admit of that his so "hearty Confession for their fatisfaction.

"And thus it pleased God (he saith) to open the eyes of this "Boy (that I may fo fay) litto with the Clay of the Romilh Priefts "lewd Impoltures, and fouto with the spittle of his own infamy, to "fee his errors and to glorifie the God of truth. And though many such impostures as this have in several ages been hudsed up in darkness and recorded for true stories, by those that were Partizans to them and Confederates with them, yet doubtless were but of the same stamp with this, and might all as well have been discovered, if the like care, skill and industry had been used.

5. No less villanous, bloody and Diabolical, was the design of Hift. 5. Thompson alias Southworth, Priest or Jesuit, against Jennes Bierley, Jane Southworth, and Ellen Bierly of Samesbury in the County of Lancafter, in the year 1612. the fum of which is this. But there appearing sufficient grounds of suspicion that it was practifed knavery, the faid Grace Somerbutts was by the wifdom, and care of Sir Edward Bromley Knight, one of his Majesties Justices of Assize at Lancaster, appointed to be examined by Willi. am Leigh and Edward Chisnal Esquires, two of his Majesties Juflices of peace in the same County, and so thereupon made this free confession. Being demanded "whether the acculation she laid upon "her Grandmother, Jennet Bierley, Ellen Bierley and Jane South-"worth, of Witchcraft, viz. of the killing of the child of Thomas "Wallbman, with a nail in the Navil, the boyling, eating and oyl-"ing, thereby to transform themselves into divers shapes, was true? 6. But we shall thut up the relating of these prodigious and hellish stories, of these kind of couzening and cheating delusions and impoltures, with one instance more that is no less notorious than these that we have rehearsed. About the year 1634 (for having loft our notes of the same, we cannot be so exact as we should) there was a great pretended meeting of many supposed Witches at a new house or barn, in Pendle Forest in Lancashire, then not inhabited, where (as the acculation pretended) some of them by pulling by a rope of Straw or Hay, did bring Milk, Butter, Cheefe, and the like, and were carried away upon Dogs, Cats or Squirrels. The informer was one Edmund Robinson (yet living at the writing hereof, and commonly known by the name of Ned of Roughs) whose Father was by trade a Waller, and but a poor Man, and they finding that they were believed and had incouragement by the adjoyning Magistrates, and the persons being committed to prison or bound over to the next Assizes, the boy. his Father and some others besides did make a practice to go from Church to Church that the Boy might reveal and discover Witches, pretending that there was a great number at the pretended meeting whose faces he could know, and by that means they got a good living, that in a short space the Father bought a Cow or two, when he had none before. And it came to pass that this said Boy was brought into the Church of Kildwick a large parish Church. where I (being then Curate there) was preaching in the afternoon, and was fet upon a stall (he being but about ten or eleven years old) to look about him, which moved some little disturbance in the Congregation for a while. And after prayers I inquiring what the matter was, the people told me that it was the Boy that discovered Witches, upon which I went to the house where he was to stay all night, where I found him, and two very unlikely persons that did conduct him, and manage the business; I desired to have some discourse with the Boy in private, but that they utterly refuled; then in the presence of a great many people, I took the Boy near me, and said: Good Boy tell me truly, and in earnest, did thou see and hear such strange things of the meeting of Witches. as is reported by many that thou dolt relate, or did not some perfon teach thee to say such things of thy self? But the two men not giving the Boy leave to answer, did pluckehim from me, and said he had been examined by two able Justices of the Peace, and they did never ask him such a question, to whom I replied, the persons accused had therefore the more wrong. But the Assizes following at Lancafter there were feventeen found guilty by the Jury, vet by the prudent discretion of the Judge, who was not satisfied with the evidence, they were reprieved, and his Majesty and his Council being informed by the Judge of the matter, the Bishop of Chefter was appointed to examine them, and to certifie what he thought of them, which he did, and thereupon four of them, to wit Margaret Johnson, Francis Dicconson, Mary Spenser, and Hargraves Wife, were fent for up to London, and were viewed and examined by his Majesties Physicians and Chirurgeons, and after by his Majesty and the Council, and no cause of guilt appearing but great presumptions of the boys being suborned to accuse them fallely. Therefore it was resolved to separate the Poy from his Father, they having both followed the women up to London, they were both taken and put into several prisons alunder. Whereupon shortly after the Boy confessed that he was taught and suborned to devile, and feign those things against them, and had persevered in that wickedness by the counsel of his Father, and some others, whom envy, revenge and hope of gain had prompted on to that devillish delign and villany; and he also confessed, that upon that day when he faid that they met at the aforefaid house or barn, he was that very day a mile off, getting Plums in his Neighbours Orchard. And that this is a most certain truth, there are many persons yet living, of sufficient reputation and integrity, that can avouch and testifie the same; and besides, what I write is the most of it true, up. on my own knowledge, and the whole I have had from his own mouth more than once.

Thus having brought these unquestionable Histories to manifest the horrid cheats and impostures that are practifed for base, wicked and devillishends, we must conclude in opposing that objection proposed in the beginning of this Chapter, which is this: That though some be discovered to be counterfeitings and impostures, vet all are not fo, to which we further answer.

1. That all those things that are now adayes supposed to be done by Demoniacks or those that pretend possessions, as also all those strange seats pretended to be brought to pass by Witches or Witchcraft, are all either performed by meer natural causes (for it is granted upon all sides that Devils in corporeal matter can perform nothing but by applying fit actives to agreeable passives.) And miracles being long fince ceased, it must needs follow, that Devils do nothing but only draw the minds of Men and Women unto fin and wickedness, and thereby they become deceivers, cheats and notorious impostours: so that we may rationally conclude that all other strange feats and delusions, must of necessity be no better. or of any other kind, than these we have recited, except they can shew that they are brought to pass by natural means. Must not all persons that are of sound understanding judge and believe that all those strange tricks related by Mr. Glanvil of his Drummer at Mr. Mompessons house, whom he calls the Demon of Tedworth, were abominable cheats and impostures (as I am informed from perfons of good quality they were discovered to be) for I am sure Mr. Glanvil can shew no agents in nature, that the Demon applying them to fit patients, could produce any fuch effects by, and therefore.we must conclude all such to be impostures.

2. It is no found way of reasoning, from the principles of knowing, either thereby to prove the existence of things, or the modes of such existence, because the principle of being is the cause of the principle of knowing, and not on the contrary, and therefore our not discovering of all Impostures that are or have been acted, doth not at all conclude the rest that pass undiscovered, are diabolical or wrought by a supernatural power; for it ought first to be demonstrated that there are now in these days some things wrought by the power of Devils, that are supernatural, in elementary and corporeal matter, which never was nor can be, as from the testimonies of all the learned we have shewed before. And therefore a man might as well argue that there are no more thieves in a Nation, but those that are known, and brought to condign punishment, when there may be, and doubtless are many more a so likewise there are many hundreds of impostures, that pass and are never discovered, but that will not at all rationally conclude that those must be diabolical that are not made known.

Of divers Creatures that have a real existence in Nature, and yet by reason of their wonderous properties, or seldom being feen, bave been taken for Spirits, and Devils.

Before we come to speak of Apparitions in general, we shall premise some few things by way of caution, because there is not one subject (that we know of) in the World that is liable to so many militakes, by reason of the prepossessed fancies of men, in adhering to those fictions of Spirits, Fairies, Hobgoblins, and many fuch like, which are continually heightned by ignorant education, and vain melancholy fears. We shall not mention those many apparitions that are frequently practifed by forgery and confederacy, for base ends and interests, as have been commonly used in the time of Popery, and attempted in our dayes, though with little success. As also by other persons for base lucre or worse intents, of which we have known some notorious ones that have been difcovered. Neither shall we speak of those feigned ones that have been practifed to hide thievery and roguery, as we once knew that certain persons who stole mens theep in the night, did carry them a- Hift. 1. way upon a thing made like a Bier covered with a white sheet, by which means those that saw them took it to be an apparition, and to durit not come near them, and to the most part of the people of 3 or 4 Villages were terrified, and the report was far fored that it was a walking spirit, and yet at last discovered to be a cunning piece of knavery to hide their theft withal. Neither (hall we fay any thing of those ludicrous apparitions that are often practifed to terrifie, abule, and affright others. But we shall here give the relation of some strange creatures, that feldom being feen or found, have induced more ignorant persons to take them for Demons, and these we shall enumerate in this order.

I. It hath been, and still is a strong opinion amongst the vul- his. 2. gars and Witchmongers also, that Witches transforming them selves into diverse shapes, did in the night time enter into peoples houses, and then and there suck the breasts or pavils of infants in their Beds or Cradles, that thereby they were weakned or confumed away; which inveterate opinion was the more firmly believed, because children that at night were very well, in the morning were found to be very ill, and to have been sucked in the places aforesaid. To clear which point take this Observation from the learned pen of Thomas Bartholinus that was Phylician to Frederick King

Einter. 1. Hift. of Denmark, in English thus. "Three infants (he saith) of the " Paftor Fionens at Lyckisholm, which is a noble Mannor belonging "to the very illustrious Lord Christian Thomans Sebsted, the Kings "Chancellor, Eques Auratus, and a most renowned Senator of

" Denmark, my Mecanas, that were fleeping in their accustomed "Chamber, were not long after troubled with an unwonted be-" wailing and inquietude, that they felt themselves to be sucked or " milked of something. The nipples of their breasts being diligent-

"ly handled by the Parents did confirm the Childrens suspicion, be-"cause they did hang out like a Womans that did give suck. And "to prevent this fascination, the nipples of the breasts were anoin-"ted with preservatives against poylon and other bitter things. Here-

"upon their Navils were so worn with vehement suction, that not "only they were prominent or did hang out, but also did as it were "thew the greatness of the mouth that had sucked by the impression

"remaining. But the Infants being carried forth of the Chamber. "did from thenceforth rest free from any suction, especially being "carried in peoples arms. And this Caprimulgus or Goat milker, is "by Bellonius faid to be in Crete of the bigness of a Cuckow, being

how Creatures that are but seldom seen, or whose properties are unknown, may easily effect those things that ignorant heads may impute unto Witchcraft. 2. It is no less believed by many, that those kind of Creatures which are called Satyres are but a kind of Demons; for learned De quadre l. 1. Gesner reckoning them to be a kind of Apes, doth tell us this:

"Even as (he faith) the Apes Cynocephali, or with Dogs-heads, "have given the occasion of the Fable, that some have thought such "to be men: So Satyrs being also a rare kind of Apes, and of "greater admiration, some have believed them to be Devils: also

" of some men deluded by the Poets and Painters, as also Statua-"ries, who have feigned that they had Goats feet and horns, the "more to augment the admiration and superstition, they have been "thought Devils: when in Ape-Satyres there is no such thing to be

"feen. And this opinion hath been the more strengthened because the most of the Translators have in the Old Testament rendered the word שָּׁצִיר (which properly fignifieth an happy man or beast) a Goat, a Satyre, (as Gen. 27. ver. II. E fau my Brother is a hairy man) where the very same word is used) Demon, or Devil. But it is plain that it did and doth fignifie no more but only Satyrs, as will appear by these reasons. 1. First, as our English Translators have truly rendred it in that of Isatab, And the Satyre Shall cry unto his fellow t for it is certainly related, both by ancient and modern Navigators, that in those desolate Islands where there are store of them, they will upon the nights make great shouting and crying, and calling one unto another. And in another place of the same Prophet it is faid by the same Translators, and Satyres shall dance there; dancing fini. 13. 21. being one of the properties of that hairy Creature, as a thing it is much delighted with, and so are but Satyres that are natural Creatures and not Devils. 2. And though the same Translators have rendred the plural of the same word, by the name Devils, yet it there Levik 17, 7: properly lignifieth also Satyres; for though in another place it be faid, they facrified to devils, not to God, and fo again by the Dent 32. 17. Pfalmift, for they sarrificed their sons and daughters unto devils; Mal. 106. 37: where in both places the word is waftatoribus, to the destroyers or to Devils ; because in those Idols the Devils were worthipped, and thereby destroyed the souls of men : 3. Yet it is manifest that their Idols were formed in the shape of Satyres, in a most terrible manner ; for the late and most credible travellers that have been in those parts of Asia, where those Idolatries are still upholden, do unanimoully relate that they make their Images or Idols that they worthip, as terrible and frightful as they can devise, as may be seen in the relations of the Travels of Vincent le Blanc, Mandelflo, and Ferdinand Mendez Pinto, and M' Herbert our Countryman gives us the Idol of the Bannyans in the ugly shape of a monstrous Satyre. 4. So that though this worthipping and facrificing, in respect of its abominableness, filthiness and Idolatrousness, was yielded to Devils, which spiritually and invisibly ruled in these Children of disobedience, and was the Author of all those delusions and impostures ; yet it doth no where appear, that it was Demons in the corporeal shape of Satyres (as many have erroneously supposed) no more than the golden Calves that Jeroboam made, were real Devils:

but these Idols were made in the figure or shape of Satyrs or hairy Creatures, as faith the Text: And he ordained him Priefts for the achroniti.ifs bigh places, and for the hairy Idols or Satyres, and for the Calves that he had made. It is the same Hebrew word here that our English Translators render Devils, that in the two former places of Isaiah they translate Satyres; and as the Calves are not rendred Devils, why should the Images that were like Satyres be translated fo? Surely the Devil was as much in the Calves, and as much worthipped in those dumb Idols as he was in the dumb and dead Idols or Images of the Satyres, and fo no more reason to call the one Devils than the other. But that which totally overthrows the conceit that they should be real Devils in corporeal shapes and figures, is this, that both the Calves and the Images of these Satyres were made by Jeroboam : now it is manifest that he could not make a real Devil, but only Images of Calves and Satyres, wherein and whereby the Devils might be worshipped in those Idolatrous ways. So that it is most apparent, that these Satyres being seldom seen and of strange qualities, have made many to believe that they were Demons; nay it seems their Images and Pictures have been taken for accounted a kind of Apes, which we shall now prove by an undeniable instance or two; and first this from the pen of that learned Phylician Nicholaur Tulpius, who faith thus: "In our remembrance Hift. 3. Phytician Nieholans Thipsis, who later true: In our remembrance object. Media: "(he faith) there was an Indian Satyre brought from Angolas and lib. 3. 6. 56. 1. ci presented as a gift to Frederick Henry Prince of Aurange. This "Satyre was four-footed and from the humane shape which it feems "to bear, it is called of the Indians Orang antang, home filvefiria "a wild man, and of the Africans Quoias morron, expressing in lon-"gitude a Child of three years old, and in craffitude, one of fix "years. It was of body neither fat nor lean, but square, most able "and very swift. And of its joints so firm, and the Muscles so large, "that it durst undertake and could do any thing; on the foreparts "altogether smooth, and rough behind, and covered with black "hairs. Its face did resemble a man, but the nose broad and crook-"ed downwards, rugged and a toothless female. But the ears were " not different from humane shape. As neither the breast, adorned "on both fides with a swelling dug (for it was of the feminine Sex) "the belly had a very deep navil; and the joints, both those above "and those below, had such an exact similitude with man, that one "egg doth not feem more like another. Neither was there a-want-"ing a requisite commissure to the arm, nor the order of fingers to "the hands, nor an humane shape to the thumb, or a prop of the "legs to the thighs, or of the heel to the foot. Which fit and decent "form of the members, was the cause that for most part it did go "upright: neither did it lift up any kind of weight less heavily than "remove it easily.

"When it was about to drink it would hold the handle of the "Kan with the one hand, and put the other under the bottom of the "Cup, then would it wipe off the moysture left upon its lips, not "less neatly than thou shouldest see the most delicate Courtier. "Which same dexterity it did observe when it went to bed. For "lying her head upon the Pillow, and fitly covering her body with "the Cloaths, it did hide it self no otherwise, than if the most de-

"Moreover the King of Samback (he faith) did one time tell "our Kinsman Samuel Blomart, that these kind of Satyres, especi-"ally the Males in the Iland of Borneo, have so great boldness of " mind and fuch a strong compaction of Muscles, that they have often " forceably fet upon armed men; and not only upon the weak fex of "Women and Girls; with the flagrant defire of which they are so "inflamed, that catching them often they abuse them. For they are "highly prone to lust (which is common to these, with the lustful "Satyres of the ancients) yea sometimes so keen and salacious, that "therefore the Indian Women do eschew the Woods and Groves as "worse than a Dog or a Snake; in which these impudent animals "do lie hid. And that this lascivious animal is found in the Eastern "Mountains of India; as also in Africa, between Sierra, Liona, "and the Promontory of the Mountain, where (perhaps) were " those places where Plinius lib. 5. cap. 5. affirmeth that upon the " nights there was seen to shine frequent Fires of the Ægipanes, and "to abound with the lasciviousness of the Satyres, who do love "craggy Dens and Caves, and thun the fociety of mankind, being "a falacious, hairy, four footed Creature, with human shape and a "crooked nofe. But that the foot of this Creature neither hath hoofs " nor the body every where hairs, but only the head, shoulders and "back. The rest of the parts are smooth, and the Ears are not

supposed Witchcrast.

So that from hence it is undeniably true, that there are such Creatures existent in nature, and have been either taken for Devils or the Apparitions of Demons in this shape of Satyres, as Doctor Brown hath well observed in these words : " A conceit there is (he Enq. into vulg.

" faith) that the Devil commonly appeareth with a cloven foot or en. h 5.4.271. "hoof, wherein although it seem excessively ridiculous, there may " be somewhat of truth, and the ground thereof at first might be "his frequent appearing in the shape of a Goat, which answers se that description. This was the opinion of ancient Christians concerning the Apparitions of Pans, Fauns and Satyres, and in this "form we read of one that appeared unto Antony in the Wilderet ness. The same is also confirmed from expositions of holy Scripet ture; for whereasit is faid; Thou shalt not offer unto Devils, the original word is sehbirim, that is rough and hairy Goats, because e in that shape the Devil most often appeared, as is expounded by "the Rabbins, as Tremelline hath also explained.

But faving the reputation of learned Saint Hierome and D' Brown, it is but a supposition unproved that ever the Devil appeared in the shape of a Goat, the rise of the opinion was only because the Devil was worthipped in an Idol made in the shape of a Goat.

3. In a few ages past when Popish ignorance did abound, there was no discourse more common (which yet is continued amongst the vulgar people) than of the apparition of certain Creatures which they called Fayries, that were of very little stature, and being seen would soon vanish and disappear. And these were generally believed to be some kind of Spirits or Demons, and Paracelsus held them to be a kind of middle Creatures, and called them non-Adamicks, as not being of the race of Adam; but there are Authors of great credit and veracity, that affirm, there have been Nations of such people called Pygmies. And though Doctor Brown hath learnedly and elegantly handled the question, "Whether there have Enquir. into "been or are any such dwarfish race of mankind, as but of three vulg error. " spans, not considering them singly but nationally, or not, and p. 2071 s hath brought the most probable arguments that well can be. to " prove that there are not nor have been any fuch race of people "called Pygmies, yet dorn he moderately conclude in these words, "There being thus ('he faith) no sufficient confirmation of their everity, some doubt may arise concerning their possibility; where-"in, fince it is not defined in what dimensions the foul may exercise

"might not be a race of Pygmies, as there is sometimes of Giants. "and so may take in the opinion of Austine, and his Commentator " Ludoviens Vives. And though Kircherus with his wonted impu-"dence do conclude in these words : Fabulosa itaq; funt omnia. qua de hujusmodi Pygmais veteres Geographi à simplici populo solu relatione descripta tradiderunt : Yet (I fay) notwithstanding these negative arguments, I give the relation of others (that are of as Idea Idear, ope great or greater credit) in the affirmative. And thus much is affirmad by that most sagacious and learned person Marcus Marci, a late Physician of no mean judgment, who saith thus: Quicquid tamen sis de bis, Pygmaos & olim fuisse, & nunc esse affirmamus. And befides the teltimony of Aristotle, Solinus, Pomponius Mela, and Alian. he relateth thefe. " But those (he saith) that have in our age viewed "the World, the same do testifie also, that there are yet Pygmies in "the Island of Aruchet, one of the Moluccas, and in the Isle Cophi, "and such Pigasetta affirmeth that he saw. And though Doctor Brown seem to sleight it, yet (according to the Proverb) one eyewitness is more to be credited than ten that have it but by the ear. Odericus in his Hiltory of India doth report alfo, "that there are "fuch people of about three spans high, which also is confirmed by the later Odericus. And to these affirmative proofs we shall add that of the learned Philosopher and Physician Baptista Van Demonfir. Thef. Helmont, in English thus. "A Wine Merchant (he faith) of our "Country, a very honest man, sailing sometimes to the Canaries "or Fortunate Islands, being asked of me his serious opinion and " judgment upon certain Creatures, which there the Children as "oft as they would did bring home, and did name them Tude squit-" los, or Germanulos , that is little men; (the Germans call them " Eard-Manlins) for they were dead Carkafes dried almost three "toot long, which any one of the Boys did easily carry in one "hand, and were of an human shape: But the whole dead Carkale " was transparent like Parchment, and the bones were flexible as "grifles. Also the bowels and intestines were to be seen, holden "against the sun which, when after I knew to be a certain truth, " from the Spaniards born there, I considered, that in these days the " off spring of the Pygmies were there destroyed.

From whence all understanding and unpartial judgments may clearly perceive, that these kind of Creatures have been really existent in the World, and are and may be so still in Islands and Mountains that are uninhabited, and that they are no real Demons, or non-Adamick Creatures, that can appear and become invisible when they please, as Paracelsus thinketh. But that either they were truly of human race endowed with the use of reason and speech (which is most probable) or at least that they were some little kind of Apes or Satyres, that having their secret recesses and holes in the Mountains, could by their agility and nimbleness soon be in or out

Tritones, Syrenes, Meir-maids, or Marine, and Sea-Men, and Women, which have been by many supposed and taken to be Spirits, or Demons, and commonly Nymphs, when indeed and truth they are reall creatures, as these examples do make manifest. The first of which we shall recite from the faithful pen of that learned Anatonist Thomas Bartholinas, who was Physician to Frederick the Control third King of Denmark, in these Englished words: "Various things Histor. 11.169. "(he faith) of Meir-maids are extant delivered in the monuments Hift. 6. "of the Ancients, that are partly falle, partly true. It is not far "from a Fable that they held, that they did imitate the voices "of Men and Women. But that there are bealts found in the Sea, "with humane faces (he faith) I shall not deny. But I will not (he "faith) fum up the accounts of the ancients. For they are full of "the stories of Meir-maids. Amongst the later Authors, these have "here and there handled this argument, Scaliger (in lib. 2. Histor. " Anim. t. 108.) Rondoletim, Licetus (de Spont. vin. ort.) Mar-" cus Marci (de Ideis) P. Boistuan (Histor. Gall. prod. T. 1. c. 18 "At Enchuyfen in Holland (he faith) the shape of a certain Meir-"maid is to be feen painted, that formerly had been cast upon the sefhore, by the force of the waters. It is (he faith) in the mouth "of our common people, that a Meir-maid was taken in Denmark, "that did speak, foretel things to come, and spin. A Father of "the Society of Jesus returning forth of India to Rome, had seen "a Sea-Man there adorned with an Episcopal Mitre, who did seem "to have in the next corner, hardly born his captivity; but being "let loofe, and turned into the Sca, did feem to render thanks for "his liberty, by bowing of his body before he went under water, "which (he faith) the Tesuit was wont to tell to Corvinus the el-"der, as his Son (he faith) told me at Rome. But this being but a story told to Bartholinus at the second hand, and but primarily from the mouth of a Jesuit (who doubtless had some design in it) I leave it to the judgment of the Wise and Prudent. But he proceeds thus. "It is (he faith) most certain that fishes are to be "found in the Ocean, that represent Terrestrial Animals in shape: 46 Asthe Sea-Fox, the Wolf, the Sea-Calf, the Dog, the Horse, &c. "Therefore why should we deny humane shape to Sea-mon-"fters? Certainly also in the earth there are Apes, which want-"ing reason, do express the external shape and gestures of Man.

" All Sea moulters of this fort we referr (he faith) to the kind of

"Phoce or Sea-Calves. There was (he faith) in the age we live "in a Sea Man taken by the Merchants of the West-India Compa"ny, and diffected at Leiden by Peter Pavim, John de Laet being "present my friend (he saith) and while he lived, a great and most

"knowing person of the things of America and of Nature. The "head and the breast even as far as the navil was of an humane

"shape, but from the navil even unto the extremities, it was de-

"formed flesh, without the figu of a tail. But that I may not (he

" faith) seem to impose upon the Reader, the hands and ribs are to "be found in my Study or Closet, which I owe to the kindness of "the praised Latius. We have (he faith) annexed the Picture of "both, as well of the Meirmaid erect, as of the image of it (wimming, "that we might satisfie the dubitation of all men. The hand doth "confift of five fingers, as ours do, with as many articulations as "ours, but that only is fingular, that all the bones of the fingers "are broader and compressed, and a membrane doth joyn them et together in course, as in volatiles, as Geese, Ducks, &c. which do "help to ftretch forth the foot in the water. The extremity of "the two middle fingers are broader, the extremities of the other "two sharp. The radius and cubit are very short, for the com-6' modiousness of swimming, scarce the length of four fingers breadth. "Neither is the draught of the shoulder more ample. The ribs " are long and thick, almost exceeding common humane ribs a third "Of the ribs (he faith) are beads turned or thrown, a present 6 remedy for the pain of the Hemorrhoides, which the praised Latius "hath observed by experience. Also (he saith) that Bracelets being " made of the bones of this kind of Phoese carried to Rome, applied "to the wrift do appeale the Hemicrany, and swimming of the head, "which comes again, if they be laid away, as (he faith) the most stillustrious Nobleman Cassianne à Puteo, (most worthy of Roman "Purple) hath told me. The same Noble Putene (he saith) hath "shewed me the picture of a Meirmaid in his Closet, which not "many years before, was driven to the shore of Malta. A certain "Spaniard (he faith) told me, that Meirmaids were seen in India "having the Genital members of Women, like those of humane "kind, so that the Fishers do bind themselves with an Oath to the "Magistrate, that they have no copulation with them. Bernardi-"nus Ginnarus (lib. 1. c. 9. de Indico itinere, edit. Neap. 1641.) "doth relate that Meirmaids are feen, in the vast River Cuama, "near the head of Good hope, which in the middle superior part are "like to the form of men, that is, with round head, but immediately "joyned to the breaft, without a neck, with ears altogether like "ours, and to their eyes, lips and teeth. And that their dugs be-"ing prefied do fend forth most white milk.

Therefore he concludeth: "There is (he faith) so great diffe-"rence of the form of Meirmaids, with the Ancients and Moderns, "that it is no wonder, that some do account them figments. We "have (he faith) the hands to be seen with eyes, and we shew the "Meirmaids to be such, as in truth they are seen to be. Neither do "the hands and ribs deceive, whose Pictures we have given framed "according to the truth of nature.

6. Also Ludovieus Vives doth tell us this story: "In our age (he Hift. 8. 8. To these we shall conclusively add one story of sufficient cre- Hift. 10. dit from our own English Annals, which is this: "In the year stores Annals. 1187, being the 33th year of the Reign of Henry the second, 1-19. "near unto Greford in Suffolk, certain Fisters of the Sea took in "their nets a fifth having the shape of a man in all points, which fifth was kept by Bartholomen de Glanvile, Cuftos of the Caffle of "Oreford, in the same Castle, by the space of six months and more " for a wonder; he spake not a word. All manner of meats he did "gladly eat, but most greedily raw fish after he had crushed out "all the moilture. Oftentimes he was brought to the Church where he shewed no tokens of adoration. At length when he was not well looked to, hestoleaway to the Sea, and never after "appeared. The learned Antiquary Mr. Camden tells this same mitan, i. 414: ftory from Radulphus Coggefhall, an ancient writer, and that "Ca-" pillos habebat, Barbam prolixam & pineatam, circa petins nimiam * pilosus erat, & hispidus : and concludeth : Quicquid nascatur " in parte natura ulla, & in mari esfe, & non omnind commentitium

By all which examples we may be rationally fatisfied, that though thele creatures have a real existence in nature, yet because of their strange natures, shapes and properties, or by reason of their being rarely seen, they have been and often are not only by the common people but even by the learned taken to be Devils, Spirits or the effects of Inchantment and Witchcraft. And therefore men that would judge aright must take heed that they be not deceived and imposed upon by relations of this nature, and also of all fuch things as may be acted by impostute and confederacy, and those other Physical things that are brought to pass by natural Lib. de South! causes, divers fortes of which are recited by Ludovieus Laudteris very prim. par largely, to which I recommend those that defire further fatisfaction direction in those particulars,

Of Apparitions in general, and of some unquestionable stories that feem to prove some such things. Of those apparitions pretended to be made in Beryls and Crystals, and of the Aftral or Sydereal Spirit.

IN this Treatise we have before sufficiently proved that the denying of the existence of such a Witch as doth make a visible contract with the Devil, or upon whose body he sucketh, or that hath carnal copulation with a Demon, and that is transubstantiated into a Cat or a Dog, or that flyeth in the air; doth not inferr the denial of Spirits either good or bad, nor utterly overthrow the truth of apparitions, or of such things as seem to manifest some supernatural operations. And therefore here we shall fully handle the question of Apparitions, and things that seem to be of that nature, and that in this order.

1. We shall not meddle with Apparitions in the large extent of the word, for so it may comprehend the appearing of new Stars, Comets, Meteors and other Portents, and Prodigies, which (though unusual and wonderous) have yet their production from natural causes. But only here we shall treat of such apparitions as are taken to be performed by supernatural creatures, or in such a way and by fuch creatures as we commonly account to be different from (if not above) the power of ordinary and visible nature, as of Angels good or bad, the Souls of men departed, or their Altral Spirits, or of some other creatures that are, or may be of a middle nature.

2. As for the apparitions of good Angels sent by God in times past, both in sleep and otherwise, the Scriptures do give us most full and ample assurance, as these few instances may undeniably demonstrate. 1. That an Angel of the Lord (that is a good Angel) did appear visibly unto Manoah and his wife, and did vocally and audibly talk and discourse with them both, and did after in both their lights openly and visibly a seend in the stame that did arise from the altar. Now a more plain and indubitable apparition vifibly feen and audibly heard than this cannot be found nor read of, having the unquestionable authority of sacred writ to avouch it. 2. Another parallel unto it, and of equal authority, verity and perspicuity, is the sending of the Angel Gabriel unto the Virgia Mary, her feeing of him, hearing of his falutation, having discourse with him, and seeing his departure, both which are undoubted testimonies of the true, and real appearance of good Angels even to fight and hearing. 3. That sometimes the good Angels have been fent to the servants of God, and have appeared and spoken unto them in dreams; as that the Angel of the Lord appeared unto Joseph in a dream, and bade him to take unto him Mary his wife, which Math. 1. 20. was a bleffed, and clear apparition, though in a dream in his fleep. And likewise by the appearing of an Angel unto him in a dream, he was warned to take the child, and his mother, and to flee into Math. 2. 12, Ægypt, and also again was commanded by an Angel, after the death 13, 19.

of Herod, that appeared in a dream, and bade him to take the young child and his mother, and to go into the land of Ifrael.

CHAP. XVI.

3. Of the visible apparition of evil Angels we scarce have any evidence at all in the Scriptures, except we should take supposals for proofs, or disputable places to be certain demonstrations, or wrest and hale the word of God to make it serve our preconceived opinions. For I do not find any one place in all the Scriptures, where plainly and politively any apparition of evil spirits is recorded, or that by any rational and necessary consequence such a visible appearance can be deduced or proved: For we have clearly proved that the tempting of Boah by the Serpent doth not necessarily inferr, that it was by a visible apparition, but by a mental delusion; and that that of saul and the Woman of Endor, or the Miltris of the bottle, was neither Samuel in Soul and Body, nor his Soul alone, neither the Devil in his shape we suppose we have evinced past answer; and that the tempting of our blessed Saviour by Satan was internal, or at least the greatest part of it; so that there doth remain but little of certain proof of the apparition of Devils in that groß manner, and so common and frequent as many do too peremptorily affirm: yet for all this we think it rational to grant, that as God hath in times past often sent messages by good Angels, for the teaching, counselling and comforting of his servants, both audibly and visibly to be perceived; so also that sometimes God might not only fend evil Spirits internally and mentally to deceive and seduce the wicked, as in the case of the lying spirit in the mouth of Ahabs Prophets, but also visibly to appear to terrifie, punish and destroy the wicked, or to make way for the manifestation of his glory. And the Scriptures that mention Demoniacks, and fuch as are commonly said to be possessed, (though that were not by an essential inhesion, but by an effective operation both upon the Souls and Bodies of the persons that were so affected and afflicted) do plainly shew that the operative effects of the Devils power was both heard and feen by their words and actions. So the Devils using the organs of the man in whom was the legion of them, they Luk 8. 26. 10 besought Christ not to command them to go out into the deep, but 37. besought him to suffer them to go into the herd of swine: Which "plainly sheweth that their words were audible, and were heard "of the multitude that were by, and the acts that they performed " were visible enough, for by the power of the Devil he brake the " chains and fetters, wherewithal he was bound, and was driven " of the Devil into the wilderness, and that these Devils went forth " of the man, and entered in amongst the herd of swine, by whose ef-" fective power the fwine ran violently down a steep rock into the

" fea, and were drowned. And this doth plainly manifest the prefent operation of the Devils, that was apparent both by the words and actions, that were both to be seen and heard; so that this in that large sense, that it is usually taken in, was a real apparition of Devils, or at least equivalent thereunto. For we do but here inquire after such appearances of Devils, that do necessarily infer their presence in operating so in and upon creatures or corporeal matter, that by fight, hearing, or other of the fenses, it may certainly be manifest to work above the ordinary power of nature. and may induce us rationally by the testimony of our senses, to believe that those things are brought to pass by those creatures that we call Demons, as many of these persons, who were said to have been or to be afflicted with Devils, were in the days of our bleffed

4. But though it be never so freely and fully granted, that in the ages and times mentioned in the Old and New Testament (nay it may be for a century or more after) there were persons that were pollefied and afflicted with Devils, and also that for that time there were many miracles wrought: Yet now it will be faid that miracles are totally cealed as not being any way necessary to confirm the Gospel, which is now established and settled. This we confess is so strongly and convincingly proved by the Divines of the reformed Churches, that we account him wilfully blind that will oppose it. Yet notwithstanding all this that miracles are totally ceased, I grant that there are some strange things that have happened in late ages, and some in our own time, that cannot be any way folved by meer ordinary natural causes, and apparitions made by some kind of creatures that must be derived from some such causes as those of good or bad Spirits, or from creatures of the like nature. And that though miracles be ceased, it will not therefore follow that every thing that hath a cause above or differing from the usual and ordinary course of nature, must be also ceased, for quanquam nunc non fint miracula, posint tamen effe miranda: and though that miracles be ceased, yet it will not follow that apparitions are so also, because apparitions are not miracles; for a good Angel to be sent and to appear, cannot be said to be a miracle, because it is the end for which he was created, they (that is the Angels) are all ministring spirits sent forth for the good of those that shall be heirs of Salvation. And it cannot be said otherwise of evil Angels or of any other creatures that may make these apparitions, for as they are and must be creatures, so there is and must be some certain ends, for which they were created and are imployed unto.

5. But to prove the truth of apparitions, or other strange Phenomena's equivalent unto them, as to have been truly performed as matters of fact is extream difficult and almost impossible, because the Histories and relations of things of this nature are most strangely fabulous, and therefore are by no means to be relied upon, as will most manifeltly

1. The Histories and relations that are given either by the Poets. or most of the ancient Philosophers, of these things, are so seemingly impossible, and so extreamly sictitious, as he must of necessity have in a manner totally forsaken his own reason, that can give any credit at all unto them. And especially they are so fraught with the horrible fables of the numerousness of their feigned gods. demigods, spirits, hobgoblins, Lares, Lemures, Mens shadows and the like, that they would make a man believe that the world was full of nothing elfe, and this was chiefly done to uphold their Idolatrous and superstitious Religion. And all these kind of authors that have written from the time of Homer until the end of the ages in which the two Plinies and Plutarch lived, have but run the same course, all their relations tasting of the leaven of impossibilities, superstition and fabulousness.

2. And if we look into the Pontificial Writers, especially those that have recorded stories of this nature since the fixth century, we shall find such a Rhapsodie, and heap of Bombast lies and invented fables both of apparitions and Witches, that no rational man can well give affent to one of a thousand of them, they seem so incredible, that they would rather make a wife man diffident of all such matters of fact, than to yield credit to any. And a man might as reasonably believe the forged and lying miracles of Mahomet, as those monkish fables. For the extream desire that those Authors had to advance their falle and feigned Doftrine of Purgatory, and thereby to uphold the gain and benefit that was gotten by injoining such and such penances and eleemosynary deeds to redeem Souls from thence, did drive them on to invent thousands of false stories of the apparitions of Souls after death, which had not

3. Those that are called the Reformed Divines (because they returned to that pure and true Doctrine and Worship, that had been settled and practised in those foregoing ages that were truly Catholick and Apostolick) being altogether intent about the main and principal points of the Faith, and those that concerned the true worthip of God, did take little heed to the matters of this nature, as being more circumstantial, and therefore not by them accounted so effential and necessary. From whence it came to pass that Lambertus Daneus, Hemmingins, Erastus and others, did without due examination and circumspection receive the opinions and stories of the Papilts hand over head. From whence (Iconceive) it came to pass that Ludovicus Lavaterus a learned Divine of the reformed Religion at Zurich did write a-book of apparitions and fuch matters, but brought no other proofs of the truth of these things de fatto, but the often repeated stories of Heathenish Authors, and some few from Ecclesiastick Authors, that are of dubious credit, but not any one of his own knowledge. 6. But

6. But if we come to consider the Histories of late that are reported of apparitions, and such like things that must of necessity have something in them, that resembles a supernatural cause, we may in part receive more ample fatisfaction, which will be manifest

1. Meric Casambon Doctor of Divinity, in his treatise of Credulity and Incredulity (fometimes by us quoted before) hath ftrongly indeavoured to make good all those impossible and absurd things that are ascribed unto Witches: which though he hath pitifully failed to perform, yet hath he faid enough that may ferve to prove that there are many strange things that seem to prove the being of Demons or Spirits, though he have not brought any one ftory of his own knowledge or that was done in his time. And we have shewed before that apparitions are no certain ground for Christians to believe the existence of Demons by, but the word of God. But in his Preface to that piece of the relation concerning Dr. Dee, he relateth two stories told by that venerable and learned Prelate Bishop Andrews to his Father Isaac Casanbon. "The one (he saith) concerning a noted or at least by many suspected Witch or Sor-"ceres, which the Devil in a strange shape did wait upon (or for "rather) at her death. The other concerning a Man, who after "his death was restored to life to make confession of a horrible "murther committed upon his own Wife, for which he had never "been suspected. And both these (he saith) that learned Bishop "didbelieve to be true, but for one of them it seems, he did un-"dertake upon his own knowledge, to wit that of the apparition, "and the other he had from an eye-witness. And considering the condition of Bilhop Andrews both for learning and piety, the relations are of much weight, and they may be seen at large in the forecited Preface.

2. I cannot but much wonder that Dr. Henry Moore, a grave perfon, and one that for many years hath refided in a most learned and flourishing Academy, whose name is much taken notice of both at home and abroad, having published so many books, should make such bad choice of the Authors from whom he takes his stories, or that he should pitch upon those that seem so fabulous, impossible Author.against and incredible. And that I may not seem to tax him without cause, Athilf. c. 8, 9. I defire the Reader to peruse his two relations, the one of the Shoomaker of Breslaw in Silesia, Anno 1591. the other of Johannes Cuntim a Citizen of Pentsh in Silefia, and to tell whether he can rationally believe those things either to have been true or possible. And as for the Author Martinus Weinrichius a Silesian Physician, I cannot find any thing either of his fame or writings, and it is most strange that he should be omitted by that diligent and unpartial Author Melchior Adams; And there had been far better Authors and of more credit to have pitcht upon for such like flories, than either Bodinus or Remigius; neither can there be much credit given to any of the stories that he relates, except it be that of the Pied-Piper, which some do interpret far otherwise. 3. "There was a Treatise called, the Devil of Mascon, or a true "relation of the chief things which an unclean spirit did and said at "Mascon in Burgundy, in the House of M' Francis Perreand Mini-"ster of the reformed Church in the same Town, written by the "faid Perreand foon after the Apparition which was in the year "1612. but was not publified until the year 1653. which was 41. "years after the thing was faid to be acted. It feems it was tran-"flated by Dr Peter Du Moulin, the Son of the learned and reve-" rend Peter Du Moulin, at the request of the honourable and learn-"ed person M. Boyle. The most of the things had been known unto "M' Du Moulin the Father, when he was President of a National "Synod in those parts, to whom also the said Perreand was well "known, who was a religious, well poiled, venerable Divine. And "M' Boyle faith, that he had had converse with this pious Author "at Geneva, and had inquired after the Writer, and some passages "of the Book, which overcame all his fetled indisposedness to be-"lieve strange things. The Character given of this Author, and "the affent of fuch learned persons to the things related, have gain-"ed an ample suffrage to give credit to them also. But notwithstand-"ing all this, there are many passages in the relation that a quick-"fighted Critick would find to be either contradictory or incon-"filtent, and it cannot rationally be thought that he was a Cacodemon, his actions were so harmless, civil, and ludicrous; and if "he were to be believed (and in some things he did speak truth, "and the Minister himself Mr Perreand did in some things give cre-"dit to him) he was no Devil, but hoped to be saved by Jesus "Christ. But whether a Devil or not, yet the story for substance "doth sufficiently prove the existence of such kind of Demons, 66 that can work strange and odd feats. 4. M' Baxter a person of great learning and piety, whose judg. The Salati Everment bears great sway with me, speaking of Apparitions saith thus: 2,255: "I know many are very incredulous herein, and will hardly be-"lieve that there have been such Apparitions. For my own " part (he faith) though I am as suspicious as most in such reports, "and do believe that most of them are conceits or delusions, yet "having been very diligently inquisitive in such Cases, I have re-"ceived undoubted teltimony of the truth of such Apparitions, " fome from the mouths of men of undoubted honesty and godli-"ness, and some from the report of multitudes of persons, who "heard or faw. Were it fit here to name the persons, I could send "you to them yet living, by whom you would be as fully fatisfied "as I : Houses that have been so frequently haunted with such "terrors, that the inhabitants successively have been witnesses

7. Though some of these last recited testimonies might sufficiently convince the most obstinate and incredulous, that there are Appacitions and some other such strange accidents that cannot be solved by the supposed principles of matter and motion, but that do neceffarily require some other causes, that are above or different from the visible and ordinary course of nature; yet because it is a point dark and mystical, and of great concern and weight, we shall add some unquestionable testimonies, either from our own Annals, or matters of fact that we know to be true of our own certain knowledge, that thereby it may undoubtedly appear, that there are effects that exceed the ordinary power of natural causes, and may for ever convince all Atheistical minds, of which in this order.

Observ.

1. "In the first year of Edward the Sixth, Anno Domini 1581. " on St. Valentines day, at Feversham in Kent, one Arden a Gentle-"man was murthered by procurement of his own Wife; for the " which fact the was the fourteenth of March burnt at Canterbury : " Michael Mr Arden's Man was hang'd in Chains at Feversham, and c'a Maiden burnt: Mosbie and his Sister were hanged in Smithfield "at London : Greene which had fled, came again certain years after. " and was hanged in Chains in the High-way against Feversham, and "black Will the Ruffian , that was hired to do that act, after his "first escape was apprehended, and burnt on a Scaffold at Flushing "in Zealand.

The same horrid murther is more at large related by Holling shead. who lived at that time, and had information of all the particulars, who faith thus much more. "This one thing (he faith) feemeth very "Arange and notable touching M' Arden, that in the place he was "laid, being dead, all the proportion of his body might be feen two ceyears after and more, so plain as could be, for the grass did not "grow where his body had touched, but between his legs, between "his arms and about the hollowness of his neck, and round about "his body: And where his legs, arms, head, or any part of his bo-"dy had touched, no graß growed at all of all that time. So that "many strangers came in that mean time, beside the Townsmen, to "fee the print of his body there on the ground in that Field, which "Field he had (as some have reported) cruelly taken from a Wo-"man, that had been a Widdow to one Cooke, and after Married to "one Richard Read a Marriner, to the great hinderance of her and "her Husband the faid Read, for they had long enjoyed it by a "Lease which they had of it for many years not then expired. Ne-"vertheless he got it from them, for the which, the said Reads "Wife not only exclaimed against him in shedding many a falt tear, "but also cursed him most bitterly even to his face, wishing ma-"ny a vengeance to light upon him, and that all the World might "wonder on him, which was thought then to come to pass, when he was thus murthered and lay in that Field, from midnight till "the morning, and so all that day, being the Fair-day, till night, all "the which day there were many hundreds of people came won-"dring about him. From whence we may take this Observation.

As it is most certain that this is a true and punctual relation given us by Holling shead, as being a publick thing done in the face of a Nation, the print of his body remaining so long after, and viewed and wondered at by so many; so that it hath not left the least starting hole for the most incredulous Atheist to get out at. So likewise it may dare the most deep-sighted Naturalist, or unbelieving Atheist, that would exalt and so far deifie Nature, as to deny and take away the existence of the God of Nature, to shew a reason of the long remaining of the print of his body, or the not growing of the grass in those places where his body had touched for two years and more after? Could it be the steams or Atoms that flowed from his body? then are why not such prints left by other murthered bodies? which we are fure by fight and experience not to be fo. And therefore we can attribute it justly to no other cause but only to the power of God and divine vengeance, who is a righter of the oppressed, fatherless and Widdows, and hears their cries and regardeth their

But we shall give it more at large as it was taken from the mouths of Thomas Haworths Wife, her Husband being the dreamer and discoverer, and from his Sou, who together with many more, who both remember and can affirm every particular thereof, the Narrative was taken April the 17th 1663. and is this.

CHAP. XVI.

"In the year abovesaid, John Waters of Lower Darmen in the "County of Lancaster Gardiner, by reason of his calling was much " absent from his Family: In which his absence, his Wife (not with-"out cause) was suspected of incontinency with one Gyles Haworth " of the same Town; this Gyles Haworth and Waters Wife conspired "and contrived the death of Waters in this manner. They con-"tracted with one Ribchester a poor man to kill this Waters. As soon "as Waters came home and went to bed, Gyles Haworth and Waters " Wite conducted the hired Executioner to the faid Waters. Who "feeing him so innocently laid betwixt his two small Children in "Bed, repented of his enterprize, and totally refused to kill him. "Gyles Haworth displeased with the faint-heartedness of Ribchefter, "takes the Axe into his own hand, and dashed out his brains: The " Murderers buried him in a Cow house, Waters being long milling the Neighbourhood asked his Wife for him; she denied that the

"knew where he was. Thereupon publick fearch was made for him "in all pits round about, left he should have casually fallen into any " of them. One Thomas Haworth of the said Town Yeoman, was " for many nights together, much troubled with broken fleeps and "dreams of the murder; he revealed his dreams to his Wife, but the "laboured the concealment of them a long time: This Thomas " Haworth had occasion to pass by the House every day where the "murder was done, and did call and inquire for Waters, as often "as he went near the House. One day he went into the House to "ask for him, and there was a Neighbour who faid to Thomas Ha-"worth, It's faid that Waters lies under this stone, (pointing to the "Hearth-stone) to which Thomas Hamorth replied, And I have "dreamed that he is under a stone not far distant. The Constable "of the faid Town being accidentally in the faid House (his name " Myles Aspinall) urged Thomas Haworth to make known more at "large what he had dreamed, which he relateth thus. I have (quoth "he) many a time within this eight weeks (for folong it was fince "the murder) dreamed very restlesly, that Waters was murdered "and buried under a broad stone in the Cow-house; I have told my "troubled dreams to my Wife alone, but the refules to let me make "it known: But I am not able to conceal my dreams any longer, my "sleep departs from me, I am pressed and troubled with fearful "dreams which I cannot bear any longer, and they increase upon "me. The Constable hearing this made search immediately upon it. "and found as he had dreamed the murdered body eight weeks bu-"ried under a flat stone in the Cow-house; Ribchester and Gyles Ha-"morth fled and never came again. Anne Waters (tor fo was Waters "Wifes name) being apprehended, confessed the murder, and was "burned. From whence we may observe this.

1. That this is the full and punctual relation of this bloody and execrable murder from Haworths Wife (who then was a very old Woman) and the Son, and differs not a jot from what Sir Richard Baker writes, but only they say his brains were dashed out with an Axe, and he faith he was strangled, which is only a circumstance of the manner, but in the matter they both agree, that it was a certain truth that Waters was murdered, and Sir Richard Bakers information might fail in that particular of the manner of it. And if it be thought strange that the two little Children did know nothing of it, it is certain that they were much too young, and faid that they were twins, not above half a year old. But the only matter that we have brought it for, is the extraordinary way of its discovery by Thomas Haworths dreaming, in which point both the relations closely agree, and was the chief and only reason why Sir Richard Baker put it in his Chronicle. And the same also more at large stone hath recorded in his Chronicle. Now what should the cause be that Thomas Haworth should be hindred of his sleep, and have restless dreams, and that his dream should hit so punctually of the place where he was buried, more than any other person in the same Town? Certainly certainly it cannot be referred to fortune and chance, for they have no causality at all, and are but only names that we impose upon certain effects and accidents: Te facimus fortuna Deum, cwlog; locamus, as said the Poet. Neither can it rationally be thought to be melancholy, because that though it be a subtil humour, and render those that are affected therewith very imaginative and thoughtful, yet supposing Thomas Haworth to be of that temperament and disposition, it might make him more deeply to think and meditate upon the rumour of Waters being awanting or upon suspicion of his murder, but could not in dreams inform him to know precisely the place where he was buried. And if some should imagine it to be the Soul of the murthered person Waters, as doubtless a Papift would be ready to affirm, yet is that opinion directly contrary to the Scriptures, and sufficiently confuted by the reformed Di. vines. And if it should be referred to the operation of the Astral or Sydereal spirit, that is an opinion but imbraced by few, and is hard to prove to be a certain verity, of which we shall speak largely anon. Neither can it by any found reason be thought to be the Devil, because it is manifest that God doth not use the ministry of evil Angels for any good end, as for the discovery of murther, and the bringing of the guilty persons to condign punishment; but on the contrary he useth their service for to tempt, seduce, deceive, punish and torment. Therefore we conceive that it was brought to pass by the finger of God, who either immediately by himself, or by the ministry of a good Angel, did represent those dreams to Thomas Haworth, and revealed the precise place of Waters burial.

3. "About the year of our Lord 1623 or 24 one Fletcher of Hift. 4. "Rascal, a Town in the North Riding of Torkshire near unto the "Forest of Gantress, a Yeoman of good Estate, did marry a young "lufty Woman from Thornton Brigs, who had been formerly kind "with one Ralph Raynard, who kept an Inn within half a mile from 6' Rascall in the high road way betwixt Tork and Thuske, his Sister "living with him. This Raynard continued in unlawful lust with "the faid Fletchers Wife, who not content therewith conspired the "death of Fletcher, one Mark Dunn being made privy and hired "to affift in the murther. Which Raynard and Dunn accomplish-"ed upon the May-day by drowning Fletcher, as they came all "three together from a Town called Huby, and acquainting the "wife with the deed the gave them a Sack therein to convey his "body, which they did and buried it in Raynards backfide or Croft "where an old Oak-root had been stubbed up, and sowed Mustard-"feed upon the place thereby to hide it. So they continued their "wicked course of lust and drunkenness, and the neighbours did much "wonder at Fletchers absence, but his wife did excuse it, and said "that he was but gone alide for fear of some Writs being served "upon him. And so it continued until about the seventh day of "July, when Raynard going to Topcliffe Fair, and fetting up his "Horse in the Stable, the spirit of Fletcher in his usual shape and

"habit did appear unto him, and said, Oh Raph, repent, repent, " for my revenge is at hand; and ever after until he was put in the 16 Goal, it seemed to stand before him, whereby he became sad and "restles: And his own Sister over hearing his confession and relati-"on of it to another person, did through fear of losing her own "life, immediately revealit to Sir William Sheffield, who lived in "Rascall, and was a Justice of Peace. Whereupon they were all "three apprehended and fent to the Gaol at Tork, where they "were all three condemned, and so executed accordingly near to "the place where Raynard lived, and where Fletcher was buried." "the two men being hung up in irons, and the woman buried un-"der the Gallows. I have recited this story punctually as a thing that hath been very much fixed in my memory, being then but young, and as a certain truth, I being (with many more) an earwitness of their confessions and an eye-witness of their Executions, and likewise saw Fletcher when he was taken up, where they had buried him in his cloaths, which were a green fustian doublet pinkt upon white, gray breeches, and his walking boots and brafs fourrs without rowels.

Observ.

Some will say there was no extrinsick apparition to Raynard at all, but that all this did only arise from the guilt of his own conscience, which represented the shape of Fletcher in his fancy. But then why was it precisely done at that time, and not at any others? it being far from the place of the murder, or the place where they had buried Fletcher, and nothing there that might bring it to his remembrance more than at another time, and if it had only arisen from within, and appeared so in his fancy, it had been more likely to have been moved, when he was in, or near his backfide where the murthered body of Fletcher lay. But certain it is that he affirmed that it was the shape and voice of Fletcher, as assuredly to his eyes and ears, as ever he had seen or heard him in his life. And if it were granted that it was only intrinsick, yet that will not exclude the Divine Power, which doubtless at that time did labour to make him sensible of the cruel murther, and to mind him of the revenge approaching. And it could not be brought to pass either by the Devil, or Fletchers Soul, as we have proved before; and therefore in reason we conclude that either it was wrought by the Divine Power, to shew his detestation of murther, or that it was the Astral or Sydereal Spirit of Fletcher, seeking revenge for the murther, of

4. About the year of our Lord 1632. (as near as I can remember having lost my notes, and the copy of the Letter to Serjeant Hatton, but am sure that I do most perfectly remember the substance of the story) near unto Chesser in the street, there lived "one Walker a Yeoman man of good Estate, and a Widower, who had a young Woman to his Kinswoman that kept his House, who was by the Neighbours suspected to be with child, and was to-wards the dark of the evening one night sent away with one

"Mark Sharp who was a Collier, or one that digged coals under "ground, and one that had been born in Blakeburn Hundred in "Lancashire, and so the was not heard of a long time, and no noise, "or little was made about it. In the winter time after one James "Graham or Grime (for so in that Country they call them) being "a Miller, and living about two miles from the place where Walker "lived, was one night alone very late in the Mill grinding Corn, "and as about twelve or one a clock at night he came down the "frairs from having been putting Corn in the Hopper, the Mill "doors being thut, there flood a Woman upon the midft of the "floor with her hair about her head, hanging down, and all bloody; "with five large wounds in her head: He being much affrighted "and amazed, begun to bles him, and at last asked her who she " was, and what the wanted; to which the faid, I am the Spirit of "fuch a Woman, who lived with Walker, and being got with "child by him; he promised me to send me to a private place, where "I should be well looks to until I was brought in bed, and well "again, and then I should come again, and keep his house. And "accordingly (faid the apparition) I was one night late fent away "with one Mark sharp, who upon a Moor (naming a place that "the Miller knew) flew me with a pick (fuch as men dig coals "withal) and gave me these five wounds, and after threw my bo-"dy into a coal-pit hard by, and hid the pick under a bank, and his "Thoos and stockings being bloody he endeavoured to wash, but "feeing the blood would not wash forth he hid them there. And " the apparition further told the Miller that he must be the Man to "revealit, or ele that the must still appear, and haunt him. The "Miller returned home very fad and heavy, but spoke not one "word of what he had feen, but eschewed as much as he could to " ftay in the Mill within night without company, thinking there-"by to escape the seeing again of that frightful apparition. But "notwithstanding one night when it begun to be dark, the appa-"rition met him again, and feemed very fierce and cruel, and threat-"ned him that if he did not reveal the murder the would continu-"ally purfue and haunt him. Yet for all this he still concealed it, "until S. Thomas Eve before Christmas, when being foon after Sun-"fet walking in his Garden the appeared again, and then fo threat-"ned and affrighted him that he faithfully promifed to reveal it "next morning. In the morning he went to a Magistrate and made "the whole matter known with all the circumstances, and diligent "fearch being made, the body was found in a coal pit, with five "wounds in the head, and the pick and shooes and stockings yet "bloody, in every circumstance as the apparition had related un-"to the Miller. Whereupon Walker and Mark Sharp were both "apprehended, but would confess nothing. At the Affizes follow-"ing (I think it was at Durham) they were arraigned, found guil-"ty, condemned and executed, but I could never hear that they "confessed the fact. "(who was alive in Chefter in the street about ten years a.go, as I "have been credibly informed) but of that I know no certainty. There are many persons yet alive that can remember this strange murder, and the discovery of it, for it was, and sometimes yet is as much discoursed of in the North Countrey as any thing that almost hath ever been heard of, and the relation printed, though now not to begotten. I relate this with the greater confidence (though I may fail in some of the circumstances) because I saw and read the Letter that was sent to Serjeant Hutton, who then lived at Goldsbrugh in Torkshire, from the Judge before whom Walker and Mark Sharp were tried, and by whom they were condemned, and had a Copy of it until about the year 1658. when I had it and many other books and papers taken from me. And this I confess to be one of the most convincing stories (being of undoubted verity) that ever I read, heard or knew of, and carrieth with it the most evident force to make the most incredulous spirit, to be satisfied that there are really sometimes such things as apparitions. And though it be not easy to assign the true and proper cause of such a strange effect, yet must we not measure all things to be, or not to be, to be true or falle, according to the extent of our understandings, for if there be many of the magnalia nature that yet lie hidden from the wifest of men, then much more Rom. 11. 33. may the magnalia Dei be unknown unto us, whose judgments are un fearchable, and his wayes past finding out. And as in the rest we cannot ascribe this strange apparition, to any diabolical operation, nor to the Soul of the Woman murthered, so we must conclude that either it was meerly wrought by the Divine Power, or by the Aftral spirit of the murthered Woman, which last doth seem most rational, as we shall shew hereafter.

5. To these (though it be not altogether of the same nature) we shall add one both for the oddness and strangeness of it, as also because it happened in my time, and I was both an eye and earwitness of the trial of the person accused. And first take a hint of it from the pen of Durant Hotham, in his learned Epistle to the Myferium magnum of Jacob Behemen upon Genesis in these words: "There was (he saith) as I have heard the story credibly reported "in this Country a Man apprehended for suspicion of Witchcraft, "he was of that fort we call white Witches, which are such as do "cures beyond the ordinary reasons and deductions of our usual "practitioners, and are supposed (and most part of them truly) "to do the same by the ministration of spirits (from whence under "their noble favours, most Sciences at first grew) and therefore "are by good reason provided against by our Civil Laws, as being " ways full of danger and deceit, and scarce ever otherwise ob-"tained than by a devillish compact of the exchange of ones Soul "to that affiltant spirit, for the honour of its Mountebankery. "What this man did was with a white powder which, he said, he "received

"received from the Fairies, and that going to a Hill he knocked three times, and the Hill opened, and he had access to, and con-"verse with a visible people; and offered, that if any Gentleman " present would either go himself in person, or send his servant, he "would conduct them thither, and fliew them the place and persons "from whom he had his skill.

CHAP. XVI.

To this I shall only add thus much, that the man was accused for pid. i Theob. invoking and calling upon evil spirits, and was a very simple and 6.12. illiterate person to any mans judgment, and had been formerly very poor, but had gotten some pretty little meanes to maintain himself, his Wife and diverse small children, by his cures done with this white powder, of which there were sufficient proofs. and the Judge asking him how he came by the powder, he told a story to this effect. "That one night before day was gone, as he " was going home from his labour, being very fad and full of hea-"vy thoughts, not knowing how to get meat and drink for his "Wife and Children, he met a fair Woman in fine cloaths, who "asked him why he was fo fad, and he told her that it was by rea-"fon of his poverty, to which the faid, that if he would follow "her counsel she would help him to that which would serve to "get him a good living; to which he faid he would confent with "all his heart, fo it were not by unlawful ways: the told him that it should not be by any such ways, but by doing of good and cu-"ring of fick people; and so warning him strictly to meet her there et the next night at the same time, the departed from him, and he "went home. And the next night at the time appointed he duly waited, and she (according to promise) came and told him that it was well that he came so duly, otherwise he had missed of that "benefit, that the intended to do unto him, and so bade him fol-"low her and not be afraid. Thereupon the led him to a little Hill 4" and the knocked three times, and the Hill opened, and they went "in, and came to a fair hall, wherein was a Queen litting in great "state, and many people about her, and the Gentlewoman that "brought him, presented him to the Queen, and she said he was "welcom, and bid the Gentlewoman give him some of the white "powder, and teach him how to use it, which she did, and gave "him a little wood box full of the white powder, and bad him egive 2 or 3 grains of it to any that were fick, and it would heal "them, and to the brought him forth of the Hill, and to they patted. "And being asked by the Judge whether the place within the Hill, "which he called a Hall, were light or dark, he said indiffe-"rent, as it is with us in the twilight; and being asked how he got "more powder, he laid when he wanted he went to that Hill, and "knocked three times, and faid every time I am coming, I am "coming, whereupon it opened, and he going in was conducted "by the aforesaid Woman to the Queen, and so had more powder "given him. This was the plain and simple story (however it may "be judged of) that he told before the judge, the whole Court

"and the Jury, and there being no proof, but what cures he had "done to very many, the Jury did acquit him: and I remember the "Judge faid, when all the evidence was heard, that if he were to "aflign his punishment, he should be whipped from thence to Fairv-"hall, and did seem to judge it to be a delusion or an Imposture. From whence we may take these observations.

1. Though Mr. Hotham seem to judge that this person accused had the white powder from some Spirit, and that one also of the evil fort, and upon a contract, by the ingaging of his Soul, we have before sufficiently proved the nullity of a visible and corporeal contract with the Devil; neither was it yet ever proved that the Devil did any good either real or apparent, but is the sworn enemy of all mankind, both in their Souls and in their Bodies, but this powder wrought that which was really good, namely the curing of diseales, and therefore rationally cannot be thought to be given from an evil spirit.

2. Some there were that thought that the simple man told a plain and true story, and that he had the powder from those people we call Fairies, and there are many that do believe and affirm that there are such people, of whom Paracel fus hath a Treatise of purpose, holding that they are not of the feed of Adam, and therefore he calls them non-Adamicks, and that they have flesh and bones, and so differ from spirits, and yet that they can glide through walls and rocks (which he calleth their Chaos) as easily as we through the air, and that they get children, and are mortal like those that Hieronynus Cardanus relateth that appeared to his Father Facius Cardanus, and these he calleth Pygmæi, Silvestres, Gnomi and Umbratiles ; but his proof of their existence to me doth not seem satisfactory, what others may think of it I leave to their demonstrations. if they have any.

3. Some there were (and those not of the meer ignorant fort) that did judge, that though the Man was simple, yet that the story that he told was but framed and taught him, the better to conceal the person from whom he received the white powder. For they thought that some notable Chymist, or rather an Adeptist, had in charity bestowed that powder upon him, for the relief of himself and family, as we know it hath often happened to other persons, at other times and places. And this last opinion seems most consonant to reason, and I the rather believe it because not many years after, it was certainly known, that there was an Adeptift in that Countrey, and we ought not to fetch in supernatural causes to solve effects, when natural causes may serve the turn.

6. The last thing of this strange nature, that we shall instance in, is concerning the bleeding or cruentation of the bodies of those that have been murthered, I mean of such as have been murthered by prepense malice, and upon premeditated purpose; for the bodies of others that are killed by chance-medley, and by man-flaughter, we do not read nor find any examples, that ever their bodies did bleed. And though we have not been ocular witness of any fuch bleeding, yet are there records of fuch accidents given us by many learned and credible authors, that a man might almost be accounted an Infidel not to give credit to them, and that both of those that have bled, when the murtherer hath not been present, and also of those that have bled the murtherer being present. And first of those bodies that have issued blood, when the murtherer was not by.

CHAP. XVI.

Gregorius Horstins a Physician of great experience and learning, Hist. 6. and of no less integrity, recordeth this story, thus Englished. "In "the year of our Lord 1604. the twenty fixth day of December, a dopind de "young Nobleman of wenty five years old, was shot at with a crumicada-"Gun in the night time about nine a clock. from an high window "of an house, in the Town of Blindmarck in lower Auftria, and the " bullet entring his left breaft, went forth at his right fide. and fo "forthwith died in the place. The dead body being viewed again, and the wound confidered, the same quantity or bigness both of the entrance and out going are found with great plenty of blood "iffuing. The following day being the twenty feventh of Decemi-"ber in the morning, the body of the murthered young man hath other cloaths put upon it and so is kept quiet for the space of "two days. Furthermore upon the thirtieth of December he is laid "upon the Bier, and kept in the Church, and that without any "further motion, where nevertheless from the upper wound the freihblood did daily flow, until the eighth of January 1605. from " which time the Hemorrhage ceased. But again the thirteenth of "February, about noon, the flux of blood by the lower wound for "an hour or two was observed to issue, as though the slaughter had " been newly done. In the mean time the habit of the whole body " was such, as did most easily agree to what it was living, the co-"lour of his face remained even unto his burial ruddy and florid, "the vein appearing in his forehead filled with good blood: no "fign of an incipient putrefaction appearing for fo many weeks, no "flink, or ungrateful odour, which otherwise doth accompany "dead bodies within a few days, was here found at all: The fin-"gers of the hands remained foft, moveable, or flexible, without "any wast, the natural colour being not very much changed, ex-"cept that in process of time, about the last week before burial, "they begun in a certain manuer to wax livid in the extremities,

This following he giveth to prove, that as cold constringeth Hist. 7. and shuteth up the veins, so heat doth open them, and cause the blood to flow, and faith: "This is proved a few years flace by ex-"perience in an infant slain by a most wicked Mother forthwith af-"ter it was born, and thrown from the Tower of a Noble Baron of hid. p. 194" "upper Austria into a ditch that was full with water ; which after "five weeks by good fortune was found and taken out. 8. Next we shall give some examples of those that have bled when the murtherers have been brought into the presence of the body murthered or caused to touch it, and this Franciscus Valeriola doth attest with an ample faith that he himself saw : "When (he saith) " James of Aqueria, a Senator of Arles, was found dead of a wound. "& that he that gave that wound was apprehended by the Magistrate, " and brought into the view of the dead body, that he might acknow-"ledge the person murthered and confess the fact, by and by the bub-"ling blood, all the by standers looking on, begun to come forth. with much fervour and bubbles, from the wound and the nostrils.

9. Take this other as it is cited by Gothofredus Voigtius, in this manner: "In the year 1607 the 25 of April a certain Shepherd in sith Lanticit " Spain being feeding his flock was flain by two Noblemen, and his "body thrown into a company of bulhes. The Judges of the same "place, having much and daily fought the Shepherd, after four "days at length find his body in the bushes. But because that mur-"der was committed, no witnesses being by, the suspicion sell upon "the two Noblemen, inhabiting in the nearest place, who being ta-"ken were haled to the body of the person murthered. But what "comes to pass? The first scarce with his eyes had looked upon the "dead body, but behold, the blood in plenty begun to flow from "thence. But the other coming near, the very right hand of the "person murthered did first of all shew to those that were by the "wound, and afterward the murderer himself. Which being done, "forthwith the two Gentlemen (or Nobles) did of their own accord "confess that they were the Authors of the murther, and did re-" ceive the punishment that was worthy of their deeds.

10. Another very remarkable one we have from the same Author cited from Cantipratanue lib. 2. mirac. c. 29. in this manner. "It "happened (the Author faith) in the year of Christ 1271. in the "Town Plottabeim, that acertain most wicked old Woman fa-"miliar with the Jews, did sell them a girl of seven years old, and " without parents, to be flain. Her therefore in secret her mouth "being stopt, setting her upon linnen cloaths, they wound almost "in all the junctures of the members with incisions, and with great "endeavour press forth the blood, and receive it most diligently in "the linnen cloaths. But she being dead after great pains, the "Jews throw her body into a running water near the Town, and "laid an heap of Stones upon it. But after the third or fourth day "her body is found by Fishers, by means of her hand stretched forth "towards Heaven, and carried into the Town, the people with a-"bomination crying forth that so great a wickedness was perpetra-"ted by the Jews. And the Marquis of Baden being near, went "unto the Corps, and straightway the body standing upright did 6 (tretch

"fretch forth its hands unto the Prince, as though it would im-"plore the revengment of blood, or perhaps mercy. But after half "an hour it disposed it selfupon its back, after the manner of those "that are dead. Therefore the wicked Jews being brought to the "spectacle, forthwith all the wounds of the body burst forth, "and intestimony of the horrid murder, poured forth great plen-"ty of blood, whereupon the Jews were put to death.

14. The last story that we shall relate of this nature, is from a Hist. 131 Minister that is learned, fincere and of great veracity, who had it from those that were eye witnesses, and is this: "In the year of our "Lord God, 1661. January 30th on Saturday at night about nine of "the Clock, did John How of Bruzlington Bank, at the foot of "anHill(which is about two miles diltant from Bifhop Ankland) mur-"ther Ralph Gamkley, who was a Glover in Bishop Amkland: This "How was the next day apprehended and brought to touch Gank "leys Corps, the lips and nostrils of the dead body wrought and "opened as he touched (which made him afraid to touch the fe-"cond time) then presently the Corps bled abundantly at the no-"Rrils in the fight of Mr. Robert Harrison the Coroner (now Te-"nant at Bishop-Awkland to Mr. Franckland, from whom I had the "relation) of Anthony Cummin and his Brother, &c. of the Jury, "and of a great many towns people, who were then present. So . How was Executed the next Asizes after at Durbam: Wit-"nesses against him were Anne Wall, whom he also wounded, yet sifte escaped with her life, and How's own Wife, at the motion "of her own Father (avery honest Man) who bid her tell the truth. "and the should never want help.

Some may think that I have been too large and tedious in heaping to many stories concerning the bleeding of the bodies of those that have been murthered, but I did it for this reason, because there are many that think it but to be a Fable of the credulous vulgar, and others think that it is but an ordinary matter that happens to any bodies that are dead, and no extraordinary or supernatural thing in it at all. But who loever shall but use so much patience, as serioully to read and confider these select Histories that we have recited. may easily be satisfied, both that such bleeding is absolutely true de facto, and also that there is something more than ordinary in it, and

1. It will not be found to hold touch upon diligent observation Observ. 1. and firit inquiry, that all dead bodies do bleed fresh and rose blood, especially after the third or fourth day, or after some weeks, as divers of the inflances above given do manifeltly prove; and therefore is an accident incident to some dead bodies and no : to all. And it will as far fail, that wounded bodies, that have been flain in the wars, after the natural heat be gone, will upon motion bleed any fresh or crimson blood at all; for we our selves in the late times of Rebellion have seen some thousands of dead bodies, that have had divers wounds, and lying naked and being turned over and over, and by ten or twelve thrown into one pit, and yet not one of them have issued any fresh and pure blood: Only from some of their wounds, some sanious matter would have flowed, putrefaction beginning by reason of the moisture and acidity in the air, but no pure blood, and therefore is not a common accident to all humane bodies that die naturally or violently, but only is peculiar to some, and especially to those that are murthered by prepensed malice, as ap-

2. We shall acknowledge with Gregorius Horstius, Sperlingius and Gothofredus Voigtius, that sometimes the bodies of those that have been murthered do bleed, when the murtherer is not present, as is manifelt from the fixth Hiltory recited from Horstins of the young Man of twenty five years old, that bled so long and so often, though the murtherer was not prefent; from whence they conclude that the presence of the murtherer, is not a necessary cause of the bleeding of the mutthered body; and therefore that the bleeding of the body is not always a certain and infallible fign of discovering the murtherer? To which we reply, that the issuing of fresh and crimfon blood from the wound or the nostrils of the persons

Corps that doth so bleed was murthered, because those that die naturally or violently by chance, man-flaughter or in the war, do not bleed, as hath been proved before. Again, if the murtherer be certainly known, or have confessed the crime, in regard of the final cause which is discovery, there is no reason why the Corps should bleed: And though the presence of the murtherer may not be the efficient cause why the Corps doth bleed, yet is it the occasional, as is manifest undeniably by sundry of the Histories that we have related, where the murtherers had not been certainly known but by

fufficiently confuted those that ascribed this effect of the bleeding of the dead body to Sympathy or Antipathy, or to the moving of the bodies, or heat in the air, have assigned the cause to be the beginning of putrefaction in the bodies murthered, by which a new motion is caused in the humors, and so in the blood, by which means it floweth afresh: against this these two reasons oppose themselves. 1. Must putrefaction needs begin at that very moment, when the murtherer toucheth the body? For in divers of them there was no bleeding until the murtherers were present or did touch the bodies, and their touching could not cause the beginning of putrefaction, and soon after their removing the bleeding hath ceased, so that putrescence in fieri cannot be the cause of the fresh bleeding. 2. Putrefaction beginning could not be the cause why the murthered Shepherds body in the ninth History should with its hands point to the wound, and to the murtherers, nor that the hands of the Wench murthered by the Jews, in the tenth History, should be stretched forth to the Prince of Baden, or that the Lips and Nostrils of the Body of Gamkley should work and open at the touch of the murtherer How; this must of necessity proceed from some higher cause than putrefaction, or any other they have laid

4. But though it should be acknowledged, that in some of these Observ. 4. bleedings there were fomething that were extraordinary or supernatural, yetas learned Horstins tells us: "It is (he faith) an incon. Appud. decra. "venient Tenent of those that hold, that the Souls of those that Cadav. P. 154-"are murthered, wandering about the Bodies, by reason of the ha-" tred they bear towards those that were their murtherers, do cause "these bleedings: but this in Philosophy cannot stand, because "the separate form can by no means operate upon the subject any "longer. And (he faith) the famething in Theologie feems to be " very impious; because the Souls of the dead are without mun-"dane conversation, as is sufficiently manifest from the History of "the Rich Man and Lazarus, Luke 16. "5. And if some should refer these effects immediately unto God, observ. 9. "as many learned Authors have done; as though God by this "means would fometimes make known those that are guilty : or to "refer this unto the Devil, as though he would fometimes elude

"the Judges, and to do this that so the innocent might be punifi-"ed with the wicked; We answer (he saith) to this briefly, by add-"ing this only, that a supernatural cause is not rashly to be seigned "where a natural one is ready at hand. And if there be fuch ex-"amples, which cannot be reduced to these aforesaid natural cau-" fes. of which fort many are related by Libanius part 2. fol. 172. "then we can by no reason be repugnant, but that they are preter-"naturally brought to pass. And of this opinion are most of the Pontificial Writers, that thereby they might the better maintain their Tenent, that miracles are not ceased; though we do not understand that if we should grant, that in these things there should be some concurrence of Divine Power more than ordinary, that therefore it must be a miracle, for it is yet not infallibly concluded what a miracle is, and every wonderful thing is not therefore concluded to be a miracle, and a miracle being not absolutely defined, what is not one cannot be certainly refolved.

6. Some there are that ascribe these strange bleedings of murthered bodies, and of their strange motions, with the sweating of blood. as upon the Pedlars bended dagger or knife, mentioned in the eleventh History, unto the Astral or Sydereal spirit (and that not improbably 3) that being a middle substance, betwixt the Soul and the Body doth, when separated from the Body, wander or hover near about it, bearing with it the irafcible and concupifcible faculties, wherewith being stirred up to hatred and revenge, it causeth that ebullition and motion in the blood, that exudation of blood upon the weapon, and those other wonderful motions of the Body, Hands. Nostrils and Lips, thereby to discover the murtherer, and bring him to condign punishment. Neither is any Tenent yet brought by any, that is more rationally probable to folve these and many other wonderful Phenomena's than this of the Astral Spirit, if it can be but fully proved that there is such a part of Man that doth separately exist, which we shall endeavour to prove ere we end this Chapter.

7. But it is granted upon all fides, that if the murtherer be brought to the presence, or touch of the person murthered, and not quite dead, that then the wounds though closed and staid from bleeding, or the nostrils, will freshly break forth and bleed plentifully. The reason is obvious, because the Soul being yet in the Body, retaining its power of sensation, fancy and understanding, will easily have a presention of the murderer, and then no marvail that through the vehement desire of revenge, the irascible and concupiscible faculties do strongly move the blood, that before was beginning to be stagnant, to motion and ebullition, and may exert so much force upon the organs as for some small time to move the whole body, the hands, or the lips and nostrils. So that all that is to be done, is but to prove, that the person murthered is not absolutely dead, and that the Soul is not totally separated or departed forth of the Body, and this we shall do by undeniable proofs, as are these that follow in this order.

1. Though we generally take death to be a perfect separation of the Soul from the Body, which is most certainly a great truth, yet when this is certainly brought to pass, is a most difficult point to ascertain, because that when the Soul ceases to operate in the Body fo as to be perceived by our Senses, it will not follow, that therefore the Soul is absolutely departed and separated.

2. It is manifest that many persons through this mistake have in the times of the Plague been buried quick, and so have some Women been dealt withal that lay but in fits of the suffocation of the Womb, and yet were taken to be dead. So that from the judgment of our Senses, no certain conclusion can be made that the Soul is totally departed, because it goeth away invisibly; for many that not only to the judgment of the vulgar, but even in the opinion of learned Physicians, have been accounted dead, yet have revived, objero madici as learned Schenckins hath furnished us with this story from Geor. gins Pictorins, "that a certain Woman lay in a fit of the Strangula-"tion of the Womb, for fix continual days without sense or moti-"on, the arteries being grown hard, ready to be buried, and yet " revived again, and from Parans of some that have lain three days "in Hysterical suffocations, and yet have recovered, and of divers

"others that may be seen in the place quoted in the Margent. 3. So that though the organs of the Body may by divers means, either natural or violent, be rendered fo unfit, that the Soul cannot perform its accultomed functions in them, or by them, fo as they may be perceptible to our fendes, or judgments; yet will not that at all conclude, that the Soul is separated, and departed quite from the Body, much less can we be able to define or set down the precise time of the Souls aboad in the Body, nor the ultimate period when it must depart, for the union may be (and doubtles is) more strong in some than in others, and the Lamp of life far sooner and more easily to be quenched in some than in others. And the Soul may have a far greater amorofity to ftay in some Body that is lively, sweet, and young, than in others that are already decaying and beginning to putrifie, and it may in all probability both have power and defire to stay longer in that lovesome habitation, from whence it is driven away by force, especially that it may satisfie it self in discovering of the murderer, the most cruel and inhumane disjoyner of that loving pair that God had divinely coupled together, and to fee it felf, before its final departure, in a hopeful way to be re-

4. If we physically consider the union of the Soul with the Body by the mediation of the Spirit, then we cannot rationally conceive that the Soul doth utterly forfake that union, untill by puttefaction, tending to an absolute mutation, it be forced to bid farewel to its beloved Tabernacles for its not operating ad extra to our fenfes, doth not necessarily inferr its total absence. And it may be that there is more in that of Abels blood crying unto the Lord from the ground, in a Physical fense, than is commonly conceived, and God may in his just judgment suffer the Soul to stay longer in the murthered Body, that the cry of blood may make known the murtherer, or may not fo foon, for the same reason, call it totally a-

There is another kind of supposed Apparitions, that are believed to be done in Beryls, and clear Crystals, and therefore called by Paracellus Art Beryllistica, and which he also calls Nigromancy, because it is practised in the dark by the inspection of a Boy or a Maid that are Virgins, and this he strongly affirmeth to be natural and lawful, and only brought to pass by the Sydereal influence, and not at all Diabolical, nor stands in need of any Conjuration, Invocations or Ceremonies, but is performed by a strong faith or imagination. And of this he faith thus: Sed ante omnia (ait) notate proprietatem Bergllorum. Hisunt, in quibus speciantur praterita, prafentia. & futura. Quod nemini admirationi effe debet, ideo, quia fydus influentia imaginem, & smilitudinem in Crystallum imprimit, similem ei, de quo quaritur. And a little after he faith : Prateres syderibus nots sunt omnis, que in naturs existunt. Cumqş Astra homini subjects sut: potest is utiqş illa in subjectum its cogene, ut voluntatt ejus ipfa obsecundent. What truth there may be in this his affertion, I have yet met with no reasons or experiments that can give me satisfaction, and therefore I leave it to every Man to censure as he pleaseth. The only story that seems to carry any credit with it, touching the truth of Apparitions in Crystals, is that which is related of that great and learned Physician Joachimus Camerarius in his Preface before Plutarchs Book De Defettu Oraculorum, from the mouth of Laffarus spenglerus, a person excellent both for Piety and Prudence, and is in effect this: "Spengler faid, that there was one "person of a chief family in Norimberge, an honest and grave Man, "whom he thought not fit to name. That one time he came unto "him, and brought, wrapt in a piece of Silk, a Crystalline Gemm "of a round figure, and faid that it was given unto him of a cer-"tain stranger, whom many years before, having desired of him en-"tertainment, meeting him in the Market, he took home, and "kept him three days with him. And that this gift when he de-"parted, wasleft him as a fign of a grateful mind, having taught "fuch an use of the Crystal as this. If he desired to be made more "certain of any thing, that he should draw forth the glass, and will "a male chast Boy to look in it, and should ask of him what he "did see? For it should come to pass, that all things that he requi-"red, should be shewed to the Boy, and seen in the Apparition. "And this Man did affirm, that he was never deceived in any one "thing, and that he had understood wonderful things by the boys "indication, when none of all the rest did by looking into it, see "it to be any thing else but a neat and pure Gemm. He tells a great " deal more of it, and that doubtful questions being asked, an an-"fwer would appear to be read in the Crystal: but the Man being "weary of the use of it, did give it to spengler, who being a great "hater of superstition, did cause it to be broken into small pieces, "and so with the Silk in which it was wrapped, threw it into the "fink of the House.

CHAP. XVI.

I confess I have heard strange stories of things that have been rewealed by these supposed apparitions, from persons both of great worth and learning; but feeking more narrowly into the matter I found them all to be superstitious delusions, fancies, miltakes, cheats and impostures. For the most part the child tells any thing that comes into his fancy, or doth frame and invent things upon purpole, that he never feeth at all, and the inquirers do presently assimilate them to their own thoughts and suspicions. Some that pretended to shew and foretel strange things thereby to get money, have been discovered to have had confederates, that conveied away mens goods into secret places, and gave the cunning Man notice where they were hid, and then was the child taught a straight framed tale, to describe what a like Man took them away, and where they were, which being found brought credit enough to the couzeners, and this I knew was practifed by one Brooke and Bolton. Some have had artificial glasses, whereinto they would convey little pictures, as

It being manifest by what we have laid down that there are apparitions and some such other strange effects, whereby murthers are often made known and discovered, and also having mentioned that it may be most rationally probable that they are caused by the Astral or Sydereal Spirit, it will be necessary to open and explain that point, and to thew what grounds it hath, upon which it may be settled, which we shall do in this order. 1. There are many (especially Populh Authors thereby to uphold their Doctrine of Purgatory) that maintain that they are the Souls of the persons murthered and deceased, and this opinion, though unanswerably confuted by the whole company of reformed Divines, is notwithstanding revived by Dr. Henry Moore, but Immort of the by no arguments either brought from Scripture, or grounded up. Soul. 6. 16. on any folid reasons, but only some weak conjectures, seeming ab. Mas. p. 296. furdities, and Platonick whimlies, which (indeed) merit no responsion. And we have by positive and unwrested Scriptures, in this Treatife afore proved, that the Souls of the righteous are in Abrahams bosom with Christat peace and rest, and that the Souls of the wicked are in Hell in torments, fo that neither of them do wander here, or make any apparitions; for as S. Augustine taught us: Duo sunt habitacula, unum in igne aterno, alterum in regno be vole Angl. us: Duo june papiracuia, unum in igne eierne, avenui locus, ut lib. Srm. 18.

aterno. And in another place: Nec est ulli ullui medius locus, ut lib. Srm. 18. possit effe nist cum Diabolo, qui non est cum Christo. And Tertulli- lage. 28.70m.70 an and Justin Martyr, two most ancient writers do tell us: "That "Souls being separated from their Bodies, do not stay or linger up. "on the earth: And after they be descended into the infernal pit, "they do neither wander here upon their own accord, nor by the

2. We have also shewed that these apparitions that discover murther and murtherers and brings them to condign punishment. cannot be the evil Angels, because they are only Ministers of torture, fin, horror and punishment, but are not Authors of any good either Corporeal or Spiritual, apparent or real. So that it must of necessity be left either to be acted by a Divine Power, and that either by the immediate power of the Almighty, for which we have no proof, but only may acknowledge the possibility of it; or mediate by the ministery of good Angels, which is hard to prove. there being no one instance, or the least intimation of any such matter in all the Scriptures, and therefore in most rational probability. either relations of matters of fact of this nature are utterly falle, or they are effected by the Astral spirit.

2. Concerning the description of this Astral Spirit or Sydereal Body, (for thoughit be as a spirit, or the image in the looking-glass, Vid. lib. Sagat. yet it is truly corporeal) we shall give the sum of it, as Paracelsus Philos, passim. in his magisterial way, without proof doth lay down. "He post-"tively holdeth that there are three effential parts in Man, which " he calleth the three great substances, and that at death every one "of these being separated, doth return into, or unto the Womb "from whence it came; as The Soul that was breathed in by God. "doth at death return unto God that gave it : And that the Body, "that is to say, that gross part that seems to be composed of the two "inferior Elements of Earth and Water, doth return unto the Earth, "and there in time consume away, some bodies in a longer time, " some in a shorter: But the third part which he calleth the Astral "Spirit, or Sydereal Body, as being firmamental, and confifting of "the two superior Elements of Air and Fire, it (he saith) returneth "into its Sepulcher of the Air, where in time it is also consumed, "but requireth a longer time than the body, in regard it confifteth " of more pure Elements than the other, and that one of these A. "ftral Spirits or Bodies doth confume sooner than another, as they "are more impure, or pure. And that it is this spirit that carrieth a-"long with it the thoughts, cogitations, desires and imaginations "that were impressed upon the mind at the time of death, with the "sensitive faculties of concupiscibility and irascibility. And that "it is this spirit or body (and not the Soul that resteth in the hands of "the Lord) that appeareth, and is most usually conversant in those "places, and those negotiations that the mind of the person living "(whose spirit it was) did most earnestly follow, and especially those things that at the very point of death, were most strongly "impressed upon this spirit, as in the case of the person murthered, "whose mind in the very minute of the murther, receiveth a most "deep impression of detestation and revenge against the murtherer, "which this spirit bearing with it, doth by all means possible seek

"the accomplishment of that revenge, and therefore doth cause "dreams of discovery, bleedings and strange motions of the body "murthered, and fometimes plain apparitions of the persons mur-"thered, in their usual shape and habit, and doth vocally and au-"dibly reveal the murther with all the circumstances, as is apparent in the two forementioned Histories of the apparition of Fletcher to Raynard, and of the Woman murthered by Mark Sharp, to the

4. And this Aftral Spirit is no more than that part in Man that is commonly called the sensitive Soul, and by the Schools is commonly defined thus: Anima sentiens est vis, qua apprehendit & percipit ea qua ex-"tra ip fam funt. And this is corporeal, and (as Dr. Willis holdeth) De Anim. Brail "mortal and coextended with the Body, and that it hath the power 61,20 "of imagination, appetite, desire, and aversion and the like, and in a "manner, a sensitive way of ratiocination, and yet is distinct from the "ratinal Soul or Mens that is incorporeal, immortal, and far more ex-"cellent. And perspicacious Helmont holding this sensitive Soul to be diftinct from the mens or immortal and rational Soul, faith thus: Eft ergo anima sensitiva, caduca, mortalis, mera lux vitalis data à patre luminum, nec alio modo verboq; explicabilis. But of the rational Soul he faith: Ipsa autem mens immortalis, est substantia lacida, incorporea, immediate Dei sui imaginem referens, quia ean-dem in creando, sve in ipso Empsychosis instanti, sibi insculptam sufcepit. So that both thefe late and fearned Authors hold, that in every Man there are two distinct Souls, the sensitive that is mortal, corporeal, and coextended with the Body, and the rational, that is immortal and absolutely incorporeal: so that though in words and terms they feem to differ, yet in substance they agree. For the Hermetick School, the Platonifts, Paracelfus, Jacob Behemen, and others do hold three parts in Man which they call, Soul, Spirit and Body, and these two last Authors do hold the body to be one part in Man, and two Souls besides, the sensitive and rational that are two diftinct parts, the one corporeal and mortal, and the other incorporeal and immortal, and fo they do but nominally differ. And now our task must be to prove, that first there are such three parts in Man, and that after death they do separately exift, which we shall attempt in this order.

1. Though arguments taken à notatione nominit, do not necesfarily prove, yet they illustrate, and render the case plain and intelligible; and we shall find that the Hebrens have three distinct appellations for these three parts. As for the Soul, either rational or fensitive, or vital spirit, they use Nephell which is common to brutes and reptiles as well as to Man, as faith the Text: And to every beaff Gen. 1. 301 of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth in which there is a living foul, Nephefi Halab. And therefore to diftinguish the rational and immortal Soul, from this which is fensitive, mortal and common with brutes, the Text faith: And the Lord God form: d man of the dust of the earth, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a li. ving foul. Upon which Tremellius gives us this note: Ut clarius appareret discrimen quod est inter animam hominis, & reliquorum animantium : Horum enim anima ex eadem materia provenerunt. unde corpora habebant, illius verò anima spiritale quiddam est & Divinum. And upon the words, Sic fuit homo. Id eft (ait) hac ratione factum est, ut terrea illa statua animata viveret. Another word they use, which is Ruah, and this is also generally attributed Eccles 3.21. to Men and Beasts, as the words of Solomon do witness. Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upwards, and the spirit of the beaft that goeth downward to the earth? And in both thefe, touching both Man and Beast, the word Ruah is used as common to them both; and sometimes it is taken specially for the rational immortal Soul, as, And the spirit shall return unto God who gave it. Also tbid. 12. 7. they have the word Niblab, and Basar, that is, corpus, caro, or cadaver, and by these three they set forth, or distinguish these three parts. And the Grecians have likewise their three several names for these parts, as 40x1, anima, vita, which is taken promiscuously sometimes for the rational and immortal Soul, as in this Matth. 10. 28. place; And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the foul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul Ads 20. to. and body in hell. And it is taken for the life in that of the Ads : And Paul faid, Trouble not your felves, his life is in him. Also they have the word Indua, Spiritus, ventus, spiritus vita, being varioully taken, yet sometimes for the rational and immortal Soul, Luke 23. 46. as Father into thy hands I commend my spirit. So they have the word zau, Corpus, the body or gross and fleshly part. And to these accord the three Latine terms for these three distinct parts; Anima, Spiritus and Corpus. 2. This opinion of these three parts in Man, to wit Body, Soul and Spirit, is neither new, nor wants Authors of sufficient credit and learning to be its Patrons. For Hermes Trismegistus an Author Mens ad Herm. almost of the greatest Antiquity saith thus: क्षे की किरेट के नमें मि, के अरेट के હે નર્ નેપત્ર, તે કરે નેપત્રો હે નર્ પૈત્ર. That is, God is in the mind, the mind in the foul, and the foul in matter. But Marsilius Ficiums gives it Pimand.c. 12. thus: Beatus Deus, Demon bonus, animam effe in corpore, mentem in anima, in mente verbum pronunciavit. And further addeth: Deus verd circa omnia, simul atq, per omnia, mens circa animam, anima circa aërem, aër circa materiam. And some give it more fully thus. God is in the mind, the mind in the Soul, the Soul in the Spirit, the Spirit in the blood, and the blood in the Body. But belides this ancient testimony, it is apparent that the whole School of the Platonists, both the elder and later were of this opinion, and also the most of the Cabalists: For Ficinus from the Doctrine of of Plato tells us this: Humana cogitationis domicilium anima ipcomment, is fa eft. Anima domicilium spiritus. Domicilium spiritus hujus eft Conviv. Platon. corpus. But omitting multitudes of others that are strong Champions for this Tenent, we think for authorities to acquiesce in that

of our most learned Physician and Anatomist Dr. Willis, and in Vid. De Anim, those that he hath quoted, which we shall give in the English: p. 73. First he saith : ' Lest I be tedious in rehearing many, it pleaseth "me here only to cite two Authors (but either of which is a Troop) "for the confutation of the contrary opinion. The one (he faith) "is the molt famous Philosopher Petrus Gaffendus, who Phylic. Sect. 3. lib. 9. c. 11. doth divide, toto Celo, (as is faid) the mind of "man, from the other fensitive power, as much as is possible to be done, by many and most figual notes of discrimination, yea dis-"joining of them (as it is faid in the Schools) by specific differen-"ces : Because when he had shewed this to be corporeal extended, "nascible and corruptible, he saith the other is an incorporeal sub-"Stance, and therefore immortal, which is immediately created, "and infused into the body by God; to which opinion he sheweth " Pythagoras, Plato, Aristotle, and for the most part all the ancient "Philosophers, except Epicurus, did much agree; excepting not-"withstanding that they did hold, as not knowing the origin of "the Soul, which they judged to be immortal, that it being cropt "off from the foul of the world, did slide into the body, and that it " was poured again into the Soul of the world either immediately, or "at the last mediately, after its transmigration into other bodies. The other suffrage (he faith) upon this matter, is of the most learned Divine Dr. Hamond, our Countryman, who opening the Text Epift. Theffalo. 1. c. 5. v. 23. to wit, your whole spirit and foul and body &c. "He faith that Man is divided into three parts. "1. To wit, into the body, by which is denoted the flesh and the "members. 2. Into the vital foul, which in like manner being ani- wid. p. 74. "mal and sensitive is common to man with the bruits. 3. Into the "spirit, by which the rational soul, that was first created of God, "is fignified, which also being immortal doth return unto God. " Annot. in Nov. Testam. lib. p. 711. This his exposition he confirmeth by Testimonies brought from Ethnick Authors, and also from the ancient Fathers. From all which the learned Dr. doth make this conclusion: "And from the things above (he faith) it is "most evidently manifest, that man being as it were an Amphibious "animal, or of a middle nature and order betwixt the Angels and "bruits, with these he doth communicate by a corporeal soul, fra-"med of the vital blood and the stock of animal spirit, joyned "likewise in one; and with the other he communicates by an in-"telligent foul immaterial and immortal. And thus much for arguments brought from humane authority, which are prevalent, if they be brought affirmatively (as these are) from learned men or Artificers, and so we shall proceed to further kind of proofs. 3. But an argument arising from Divine Authority is of the most force of all, and therefore let us a little survey the Text it self, which in our English Translation is thus: And the very God of peace fantific you wholly: And I pray God your whole Spirit, and 1 That & 23. Soul, and Body be preserved blameless, unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Apostle having given the believing Thes. salonians all the spiritual counsel that could be necessary, to bring them to the perfection of fanctification, doth pray for them, that the God of peace would fanctifie them wholly, or as the word baereaffe fignifieth (as Arias Montanus hath rendered it) omnind perfectos, altogether perfect; And that the whole, ininancer, that is the whole part, portion or lot (for fo the word properly fignifieth) which he nameth by Spirit, Soul and Body, to be preserved blame. less, unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. And therefore to this doth learned Beza add this note: "Tum demum igitur (ait) "homo integer sanctificatus fuerit, quum nihil cogitabit spiritus, " nibil appetet anima, nibil exequetur corpus, quod cum Dei volun-' tate non consentiat. And before he had faid: Therefore Paul by "the appellation of spirit doth signific the mind, in which the "principal stain lieth: and by the Soul the rest of the inferior faculties, and by the body the domicile of the Soul. And in ano-Ephc. 4-17. "ther place he saith: The mind is become vain, the cogitation ob-"scured, the appetite hardened. And to the same purpose doth learned Rollock upon the place fay thus much: Sanctification, or "transformation is not of any one part, but of all the parts, and of "the whole man. For there is no part or particle in man, which "was not deformed in that first fall, and made as it were monstrous. 4. Therefore μεταμές eurs, or transformation ought to be of the whole "man, and of every fingular part of him. And further he faith: For "the whole man the Apostle hath here the enumeration of his prin-"cipal parts. And they are three in number, Spirit, Soul and Body. "By the spirit (he saith) I understand the mind, which the Apostle "Epb. 4. 24. calleth the Spirit of the mind, and this is no other "thing than the faculty of the rational mind, which is discerned "in invention, and in judging of things found out. By the name "of foul (he faith) I understand all those inserior faculties of the "mind, as are the animal which are also called natural. The body "doth follow these parts, to wit that gross part which is the in-"strument by which the spirit and soul do exert their sunctions and "operations. By all which it is most clear, that though they call them faculties, yet they are distinct effential parts of the whole man, which is most manifest, in that the body, though one of these three, cannot be a faculty, but a meer instrument, and yet is one of the effential parts, that doth integrate the whole man. But whosoever shall seriously consider, how little satisfaction the definition of a faculty given by either Philosophers or Physicians, will bring to a clear understanding, may easily perceive, that distinct parts are commonly taken to be faculties. 4. The first argument that this learned Physician urgeth, to prove that there are two Souls in man, the one fensitive and corporcal, the other rational, immortal and incorporeal, is in this order. "But "(he faith) whereas it is faid that the rational foul doth by it felf "exercise every of the animal faculties, it is most of all improbable, because the actions and passions of all the animal senses and motions are corporeal, divided and extended to various parts, to per-"form which immediately the incorporeal and indivisible soul (if "fo be it be finite) feemeth unfit or unable. Further (he faith) "what belongeth unto that vulgar opinion, that the sensitive soul is subordinate to the rational, and as it were swallowed up of it, "that that which is the foul in brutes, in man becomes a meer pow-"er; these are the trifles of the Schools. For how should the fen-"fitive foul of man, which before hath been in act a subsistent, ma-"terial and extended substance, losing its essence, at the advent of "the rational foul, degenerate into a meer qualitie? But if it be "afforted that the rational foul, by its advent also doth introduce "life and fensation, then mandoth not generate an animated man,

"but only a formless body, or a rude heap of flesh. 5. Another argument he useth to prove these two souls in man is this: "Therefore (he faith) it being supposed that the rational "foul doth come to the body before animated of the other corpo-"real foul, we may inquire, by what band or tye, feeing it is a pure "fpirir, can it be united to this, seeing it hath not parts, by which "it might be tied, or adhere to the whole or any of the parts? And "therefore he thinkerh that concerning this point it is to be faid "with most learned Gaffendus: That the corporeal soul is the im-"mediate subject of the rational soul, of which seeing it is the act, "perfection, complement and form, also by it the rational soul is "made or becometh the form and act of the humane body. But "fleeing that it doth scarce seem like or necessary, that the whole "corporeal foul should be possessed of the whole rational foul; "Therefore it is lawful to determine that this rational foul, being "purely spiritual, should reside as in its Throne, in the principal * pare or faculty of it, to wit in the imagination, framed of a small "portion of the animal spirits, being most subtile, and seated in the very middle or center of the brain.

6. Another chief argument that he useth to prove these two fouls in man, is the ftrife and disagreements that are within man: "Because (he saith) the intellect and imagination are not wont to "agree in to many things, burthat also the fentitive appetite doth " diffent in more things: From whose litigations moreover it shall "be lawful to argue, that the moodes of the aforefaid fouls, both "in respect of sublishing and operating, are distinct. For as there is "in man a double cognitive power, to wit the intellect and ima-"gination, so there is a double appetite, the Will proceeding from "the Intellect, which is the Page or servant of the rational foul, "and the sensitive Appetite, which cohering to the imagination, "is faid to be the hands, or procuratrix of the corporeal foul.
7. To these we shall add, that when the understanding is truly enlightened with the fpirit of God, and led by the true light of the Goffiel, in the ways of Christ, then is man said to be spiritual, because the carnal mind and the sensitive appetite are subdued and brought under to the obedience of Christ by his grace. So also when the understanding is darkned, as saith the Apostle; Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God thorow the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their hearts. Then man becomes wholly led with the carnal and sensual appetite, and is therefore called fuxind, disgumos, the natural, animal or foully man: And in both these conditions the organical body is led and acted according to the ruling power, either of the Spirit of God, and so it is yielded up a living facrifice to God, or of the spirit of darkness, corruption, and the sensitive appetite, and so is an instrument of all unrighteousness. By all which it is most manifest that there are in man these three parts, of Body, Soul, and Spirit, which was the thing undertaken to be proved. 8. Lastly as to this point, it is a certain truth that two extreams cannot be joined or coupled together, but by some middle thing that participateth or cometh near to the nature of both. So the Soul which (by the unanimous consent of all men) is a spiritual and pure, immaterial and incorporeal substance cannot be united to the body, which is a most gross, thick and corporeal substance, without the intervention of some middle nature, fit to conjoin and unite those extreams together, which is this sensitive and corporeal Soul or Astral Spirit, which in respect of the one extream is corporeal, yet of the most pure fort of bodies that are in nature, and that which approacheth most near to a spiritual and immaterial substance, and therefore most fit to be the immediate receptacle of the incorporeal Soul: And also it being truly body doth easily join with the gross body, as indeed being congenerate with it, and lo becomes vinculum & nexus of the immaterial Soul and the more groß body, that without it could not be united. Now having (as we conceive) sufficiently proved that there are in man these three distinct parts of Body, Soul, and Spirit, in the next place we are to shew that these three may, and do separately exist,

1. It is manifest by Divine Authority that the spirit, that is the rational, immortal and incorporeal foul, doth return to God that gave it. That is not to be annihilated or to vanish into nothing, but to abide and remain for ever or eviternally. For the Apolle faith : For we know, that if our earthly tabernacle or house were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. By which it is manifest that the immacerial Soul doth exist eternally ex parte post, as the Schools say, and also the groß body being separated from the immortal Soul, doth by it self exist until it be consumed in the grave, or by corruption be changed into earth, or some other things, or that the Atomes be dispersed, and joined unto, or figurated into some other bodies. So it is most highly rational that this sensitive Soul, or Astral Spirit, which is corporeal, should also exist by it self for some time, until it be diffipated and wasted, in which time it may (and doubt-Reaf. 1. Eccl. 12. 7. lefly doth) make these apparitions, motions and bleedings of the

CHAP. XVI.

2. Upon the supposition that the tational Soul be not est traduce, Reaf. 2. but be infused after the bodily organs be fitted and prepared, which is the firm Tenent of all Divines Ancient, middle and Modern, and must upon the granting of it to be simply, and absolutely immaterial and incorporeal (which is indisputable) of necessity be infuled, because no immaterial substance can be produced or generated by the motion of any agent, that is meerly material. of forth of any material substance whatsoever. And therefore I say that the Soul being infused, it must of necessity follow the organized body, that could not exist (except as a lump of flesh) without the corporeal sensitive soul; which must of necessity demonstrate, that as they did separately exist before the union of the Soul and Body, so they also do exist distinctly after their separation by death. and so the Astral Spirit may effect the things we have afferted.

3. And if the experiment be certainly true that is averred by Bo- Real. 3. rellus, Kircher, Caffarel, and others (who might be assamed to affirm it as their own trial, or as ocular wienelles, if not true) that the figures and colours of a plant may be perfectly represented, and seen in glasses, being by a little heat raised forth of the ashes. Then (if this be true) it is not only possible, but rational, that animals as well as plants, have their Ideas or Figures existing after the groß body or parts be destroyed, and so these apparitions arebut only those Astral shapes and figures. But also there are shapes and apparitions of Men, that mult of necessity prove that these corpo- Hillor, varior. real Souls of Aftral Spirits do exift apart, and attend upon or are 206, 62, 9, 324; near the blood, or bodies; of which Borellus Physician to the King of France, gives us thefe two relations. 1. N. de Richier a Soap-maker (he faith) and Bernatdus Ger. Hift. 1. manns from the relation of the Lord of Gergan, and others, distilling mans blood at Park, which they thought to be the true matter of the Philosophers stone; they saw in the cucurbit or glas body, the Phantaim, or stape of a Man, from whom bloody rayes did feem to proceed, and the glass being broken they found the figure as though of a skull, in the remaining faces.

2. There were three curious persons also at Park, that taking Hift. 2. the Church earth-mould from S. Innocents Church, supposing it to be the matter of the stone, did distill it and work upon it, and in the glasses they did perceive certain Phantasms or Shapes of Men, of which they were no little afraid. 3. Our Countryman Dr. Flud a person of much learning and Hift. 3. great fincerity, doth tell us this well attested story: "That a cer- bi hoss. See tain Chymical Operator, by name La Pierfe, near that place in Pa- Anatom. 6 5: "rie called Le Temple, received blood from the hands of a certain 233. "Bishop to operate upon. Which he setting to work upon the 84sturday, did continue it for a week with divers degrees of fire, "and that about midnight the Friday following, this Artificer ly"ing in a Chamber next to his Laboratory, betwirt fleeping and "waking, heard an horrible noise, like unto the lowing of Kine, "or the roaring of a Lion; and continuing quiet, after the ceasing "of the found in the Laboratory, the Moon being at the full by "shining enlightening the Chamber, suddenly betwixt himself and "the Window he saw a thick little cloud, condensed into an oval "form, which after by little and little did feem compleatly to put "on the shape of a Man, and making another and a sharp clamour. "did suddenly vanish. And that not only some Noble Persons in "the next Chambers, but also the Host with his Wife, lying in a "lower room of the house, and also the neighbors dwelling in the "opposite side of the ftreet, did diftinctly hear as well the bellowsing as the voice, and some of them were awaked with the vehe-"mency thereof. But the Artificer said that in this he found so-"lace, because the Bishop of whom he had it, did admonish him. "that if any of them from whom the blood was extracted, should "die in the time of its putrefaction, his Spirit was wont often to ap-"pear to the fight of the Artificer, with perturbation. Also forthwith upon Saturday following he took the retort from the Fur-" nace and broke it with the light stroak of a little key, and there "in the remaining blood found the perfect representation of an hu-"mane head, agreeable in face, eyes, nostrils, mouth and hairs, "that were somewhat thin and of a golden colour. And of this last "there were many ocular witnesses, as the Noble Person Lord of "Bourdalone, the Chief Secretary to the Duke of Guife, and that "hehad this relation from the Lord of Menanton living in that house "at the same time, from a certain Doctor of Physick, from the owner "of the house, and many others.

So that it is most evident that there are not only three effential, and distinct parts in Man, as the gross body, consisting of Earth and Water, which at death returns to the earth again, the sensitive and corporcal Soul, or Aftral Spirit, confifting of Fire and Air, that at death wandereth in the air, or near the body, and the immortal and incorporeal Soul that immediately returns to God that gave it : But also that after death they all three exist separately; the Soul in immortality, and the body in the earth, though foon confuming; and the Astral spirit that wanders in the air, and without doubt doth make these strange apparitions, motions, and bleedings, and so we conclude this tedious discourse with the Chapter.

CHAP. XVII.

Of the force and efficacy of Words or Charms, whether they effect any thing at all or not, and if they do, whether it be by Natural or Diabolical virtue and force.

Here is nothing almost so common not only in the Poets (who have been the chief disseminators of many such things) but in most of other Authors, as the mention of the force of Charms and Incantations: And yet if we narrowly fearch into the bottom of the matter, there is nothing more difficult than to find out any truth of the effects of them, in matters of fact; and therefore that we may more clearly manifest what we have proposed in this Chapter, we shall first premise these few things.

1. Those that take the effects of them to be great as many Divines, Philosophers, and Physicians do, suppose no efficacy in them folely, holding that quantitates rerum nullius sunt efficacie, but that they are only figns from the Devil to delude the minds of those that use them, and in the mean time that the Devil doth produce the effects. But it had been well, if those that are of this opinion, had shewed us the ways and means how the Devil doth operate such things, seeing he can do nothing in corporeal matter but by natural means: So that either we must confess that there is no force at all in Charms, or that the effects produced are by natural

2. Neither can we affent fully to those that hold, that the force of imagination can work strange things upon other bodies, distinct and separate from the body imaginant, upon which it is not denied to have power to operate very wonderful things; and that for the reason given by the most learned Lord Vernlam, which is this: Ex. 51.51.cat.tc. perimenta que vim imaginationis in corpora aliena folide probent, p. sis. panca aut nulla prorsus sunt; cum fascint exemplahuc non faciant;

quod Damonum interventu fortaffe non careant. 3. I faid not affent fully, because there are some reasons that incline me to believe the polibility of it, though there be hardly found any experiments that folidly prove it. For as the faid Lord Verulam faith again : Movendi funt homines, ne fidem detrabant wid.p. 554 operationibus ex transmissione spirituum, & vi imaginationi, quid eventus quandog: fallit. And there are fo many learned Authors (though Dr. Calanton according to his feurrilous manner files them Enthusiastical Arabs) of all forts, that do stiffy maintain the power of the imagination upon extraneous bodies, with fuch strength of argument, that I much stagger concerning the point; and therefore dare not fay my affent is fully to either. For learned Dr. Willh having (as we conceive Junantwerably proved that there is a twofold Soul in Man, and that the one which is the fensitive. is corporeal, though much approaching to the nature of spirit, how far the force of imagination, which is its instrument, may reach, or what it may work at distance, is not easy to determine. And if the Soul, as Helmont laboureth to prove, by the Prerogative of its creation can when suscitated by strong defire and exalted phantalie operate per nutum, then it must needs follow, that it may work upon other bodies than its own, and so using Words, Charms, Characters and Images may bring to pass strange things. But if these three conclusions be certain and true, written by the pen of a most Midicina Mag- learned, though less vulgarly known Author, to wit: "1. The "Soul is not only in its proper visible body, but also without it; "neither is it circumscribed in an organical body. 2. The Soul "worketh without, orbeyond its proper body commonly so cal-"led. 3. From every body flow corporeal beams, by which the "Soul worketh by its presence, and giveth them energie and pow-"er of working. And these beams are not only corporeal, but of "divers parts alfo: If these (I say) be certain, then doth the imagination work at distance by means of those beams, and consequently Words and Charms, and such like may be the means and instruments, by which the imagination (being the principal power of the sensitive Soul) may operate strange things at distance, and so that not be vain which learned Agrippa tells us.

Spiritue in nobie qui viget, illa facit. And we have before sufficiently proved, that the species of bodies are corporeal, and it is plain, that these operate upon our eyes at a valt distance, and do intersect one another in the air without confusion. And we must in all reason acknowledge that the sensitive Soul, must needs be of as much purity, and energie as those that we call the fenfible, or visible species of things, and then it must necessarily follow, that it by the means of the imagination may operate at a great distance, and so words and charms may from thence have power and operation. For learned Agrippa that great Philosopher, and master of lawful and natural Magick. and not of that which is accounted diabolical (as the wretched pen of Paulus Jovins hath painted him) holdsthis: Quod unicuig, homini impressus est Character Divinus, cujus vigore potest pertingere ad operandum mieabilia. Which if so, then many words, charms and the like, have a natural efficacy to work wonderful things, and that at a great di-

4. I cannot likewise but take notice of another caution, very pertinent to our present purpose, given us also by the said Lord Ve-Ut figrap. 555, rulam, and in English is this : "Again men are to be holden back "from the peril of credulity, left here they too much rashly incline "with an easy faith, because they often see the event to answer to "the operations. For the cause of the success is to be referred of-"ten to the forces of the affections and imaginations in the body

"that is the agent, which by a certain secondary reason may act in a "diverse body. As for example: If any one carry about the figure "of a Planet or a Ring or a part of some beast, being certainly per-" fwaded, that it will prove helpful unto him in promoting his love. "or that he may be preserved from danger or wound in battel, or "in strife that he may overcome &c. it may render his wit more "stirring, or may add spurs to his industry, or may cherish consi-"dence and hold up constancie, from which perchancie hemight "have slided. Now who is ignorant what industry and a mind te-"nacious of its purpole, may delign and bring to pass in civil af-"fairs? Therefore (he concludeth) he should err and deceive and 66 be deceived, who should ascribe these things to the force of ima-"gination upon the body of another, which his own imaginati-"on worketh in his own body. And therefore this may caution all that would judge aright of the force and effects of words and charms, that they may perhaps neither flow from the nature or efficacy of the words, nor from the force of the imagination of him or her that pronounceth, writeth, giveth or applieth the charm, but from the imagination and belief of the person to whom they are applied, and for whom they are intended. For it is manifelt by common experience (and we our selves have known it to be certain) that thefe charms either pronounced, or written and hung about the patients neck, have produced the greatest effects, upon fuch as are of the weakest judgment and reason, as Women, Children, and ignorant and superstitious persons, who have great confidence in such vain and inessicacious trisses; and that they seldom or never produce any effects at all, upon such as are obstinate Insidels in the belief of their operations, and I fear we shall not (or very hardly,) find any instance to make this good, that they effect ctively work upon such as are utterly diffident of their force or

CHAP. XVII.

5. It hath sometimes been a question, Whether a rational Phy- cut. Problem fician in the curing of melancholy persons, or others in some odd Ducd 24,36. diseases, ought to grant the use of Characters or Charms, and such ridiculous administrations? Which is decided in the affirmative, that it is lawful and necessary to use them, by that able and learned Physician Gregorius Horstins, by eight strong and convincing arguments. And we our selves having practised the art of medicine in all its parts in the North of England, where Ignorance, Popery, and superstition doth much abound, and where for the most part the common people, if they chance to have any fort of the Epilepfie, Palfie, Convulfions or the like, do presently perswade themfelves that they are bewitched, fore-spoken, blasted, fairy-taken, or haunted with someevil spirit, and the like, and if you should by plain reasons shew them, that they are deceived, and that there is no fuch matter, but that it is a natural disease, say what you can they shall not believe you, but account you a Physician of small or no value, and whatfoever you do to them, it shall hardly do them

any good at all, because of the fixedness of their depraved and prepossessed imagination. But if you indulge their fancy, and seem to concur in opinion with them, and hang any infignificant thing about their necks, affuring them that it is a most efficacious and powerful charm, you may then easily settle their imaginations, and then give them that which is proper to eradicate the cause of their disease, and so you may cure them, as we have done great numbers. Here it is most manifest that the charm or appension hath no efficacy at all, and yet accidentally, it conduces to fettle their fancies and confidences, which conduceth much to their cures. And from hence it comes to pass that by reason of the fixed belief of the party to whom the charm is applied, there are many helped. when the causality and efficiency is solely in the person imaginant and confident of receiving help by the means of the charm, and no. efficacy at all in the charm it felf, nor no diabolical concurrence. besides what obliquity may be in the minds of the actors, nor no agency in the imagination of the charmer, to produce the effect : yet because often people are cured thereby, the common people (and sometimes the learned also) do attribute the whole effect unto the charm, when indeed it effecteth nothing at all. And to this purpose Varius doth quote a passage from Galen, which is this: Sunt quidam natura lati, qui quando agrotant, fi cos fanos futuros mediem confirmet, convalefeunt ; quorum fpes fanitatis eft caufa : & mediene fi animi desiderium incantatione, autalicujus rei ad collum appensione adjuverit, citime ad valetudinem perducet.

But we now come to examine if we can find any convincing examples, from Authors of credit, that in words, characters and charms there is any force or efficacy; and this we shall endeavour from the best and most punctual Authors, that have come within the compass of our knowledge, or reading, and that in this order.

1. Ithink there are few that have been, or are Students or Pracitioners in the Art of Medicine, that have not either heard, or read the writing of that most able and learned person Johannes De ability Tr. Fernelius who was Phylician to the most Christian King of France Henry the second, who in that most profound piece that he writ, De abditte rerum causis, gives us as an ocular witness this relation. "I have (he faith) feen a certain Man, who by the virtue or force "of words did brings various Specters, or Apparitions into a look-"ing glass, which did there so clearly express forthwith either in "writing or in true images, whatfoever he commanded, that all "things were readily and eafily known to those that were by.

I. From hence we may observe, that Fernelins seeing this (as he faith) with his eyes, cannot (being fo great a Scholar, and a circumipect person) be imagined to have been deceived, or imposed upon; though as much as he relates might have been brought to pass by the artificial placing of the glass, and having several images and things written moved by a confederate placed in some secret corner, where the images might fitly be reflected from the glass to the fight of the by-standers, or by some other means performed by the optical science and consederacy. And it is no sure ground to introduce a Demon to act the business, when artificial means may rationally solve the matter, neither was it impossible but he might mistake in the conjecture of the cause of those Phenomena.

2. And though he feems by his preceeding discourse, to believe it Observ. 2. to have been caused but by a league and compact betwixt the perfon that shewed it, and some Cacodamon: yet he bringeth no better proof for it, than the rotten authority of Porphyrius and Proclus, and no convincing argument that Demons can perform any such strange matters. And however if they were the meer apparitions of evil spirits, it is much to be wondered that Fernelim would be present at any such finful and dangerous sights, or have such familiar conversation with any of that damned crew, seeing he there faith : Que omnes prorfus vane & captiofe funt artes.

3. If these Apparitions were caused by Cacodamons, then there observ. 3. was no efficacy in the words at all, they were nothing but the fign of the league betwixt the evil spirit, and the person that represented them; and then he need not have faid, that they were derived into the glass vi verborum, and so this will not prove that it was effected by force of the words. But if all this that he relates, did proceed but from lawful and natural causes, as Paracelfus strongly holds (the glass being but made as that which he saw in spain, of the EleGrum that he mentions) then the words might be efficacious, and so it is a punctual instance to prove that words are operative, which is the thing de facto, that we here feek after. 2. The next History to this purpose we shall take from Autonius Hist. 2. Benevenius, as we find him quoted by that learned person Marcel. lus Donatus, and likewife Dr. Calandon (for I have not the book for mich. Bl. Donatus, and likewife Dr. Calandon (for I have not the book for mich. by me) who renders it thus. "A Souldier had an arrow (hot lib. 2. c. 1946. "through the left part of his breaft, fo that the iron of it fluck to Of Credul and "the very bone of the right fhoulder. Great endeavours were u. Incred. p. 4, "fed to get it out, but to no purpose. Benevenins doth thew, that "it was not feasible without present death. The Man seeing him-"felf forsaken by Physicians and Chirurgeons, sends for anoted " Ariolus or Conjurer: who fetting his two fingers upon the wound, "with some Charms he used, commanded the iron to come out, "which presently without any pain of the patient, came forth, and "the Man was presently healed: And this the Doctor, who I pre-"fume had the book, faith, that Benevenius faith vidimus we have "feen it, which Marcellus Donatus faith, the Author afcri-"bed to the virtue of the words, and others to the force of imagi-

I. Here we may observe, that this may either be brought to pass observe. I. by the efficacy of the words or charms that he muttered, and then we must needs confess that charms are of great and stupendious force : or that it might be effected by the imagination of the Charmer, and then we must suppose (which the most do deny) that the imagination of the perion imaginant, hath po wer to operate upon ex traneous bodies, if it had power to cause the iron to come without harm forth of the wounded Souldiers body, or it may be caused (and that in most probability) by the imagination of the party wounded being excited and roused up by the uttering of the charm. in which the patient (in all likelihood) had no small confidence. And so however the charm was an accidental cause, or (as they use to fay) causa sine qua non, of the bringing forth of the iron.

Hist. 3. Lition. in Fin. 2. Avicin.

3. Another History wemust borrow from the aforesaid two Authors Donatus and Dr. Cafaubon, which they have transcribed forth of Johannes Baptifta Montanns, because I have not the Author by me, and is this: "My felf with mine eyes, you may (he faith) believe me, have seen it : A certain man who when he had made a « circle and drawn some characters about it, and uttered some words. "he did call together above a hundred Serpents. And further faith, "that though he did murmur certain words, yet he holdeth, that "the bringing of the Serpents together was not performed by the "force of the words, but by the power of a strong imagination, "and that some by the strength of imagination, not ofwords, are "faid to draw forth darts, and to cure wounds.

1. And here we may take notice that this is a punctual and pofitive Hiltory, plainly declaring the matter of fact, in calling together above an hundred Serpents, and this must be done either by the force of the words, or by the strength of the persons imagination, or both, unless we must admit the Devil to perform it, which may vainly be supposed, but cannot be proved, by what natural means he should bring it to pass. But however the relation is very credible, Montanus being a famous Physician and Professor at Padua, and affirms it as feen with his own eyes.

4. To these we may add one of sufficient credit from the learned Masins, as it is cited by Wierus, and Dr. Casanbon (which may be we have related before, but not to this purpose) and is this: "I al-" fo (he faith) have feen them who with words (or charms) could "Rop wild beafts, and force them to await the ftroak of the dart: "who also could force that Domestick beastly creature, which we " calla Rat, as soon as seen, amazed and astonished to stand still, as "it were immoveable, until not by any deceit or ambulhes, but "only ftretching their hands, they had taken them and ftrangled "them. This is from his own fight, and he a Man of undoubted

5. Another take from the credit of Dr. Cafanbon who fathers it upon Remigiae, but confesseth that at the time of his writing the story he could not find it in Remigine his Book, and is this. "I have feen "a Man (faith he) who from all the neighbourhood (or confines) "would draw Serpents into the fire, which was inclosed within a "magical circle," and when one of them, bigger than the rest, "would not be brought in, upon repetition of the charms before

"used, he was forced, and so into the fire he did yield himself with the reft, and with it was compassed. 6. To these we shall adjoin another story written from Wierus by Hist. 6.

Dr. Mobre thus: " And (he faith) Wierus tells us this flory of a Antidot a-"Charmer at salizabing, that when in the fight of the people he gainf athein as had absorbed all the Remotite into a disch and billed at the case 166. " had charmed all the Serpents into a ditch and killed them, at " last there came one huge one far bigger than the rest, that leadt "upon him and winded about his walte like a girdle, and pulled "him into the ditch, and so killed the Charmet himself in the con"clusion. And this great Serpent the Doctor taketh (in his Appendix) to be a Devil, or a Serpent actuated and guided by him; but upon what grounds of reason I can no way understand.

Thele are the most material passages that in our reading we can fluid in credible and learned Authors; to prove thereby the effects of charms de fucto, and we confess they are all short, and not fufficiently evidential, as flich acase may juftly require; and therefore we that here add some testimonies of good Authors that do Recongly affirm and aver the fame. As not to frand upon the alithorities of the Cabalifts, Platonifts or Arabians, we find the truth of the charming of Serpents avouched by Paracelfar (whole credit in this point, flay be equivalent to any others) who faith thus: "But (he faith) answer me from whelice is this, that a Serpent in Archidex. "Helvetia, Algovid, or Suevid, doth underftand the Greek Idtom, Magic. Li "Of, Offa, Of, &c. When not withflanding the Greek tongue is 1. 693. " not fo common in this age, with the Helvetians, Algovians, or "Suevians, that the venerious worms (hould be able to learn it? Tell "me (he faith) how, where and from what caules, Serbents do un-"defitand these words, or in what Academies have they learned "them, that they fliould forthwith at the first hearing of those "words, fop their ears, with their tail tufned Fack, left "they mould be compelled to hear the words again reiterated? " For affood as they hear them, they contrary to their nature and " enning do forthwith lie intrioveable, and do purfue or hurt no "man with their venemous biting, when notwithstanding other-" wife they on the fuddenfly from the noise of a mans going as soon " as they hear it, and turn into their holes. From whence it is matifelt that Paracelfat knew of his own experience that the charm (which it feems he knew) would make Serpents lie immoveable, and to that there was power and efficacy in words naturally without superstition to work and operate.

Alfo elle learned person Tobias Tandleras Doctor of Phylick and publick Professor at Witteberge, in his situate and pithy Orarion de fafeine & incantatione, tells us this: " That Tuetta Woman be- p. ag: forming to the Temple of Veft being accused of lacest, did by " the help of prayer carry water in a fleve, as Pling witheffeth: " 140. 28. c. 2. Hafter Heffor. Whoeffere with many examples, doch " extol the efficacy of words. And further faith: They are found to that Ray wild beath with words, that they escape not the throw328

"ing of the dart. And those that render Rats being seen in any "place, stupid with secret murmuring, that they may be taken with " the hand and strangled.

Augerius Ferrerius, whom Thuanus calls Medicus Doctissimus, in histreating of Homerical medication, after he hath quoted Galen's recantation from Trallianus, and divers arguments and examples to prove the efficacy of words, charms and characters from him. from Actins and others, he concludeth thus: Quorum experientiam cum ob oculos positam, & tot illustrium virorum authoritate confirmata videris, quid facies? Nam its qua sensibus exposita sunt contravenire, sani hominisnon eft : Doctorum vero experimenta infirmare, temerarium.

Lastly, for authorities sake we shall add the opinion of sagacious Helmont, who writ a Book by him ftyled, In verbis, herbis, & lapidibus est magna virtus; and of the efficacy of words faith only thus much: De magna virtute verborum quadam ingenue dixi, qua magis admiror quam applico. By which it is manifest that though Helmont did not make use of words or charms, yet knowing the efficacy of them he could not but admire them.

These authorities joyned with the examples may suffice to convince any rational man that at some times and places, and by some persons, the using of charms have produced strange effects: and therefore taking the matter of fact to be a truth, we should come to examine the cause of these effects, but first it will be necessary to premile some cautions and necessary considerations, which we shall

1. We are to consider the intricacy and difficulty of this point. which hath exercised the wits of the learned in all ages, and forced Pliny to fay: Maxima quastionis, & semper incerta est, valeanine aliquid verba & incantamenta carminum. And again more particularly : Varia circa hac opinio, ex ingenio cujufq, vel cafu, mulceri alloquio foras: quippe ubi etiam Serpentes extrahi cantu cogia; in panas, verum falsumne sit, vita non decreverit. It feems by Pling that learned men of old have been very much divided in their opinions about this matter, infomuch that he dares not take upon him to decide it, but leaves it free to every man to believe as they shall see cause. And therefore we ought not to be condemned, if we do not absolutely decide it neither, it is enough if we bring so much light to the matter that it may be better understood, though not absolutely determined, In magnis voluisse sat eft.

2. Again we are to note that some Authors of great credit and learning do hold these things to be but meer Aniles fabule, of which opinion (it feems) Aristotle, and Galen were, though Trallianus doth affirm (though some say failly) that he made a retractation of that opinion, and this was the judgment of the learned Spaniard Valefius, who in his book, De facra Philosophia, hath taken great pains to perswade men, though he deny not supernatural operations by Devils and Spirits, that inchanting by magical words are imposible possible, and whatsoever is alledged by any ancient or late writer to that purpose, he doth reject as meerly fabulous. But upon as good grounds may any one reject this his fingle opinion as fabulous, because there are a whole cloud of witnesses against him, of as great credit and authority as himself, and experience every day will make it manifelt, that great effects do follow from the appention of charms and characters, not determining here whether they cause those effects causally as efficients, or but meerly accidentally and occasionally, and therefore in this point Dr. Cafanbon faith well: "As for Valefi- vid. Credit "11 opinion (he faith) though a learned Man, and for ought I know and Incredul-"Pious and Wife; yet it is no wonder to me, that any one man, 101. and characters are inefficacious, fallacious, superstitious and groundless, and hardly fit for an honest and wise man to use, except only to fettle the imaginations of patients, that they may more readily and hopefully take those things that may effectually cure them. I say for the most part, not alwayes, because I grant that they do sometimes either efficiently or accidentally produce real effects. But that they are sometimes fallacious is manifest in the Charmer of Saltzburg, who though with his charms he could prevail against the little serpents, yet that great one that came prevailed against him, and threw him into the ditch and killed him. And how valu it is to put any confidence in these idle trifles, and how fallacious and ineffectual and destructive they are, may appear by two deplorable cratter 2, Car examples. Amatus Lustanus a learned and experienced Physician, Hift. r. and a man of great repute and veracity doth relate this: "That in "the end of the Spring, the Summer coming on, two young men "did go from Ancona to the City Auximum, and by the way, the "one of them turning afide to make water, found a Viper in an hole "at the bottom of a Tree, with a great deal of rejoicing, but with "an unhappy success. He did contend with his companion, that "he could take the Viper with his hand, without any hurt, and "did brag that with the murmuring of certain words, he could "make all Serpents obey him, lying still as stupid. The other did "laugh him to scorn. At last they come to a wager. But the Viper "more audacious than was right, remained always truculent and "unaltered. At last when he itretched forth his haud to take her, "it being stirred up with a mad and venemous fury, lifting up the "neck did bite him in the finger, which beginning to pain him, "he quickly put his finger to his mouth perhaps to fuck forth the "blood, but within a small while the unhappy young man died by "his own fault, neither did medical helps yield him any succour, "but he might have escaped, if he had not put the poylon of the " Serpent to his mouth. And this wofull example may be a sufficient warning to all that they be not too hafty to put confidence in these fallacious trifles. Another story we shall give of our own knowledge, and is this. "I had dismembred a pretty Young-mans Hist. 2. e leg by reason of a Gangrene, his name Robert Taylor, a good Scho-' lar, and had been a Clerk to a Justice of Peace, and about three "weeks after when the stump was near healed, I being gone from 6 home, his Mother lying in the same room with him, but having "gotten too much drink, he calling upon her to help him to the "Close-stool, but she not hearing, he scrambled up himself as well "as he could, but hit the end of the stump that was not quite clo-"fed, whereby the arteries were opened, and a great Hemorrhage "followed. And there being an honest simple man that owed the "house where he lay, having a vain confidence that with a charm "he faid he had, he could undoubtedly stay the bleeding, and "therefore would not fuffer them to call up my man to stay the Flux "until day; which continuing fo long, the vain and fruitless charm "prevailing nothing, though my man when he came did stop it, "yet had he loft so much blood that he died the next day; and this may ferve for a sufficient caution against vain confidence in charms.

4. Further we are to consider, that there are many notorious impostures, frauds and cheats committed upon the poor ignorant, credulous and filly common people, while some make the people believe that their diseases are inflicted by such and such Saints, and therefore they must use such and such strange lustrations, suffumigations and other vain superstitious Rites and Ceremonies. Others pretend to drive away evil Spirits by exorcisms and conjurations, and others to cure all diseases (in a manner) with words, charms, characters, amulets, and the like, when the most of these pretenders are meer ignorant Knaves and Impostors, that do nothing but cheat thetoo credulous people of their money, and defame and dishonour the most noble Art of Medicine, of which we have known divers forts, some of which we have mentioned before in this Treatise. To such as these that ancient Author (supposed by some to be Hip-De Morbo Sacro pocrates) De morbo sacro, doth give sufficient reproof, and of whom he faith thus: Ac mihi certe qui primi bunc morbum ad Deos retulerunt tales effe videntur, quales sunt magi, expiatores, circulatores, ac arrogantes oftentatores, qui se valde pios esse plurimuma, scire simulant. A most large Catalogue of these kind of pestiferous impostors, and many others, you have at full and to the life painted forth by Paracelfus in his Preface to his less Chirurgery, where he hath sufficiently stigmatized them with all those wicked marks and brands that justly belong unto them. The same also is fully performed by learned Langing in his Epiftles, to whom I referr the readers.

5. We are to confider that though we should grant that words or charms had in them no energie, nor efficiency at all, by any natural power, and that the Devils power doth not concur to make them operative; yet (as we have partly shewed before) they are of fingular use and benefit to a learned Physician, whereby he may settle the fancies of his patients, to cause them more chearfully and confidently to commit them to his hands, and to take what he shall order and prescribe them, and this manner of their use is no way to be dispraised or condemned, and we leave it as excepted forth of the dispute we have in hand.

There are chiefly three opinions, amongst those that grant the truth of the matter of fact, concerning the proper cause of these effects produced by words. 1. Of which the first fort are those that hold there is no efficiency at all in the words themselves, which are nothing but the fign of the league and compact betwixt the Charmer and the Devil, and that whatfoever is brought to pass is only effected by the Devils power, and of this opinion are the greatest part of the learned. 2. Are those that hold that the words or charms are but means to heighten the imagination, and that it is the strength of the exalted imagination only that produceth those things that feem to be effected by those words or charms, and of this opinion was Avicen and many of the Arabians, Ferrerius, Montanus and many others. 3. There are those that hold that there is a natural efficiency in words and characters rightly fitted and conjoined together in proper and agreeable constellations, and of this Opinion were Johannes Ludovicus de la Cerda, Johannes Branus Camisius Lustanus, Paracelsus, Galeottus Martius, Henricus Cornelius Agrippa, and many others; and of these we shall speak in

1. Thefirst opinion doth takeup a falle supposition for its ground, Region 1. 4to wit that the Devil doth make a visible and corporeal league with gainst this opithe Charmer, by virtue of which compact the effects are produced; and if this compact be not explicite, yet it may be implicite, and fo the Devil operateth the effects, thereby to draw the Charmer into his league and service : But we have before sufficiently proved the nullity of any fuch Covenant, and shewed plainly that it is a falle, impious and diabolical Tenent, and that there is not, nor can be any other league betwixt the Devil and wicked men, but what it spiritual, internal and mental, and therefore that the Devil doth not bring those effects to pass, by pretence of a league, that hath no being or existence.

2. We have proved by the unanimous consent of all the whole Reason 2. aarmy of the learned, that the Devil can work no alteration or saint this options of the learned, that the Devil can work no alteration or saint this option. change innatural bodies, but by the applying of fit agents to agreeable patients; but what agent could the Devil have applied to make the iron that stuck in the Souldiers shoulder bone related by Benevenius, to come forth without pain? furely none at all. For where an agent in nature is awanting to produce an effect, therethe Devil must needs also be lame, and can effect nothing; and if either the words had a fufficient natural power to cause the iron to come forth, or the Souldiers imagination exalted by confidence in the Charm and Charmer, then the Devils help is in vain implored, or he brought into be an actor of that he hath no power at all to perform, and there was no other natural agent applied. and therefore it must of necessity be one of the two that produced the effect, and not a Demon.

3. It cannot in any reason be imagined that the Devil, that for Resion 3.a.

3. It cannot in any reason be imagined that the Devil, that for glidt this opithe space of above sive thousand years hath been the bitter and innon.

Researce opens to the health of Man both in Souland Body, should veterate enemy to the health of Man both in Soul and Body, should now be become a Physician & an healer. We read that God sent forth priffic. (1.24.7) evil Angels amongst the people, but he sent forth his word and they were healed. But it is manifest that the evil Angels since their fall, are ordained of God to be the instruments and organs for the executing of his wrath, and the good Angels are his ministring Spisits for the good of his people both in Souls and Bodies: and therefore that the Devil should be the author, or instrument of curing any disease at all, were to make him to act contrary to that end for which God hath ordained him, for he is the destroyer, that is ordained to destroy, but not to heal.

4. But we shall take another argument or two from the learned Resion 4. 8. But we that take another argument of the period of Henricus Brucaus in his Epifile to Thomas Eraftus, where a gainst this opi- pen of Henricus Brucaus in his Epifile to Thomas Eraftus, where the bout this point he faith this: "What is that (he faith) that the "most of the Grecian Physicians were ignorant of Demons; or that mile. Sur. "most of the Grecian Physicians were ignorant when not judged that like. 191/1-17. 4: it should be agreeable to truth, that they have not judged that "Demons had any power either in inflicting or taking away any dif-"cafes ? For that sentence of Hippocrates, that there is somewhat "that is divine in diseases, Galen doth shew in his Comment how it is to be understood, and Hippocrates himself in that Treatife of the "Falling fickness doth sufficiently open it. Notwithstanding these "chief men being Phylicians and Philosophers, by whom the power "of natural things and words was principally looked into ; they "were more willing to affent to things that were evidently apparent, "than take away the force of incantation by it felf. By it felf (he faith) Because they have had no remembrance of Demons, from "whom the causes of such effects, which follow incantations, do seem "only they can possibly be derived.

3. Before he argueth thus: "But the curation of diseases, which gainst this opi- "are performed by conjurations and imprecations, he ascribeth " unto the Devil. Notwithstanding (he saith) some things do move "a scruple to me, because that some things of them do seem to be "of that kind, which cannot at all be referred to Demons, in "which no league or compact doth feem to interceed. For leagues "or compacts feem to be contracted, for that also those things com-"prehended are to be performed to those that Covenant, that by "that means those that Covenant with him, may be withdrawn "from the worship of the true God, or that some may be confirmed "in their impiety. Which causes in Men to whom the true God is "utterly unknown, have no place; for neither are they to be with-"drawn from the true God, whom they altogether ignore, or to be "confirmed in impiety, when they have been brought up in the "worship of Idols from their tender years. For (he saith) Aloising "Cadamustus in the 18 Chap. of the Indian Navigations relateth that "Serpents seeking to destroy Sheep in the Kingdom of Senera, "which is given to Idolatrous Worthip, they will on the night aim "by heaps at the Sheep-folds, from whence they are driven away "with certain conceived words, and this reason is not unknown to "many others. And that Trallianus where he treateth of the stone, "acknowledgeth the force of incantations in healing of diseases." "and he witnesseth that Galen himself, taught by experience, did "come over to this opinion. For though Galen before (as we have shewed) did account charms but as Aniles fabule, yet this Author Trallianns doth quote a piece of Galens, wherein he maketh a retractation of that opinion, and it standeth with good reason that it might be fo, Trallianus living near his time, and fo might (notwithstanding what Guitterrine bawleth to the contrary) have that part of his writing that fince might be loft, for I remember Paracelfus somewhere saith that in his travels he found the works of Galen, far more genuine and incorrupt than those that were published and extant.

6. A further reason this Author gives us thus: "Furthermore Reason 6. 2. (he saith) that it is not impious to frame to cure a disease with mion. "conceived words, and cannot be perswaded to believe it, espe-"cially feeing that those diseases that are caused by Magick, are Ut Mydicales that are caused by Magick that are caused by Magick that are ut Mydicales that are utilized by Magick that are utilized by Magick that are utilized by Mydicales that " only to be cured by Magick. But (he faith) I confess that comes pacts with Demons are not to be entred into, but that compacts es being entred into with others; should pass to another, and should bind with the same impiety, that is not agreeable to truth, seeing "that the confent of those that make the league, doth effect and "confirm the compacts. Which if it be (he laith) far absent from "us (that is a compact) and in the use of conceived words, by "which the malady is taken away, there be contained nothing that is impious, and that we implore the divine affiltance; I do not "fee (he faith) any thing hurtful to Religion, nor unbefeeming "a good and Pious Man. For as if things that are falutiferous to "mankind, should come from Men that were Atheists, we should "imbrace them, riot respecting the Authors: So if (he saith) things "that are profitable should be shewed of a Demon, I should not think "they were to be rejected. 7. Lastly he saith: 'Why may we not also refer effects in the Region 7, is gainst this opposition of differses, which do accompany the enunciation of de-"feription of conceived words, to those we call good or guardian "Angels? Why should we not judge that shele would be as ready to case and help, as others to hurt, especially in diseases, where "we are destitute of natural helps? And this opinion (he faith) " Conftantinus magnus did approve, Codicit lib. 9. tit. 10. leg. 4-"The Science of them (he faith) is to be punished, who being skill-"ed in Magical Arts are discovered either to endeavour the int-" pairing the health of men, or the drawing of chaft minds to luft:

"But for feeking remedies to humane bodies, they ought not to be "punished. But perhaps thon wilt say, that words are in vain muttered forth, unles a compact do interceed. But that which hap-"pened (he faith) at Lipfick some twelve or fisteen years since, doth "refell this opinion, where a little Wench, that by reason of her Hift. "age did not know what the did, while the imitated the whole a-"Rion of her nurse, which she had often seen her use, and there-"with stirred up tempests; herewith the little Wench raised up "fuch Thunders and Lightenings, by which a Village, not far "from the City was burned: As (he faith) D. Nenius told him, "and was a thing known to innumerable Citizens. For the Wench "being brought to the Court, it was debated whether by law the "could be punished, but it was decided by the opinions of the "Lawyers, that she could not be punished, seeing that by reason of

"her young age, the was altogether ignorant of what the did. 8. We cannot also but remember here some notable passages of Paracelfus where he is speaking of the power of faith and strong, confidence, meerly confidered as a nude and natural power: And affirming its great force and operation to effect ftrange things, he faith: But truly we cannot deny, but that spirits do commix them-"felves with such a faith, in celebrated feasts, and the like, as "though they had performed those things. But not at all they, "but faith only doth these things: Asif a Man had honey, and did "not know from whence it came, nor what kind of creature did "make it, and the Beetle should brag that she had made it. So the Devils though they perform nothing at all, but the effects are meetly produced by the power of a natural or miraculous faith, yet they glory as though they had done them (in all things being liars and deceivers) and therefore do they what they can to confirm and raise up ceremonies and superstitions; From which commotions faith is brought forth, and faith worketh those strange effects, and therefore by reason of the superstition used, the Devils would make men believe that they are authors of those strange effects, which are onely wrought by the Power of an humane Faith, that they might rob God of his Glory and have it ascribed unto themselves. And therefore no persons do the Devils more service than those that ascribe those works unto them that are wrought by natural power and the strength of humane faith. From whence he concludeth thus: Eodem modo fides est in homine, ut laquens quo strangulatur fur, ad multa utilis sit. Ea sides facit, ut fat. Si fides etiam in filum lineum eft, similiter fit. Interim tamen boc nec Diabolus facit, nec fur, nec laqueus, nec carnifex: fed adulterina tua fides, quam non impendis ut debebas.

Having sufficiently (we suppose) proved that in the producing the effects by words or charms, the Devil doth operate nothing at all in them, but only as a lying deceiver and Impostor, laboureth to have the honour of those effects ascribed unto him ; we shall now come to the second, and that is those that hold that the effects are folely produced by the force of the imagination and faith of the Charmer, and so that imagination doth work further than the proper body of the imaginant, upon other extraneous bodies, and that the words or characters avail nothing, but the fortifying and exalting of the faith of the Operator, to prove which are brought these

CHAP. XVII.

1. When the Disciples asked our Saviour, Why they could not Argum. 1. cast forth the Devil out of the child that was lunatick, and fore vexed, and oft fell into the fire, and into the water, he told them; Because of their unbelief, and said : For verily I say unto you, if ye Manth. 17. 20; bave faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove, and nothing shall be impossible unto you. Upon which place learned Beza gives us this note : Non fidem illam generalem & historicam intelligit : Nec etiam sidem justisicantem. Sed illam demum specialem, & quibusdam Christianie particularem, qua animus quodam piritus santi impulsu ad res mirandas perficiendas impellitur, & ista vocatur fides miraculorum. And against diffidence our Saviour orders the Matth to to remedy of fasting and prayer. But this was a power given by Christ unto them, which they (it feems) had loft, and are here taught to resuscitate it by prayer and fasting. Others take it to be a natural power of faith or strength of imagination in all men, which they may ftir up by falting and prayer, therewith to operate that which is good, but being suscitated by the means of images, pictures, superstitious ceremonies, and the like, and so may effect either good or bad; but this later opinion we reject as unfound, and contrary to the Scriptures, and so the argument doth prove very little.

2. Helmont holdeth, "that every man, in respect that they have Argum. 2: "been partakers of the image of God, hath power to create cer-"tain entities, by the power of imagination, and that these con. Vid. de injuli. "ceived Ideas do cloath themselves with a body in the shape of the for. "image fabricated in the imagination, and it is by these that those "ftrange things are effected, that are fally attributed to Demons. And that man folely hath this power. Which (if his argument be well grounded) doth prove plainly, that these strange effects are brought to pass by the sole power of the phantasie of the person imaginant, or using the charms, and neither by the power of the Devil nor of the charms. 3. The argument to prove thesethings by, that they are brought Argum. 2: to pass by the strength of imagination, used by Cornelius Agrippa, is this: Non mediocri experientia (ait) comprobatum est, instam à De occulta Phinatura homini, quandam dominandi, & ligandi vim. And that locilib 36 400 there is an active terror in man, (if it be rightly resulcitated in him, 2.137: and that he know how to direct and make use of it I impressed in him by the Creator, which is as it were a terrifical character and fignacle of God instamped upon man, by which all creatures do fear, and reverence man, as the image of his Creator, and as by the law of creation, to be Lord, and to bear rule over them all. And here I cannot but mention that lepid (though tedious & ludicrous) tale of Credul and that Dr. Cafanbon gives us of an horie-rider called John Toung, "that " could tame the most fierce Bulls and unruly Horses, as also by pipe-"ing to make the most couragious and ficrce Mastiff to lie close "down and to be quiet, by the force of his imagination and charms. "And this John Toungs Philosophy was agreeable to this of Agrippa's, "to wit, That all creatures were made by God, for the use of Man "and to be subject unto him; and that if men did use their power "rightly, any man might do whathedid. Fides st apud antho-

4. Avicenna, Algazel, Albindus, Marsilius Ficinus, Jacobus de Forluio, Pomponatine Paracelfus and others, do sometimes hold "that the Soul (the fensitive and corporeal it must be understood) "not by a nude apprehension, or meer impery, but by the emission of spirits (or corporeal beams, as we have shewed before) do "work upon external bodies, and so move and alter them. Some-"times they hold, that the whole Soul (sensitive must be meant) "doth go quite forth of the Body, and wander into far diftant pla-"ces, and there not only fee what things are done, but also to act "fomething it felf. And to this opinion (only meaning of the immortal, and immaterial Soul) Dr. Moore and Mr. Glanvil do feem to agree, namely that the Soul may for a time depart forth of its Body, and return again. And to prove this the argument of Avicen is this: Superior things (he faith) have dominion over the inferior, and the Intelligences do rule and change corporeal things. And that the Soul is a spiritual and separable substance. And therefore after Pien. de virib. the same manner, may act in corporeal things, and change them as may be feen at large, with responsions in the book of Fienes.

Now we come to the third and last opinion of those that posttively hold, that there is a force in words and characters (if rightly framed) to effect strange things withal, and this is as strongly denied by many. Therefore we shall only offer the most convincing arguments, that we meet withal, and leave it to the censure

But before we enter upon the positive arguments, we think it fit, lest we be miltaken (though in part we may have touched fome of them before) to lay down some few cautions and confiderations, which we shall do in this manner.

1. It is to be taken for a certain truth, that the greatest part of those pretended charms and characters that are in this our age used by ignorant, superstitious, and cheating impostors; are utterly falle, and of no power or efficacy at all. And this was understood by our learned Countreyman Roger Bacon, who tells us thus much. "For without all doubt (he faith) all of this fort now a days are "false, or doubtful or irrational, and therefore not at all to be mancers and Poets, being very laboriously imployed about them, "have filled all Books with comments proceeding forth of their "brains, wanting all truth and foundation, of which some thousands

"are not worth one deaf nut. 2. Yet for all this we are to confider, that all of them are not Confid. 2: totally to be rejected, for Bacon tells us : "That there are certain de-" precations of ancient times instituted of men, or rather ordained Vid. at Source. "of God and good Angels, that are both true and efficacious; and "fuch like as these may retain their first virtue. As in some Coun-"treys (he faith) yet some certain prayers are made upon red hot "iron, and upon the water of the flood, and likewife upon other "things, by which the innocent are tried, and the guilty condemn-"ed. And this was the trial that by the Saxons (when used in England) was called Dibeall. Therefore Paracelfus faith thus: Repeto ergo, charatteribus & verbis non omnibus fidendum effe, fed eligenda & retinenda, qua retta, gonnina, ex fundamento veritatio deprompta, ac multoties probata fint, which is counsel good, sound and profitable. And somewhere he tells us that even those true and genuine characters and Gamahuis that were rightly fabricated under due conftellations, and were in old time efficacious, may have now lost their virtue because the configurations of the Heavens are

3. Many of these strange characters or words were not by wife Confid. 3. altered. men inferted into their works, that thereby any strange things might be wrought by them, but were invented to conceal those grand fecrets that they would not have to be made known unto the unworthy. And therefore Bacon gives us this profound and honest Village counfel : "So therefore (he faith) there are very many things con-"cealed in the books of the Philosophers, by fundry ways: In "which a Wife Man ought to have this prudence, that he pass by "the charms and characters, and make trial of the work of nature "and art : And so he shall see, as well animate things, as insnimate, to concurrogether, by reason of the conformity of nature, not sebecause of the virtue of the charm or character. And so many "fecreta both of Nature and Art are of the unlearned, esteemed to be "magical. And Magicians do foolishly confide in charms and cha-"racers, judging virtue to be in them, and because of their vain "confidence in them, they forfake the work of Nature and Art, by "reason of the error of charms and characters. And so both these fort of Men are deprived of the benefit of wildom, their own fool-

3. The same most learned Countryman of ours Roger Bacon, Consid. 4. ilhness so compelling them. doth further give us this advice saying: "But those things that are us sayan a "Contained in the books of Magicians ought by right to be ba-"nished, although they have in them something of truth: Because "they are mixed with falfities, that it cannot be discerned betwixt "that which is true, and that which is falle. "the names of ancient wife men, thereby to allure the curious, and "to deceive the unwary, which with great care and confideration "we ought to eschew. To the same purpose Paracelsus doth cau-"tion us in this point. Cuilibet ergo promptum sit, characteres &

"verba quavis discernere pose. 4. But for all this (as we have often intimated before) chavms and characters though in themselves of none effect, may conduce to heighten the fancy and confidence of a Patient, and render him more willing to take those things that may cure. And to this ourpose, the forementioned Author Roger Bacon, from Constantine the Phylician tells us thus much: "But it is to be considered, that "a skilful Physician, or any other, that would excite and stir "up the mind, may profitably make use of charms and characters "though feigned, not because the characters or charms themselves "do operate any thing, but that the medicine may be received "with more defire and devotion, and that the mind of the Patient "may be stirred up, and may confide more freely, and may hope "and rejoice; Because the Soul being excitated, can renew many ethings in its proper body, so that from infirmity it may be re-"ftored to health by joy and confidence. If therefore (he faith) "a Physician to magnisse his work, that the Patient may be raised "up to hope and confidence, shall do any thing of this nature, not stor fraud, but because of this, that he may confide, that he may "be healed, it is not to be condemned. We brought this authority to confirm what we had afferted before; and that these things are wonderfully prevalent, we have beforeshewed examples. 1. There are some, that to prove that words and characters have a natural efficacy do alledge some passages of Scripture, which we shall propose as very probable, but not as necessarily convincing, and the first is this: And they shall put my name upon the children of Ifrael, and I will bleft them. Which some understand that the name Jehovah which they call Tetragrammaton, was worn upon them, and that thereby they were bleffed, and from thence they suppose that Hebrew names, especially that, are very efficacious and Ezek. 9.4, 6. powerful. Another is: The man cloathed in linnen, that had the Ink-horn by his side, is commanded to set a mark, or (as some read it) a Tan upon those that mourned. This is the name of a letter the "last in the Alphabet, and hath in the old books of the Hebrews (as "Schindlerus tells us) the figure of a crofs, and fuch like the Sa-" maritans use to this day. From whence by Tan, some in Exe-" kiel do understand the figure of the Cross of Christ.

2. But to explicate what is meant by charms and characters, we are to note that it is not to be understood of those words that are by humane institution fignificant according to the imposition of men, nor of any fort of charms or characters, but of fuch, as by wife men are duly fitted and joined together, in and under a right and favourable constellation, for it is from the Influence of the Stars (as we have proved before) that words, charms, images and characters do receive their energie and virtue. And to this purpose is the true rendition of the words in the Psalm. Which hearkeneth Psal. 58.5. not to the voice of those that mutter, the conjunction of the learned jogner. That is, that the Serpent doth not hearken unto, or obey the charms that are framed or joined together by the learned joiner or framer of charms. So that there is a great learning required to frame and composecharms rightly that they may be efficacious. For Paracelsus witneffeth that Serpents once hearing an efficacious charm do forthwith stop their ears, lest they should hear the words repeated again. Of both these sorts the learned Roger Bacon doth Vi forts tell us this: "Of characters therefore according to the first manener, it is so to be judged as we have shewed in common speech: "But of figills and characters of the second manner, unless they be "made in elected seasons, they are known to have no efficacy at all. "And therefore he that doth practife them, as they are described in "books, not respecting but only the figure that the exemplar doth

"represent, is judged of every wise man to do nothing. But those "which know to perform their work in fit constellations according "to the face of the Heavens; those may not only dispose characters

"but all their works, both of Art and Nature, according to the "virtue of the Stars. But because it is a difficult thing to under-"fland the certainty of Celestials in these things, therefore in these " things there is much error with many, and there are few that un"derstand to order any thing profitably and truly. And to this purpose Paracelsas rells us: "Certain Chirurgical Arts in chirurg. major. wented of the first improvers of Astronomy, by which admirable 68.9.22

"things were (by an Ethereal virtue) performed. But these after "the decease of the ancient Magicians, were so lost, were as scarce "any footsteps do now remain. But it was the Art of Celestial im-"pressions, that they might draw down, the influent action, into

"fomecorporeal substance. The thing is plain by example. The "feed of a Rose doth obtain the virtue and nature of a Rose, yet "for all that it is not a Rose, but when being put into the earth,

"it doth sprout, then at the last it produceth a Rose. By the same "reason, there are certain celestial virtues and actions in being, "which being fown into Gemms, which were called of the ancient

"Magicians, Peantides and Gamahii (otherwise gemme huye) from "whence they have afterwards forung up, no otherwise than feed, "which doth fall from the Tree, and doth regerminate. This was 66 that Astronomie of the ancient Agoptians and Persians, by which "they did adorn Gemms with celestial virtues. Neither are these "things forthwith to be reputed impossible: For if we believe, that "the Heaven doth fend the Plague and other diseases upon us, why

"may we not hope, that the benignity of its virtues may be com-"municated to us alfo ? In like manner if the Heaven doth act upon "the bodies of men, why may we not think that they may wrest their

"they be noxious) shun: or if they be benign shall, by putting " some body, communicate it to that body, that now that body may "fully obtain into it felf the virtue of that dart or influence. From "whence stones are found amongst the Ægyptians, which being born "do cause diseases: But again there are others, that do throughly "make found those diseases. So (he faith) we have seen Gemmit "Hnya, that is Peantides, wherein the fign of the Sagittary was "infculped against weapons, which were prevalent against wounds "made with Swords. Also we have known (he saith) that Magi-"cians have rendered stones efficacious to cure Feavers: nor only "to have made them strong to cure diseases, but also wounds, "and their fymptoms, to wit, the Hæmorrhage, the Sinonia (or "finew-water) Convultions, and the Epilepfic. But as in that age "the use of these was frequent, and the authority great; so by lit-"tle and little the sophistications of false Philosophers being in-"creased, they have come into desuetude and contempt, and ost ther childish things have been substituted in their places. But "these Stones (because now the site and influx of the Heavens are " plainly otherwise than they were in times past) are no more so effi-"cacious as they were then, therefore it is convenient that they be " prepared anew.

The Art Magick, because it was more secret, nor known to. "vulgar Philosophers, both because it did ingenerate wonderful "virtues, not only to Stones, but also to such like words, begun "to be called the prestigious Art by an odious term. For men besting unskilful of these things, who notwithstanding did usurp the " title of the Art unto themselves, addicted themselves unto artifi-"cious operations, crosses and exorcisms: From thence the vul-"ger, being unskilful of the Magical Art, have begun to attribute "this virtue to exorcisms, characters, short prayers, signacles, "croffes, and to other frivolous things. But the matter (he faith) is quite otherwise: for the constellation under which the stones and "words are prepared, doth induce the virtues, not exorcifms. And being entred upon this particular, we shall add some things to this more fully, as first this from the great Georgias Phedro, who faith, after he had shewed the great virtue of some Roots and Herbs in curing wounds and ulcers: "But a Characteristical cure is that, "which exerciseth its natural power by words pronounced, written "or ingraven, by the qualities celetial and various influences of "the Stars, being friendly to our bodies. And to this doth fully "agree, what is written by Trallianus at large and Angerius Fet-"rerius in his Chapter de Homerica medicatione, whither I referr "the Reader, and conclude this explication with that sentence of "Paracelsus: Praterea syderibus nota funt omnia, qua in natura " existunt. Unde (inquit) sapiens dominabitur aftrie, te sapiens, " qui virtutes illas ad sui obedientiam cogere potest.

3. What is here fully explicated as also what we have formerly in this Treatise proved both by reasons, authoristes and examples doth fufficiently fufficiently manifelt the great power of Celestial Bodies upon inferior matter, and that according to the aptitude and agreeableness of the matter prepared, and the configuration of the Heavens at the time elected, the powerful influence of the Stars and Planets is received into the subject, according to the purpose it was intended for. So that from hence it will clearly follow, that if fit and agreeable words or charactes be framed and joined together, when the Heavens are in a convenient fite and configuration for the purpose intended, those words and characters will receive a most powerful virtue, for the purpose intended, and will effectually operate to those ends by a just, lawful and natural agency, without any concurrence of Diabolical power, superstition or ceremonies, and this is that which was laboured to be proved.

4. Thomas Bartholinus that most learned Physician, and expe- Argum. 4. rienced Anatomist (though his credit be laboured to be eclipsed by Dr. Cafabon, who is always more ready to afcribe power unto Hifter. cent 2. Devils, the worlt of Gods creatures, than either to God or Nature) H doth (touching this point) afferts this: "Notwithstanding (he, 280. "faith) that words framed or fhut up in a certain Rhythme, may "without any superstition work some such like thing as the curing "of the Epileplie. For first, the air is altered by the various prola-"tion of words, as well that air, which doth enter into the litet le pores of the veifels ending in the skin by transpiration, as that " which is carried into the Ears, Nostrils, and Lungs. 2. The fate being different of the words uttered, doth impress a diffe-"reat force, which the unlike conflictation of the rough Artery; and " of the rest of the instruments of speech, whether that state be hot "or cold, it impresseth a virtue, which doth either acuate or make er grave. 3. The breath is heated by the various prolation of words, "which either alone, or bound up in the Rhythme doth califie cold things, and discusseth flatulencies. And these may have a great diversity in operation, according as the air and breath, and the several kinds of Atomes in them; may be ordered in their fite; motion, and contexture, to that thereby the various effects may be produced, without Cacodemons, or vain superstition.

5. And if we confidet it seriously there is something more than Argum. 5. ordinary in this place of Scripture. And it came to pass, that I Sam. 16.14, when the evil Spirit from God was upon Saul, that David took an 23. barp, and played with his band : fo Saul was refreshed, and was well, and the evil spirit departed from him. Upon which learned Tremellius gives us this note: "That evil spirit, that is, those phan-"taffical pangs, or that furious rage, which did proceed from that "evil fpirit, did ceafe. So that it is manifelt that it was the natufal efficacy of the melodious found made by Davids playing upod the Harp, whereby the Atomes of the air were put into luch a motion, fire and contexture that thereby they became repugnant and antipathetical to those contrary Atomes, that were by the means of the evil spitit ftitred up in the sensitive Soul of saul, by which he was terrified or tormented, and by overcoming them and diffipating of them, he came to be refreshed, and for a time those effects wrought by that evil spirit ceased. So that the argument lies plain thus: If the melody of tunes or founds modulated upon an Harp, have power to refresh the mind, and to cause the rage of an evil spirit to cease; then may words rightly framed in agreeable Rhythmes, which are but modulated tunes or founds, ease fick perfons, and remove diseases: But the former is true by the testimony of this Scripture, and so also is the later. Neither is the objection of Hieronymus Jordanus against this of any force at all, where he via of in more faith that the reason of sweet Harmony, and magical words, are very far different. But it had been suitable for him to have shewed us, wherein that difference doth lye. and not to have put it off with such a pittiful shuffle, as that it is obvious to Tyronists. This is (indeed) a shift used by many, that when they are not able to solve the argument, they put it off with some impertinent diversion, or passe by it with some ironical Sarcasm. But I must tell him, that tunes and founds, that are framed by art in the best ways that can be devised, thereby by modulating of the air, to cause it to have several effects upon the auditory organs, differ not at all from right framed charms and characters, that by disposing the atomes of the air several ways, do produce various effects; I say there is no difference, except that constellated words may be more efficaciousthan Musick because they are by a most curious and secret art, not only composed and joined together, but also are prepared at fuch chosen and fit times, that the Heavens may more powerfully infuse their virtues and influences into them, which is not observed in the composition of tunes.

6. There is no one thing (if true, and that Kercherus and others have not told us abominable lies) that hath more induced me to believe that there is some natural virtue in words and charms composed in a right way or Rhythme, than because those that are stung, or bitten with the Tarantula or Phalangium, are cured with Musick, and that not with any fort of Musick, but with certain proper and peculiar tunes, which are diverlified according to the colour of the Tarantula that gave the venemous prick or bite, and so by dancing they sweat forth the poison. And Kercherus further tells us not only that those that are stung with the Tarantula are cured with Musick, but that the Tarantula's themselves with dance, when those tunes are modulated that are proportionable and agreeable to their humors. Now if tunes modulated in proportionable and sympathizing ways agreeable to the humours, do cure those that are stung, then much more may words and charms rightly composed and joined together, and that in a due selected time under a powerful constellation, produce such effects as to cure diseases, and move animals to diversand various motions; for betwirt the prolation of words putting the Atomes of the air into a fit motion, fite, figure, and contest ure suitable to perform the end intended, and the vibrating and various figuring the air in its motion by mufical tunes, there is no difference at all in respect of the material or efficient cause, and so either of them may produce like effects.

7. There is also an experiment that hath been sufficiently tryed Arghin. 7. and attested, which doth much induce me to believe that there is efficacy in words and charms above their fignificancy by imposition and institution, and that is this. They take two Lutes rightly stringed and laid upon a long table, and then they lay a light straw. chaff, or feather upon the Unison string of the one, and then they ftrike, or move the Unison string of the other Lute, that lieth at the other end of the Table, by which motion of the Unison ftring at the one end of the Table, the straw, chaff or feather upon the Unison string of the Lure at the other end of the Table (though it be of the longest fort) will by the vibration of the air be moved. or struck off, and yet it will not do it, if the straw be laid upon any other string, and then the Unison of the other Lute moved: By which it is manifest that the striking or moving the Unison-String of the one Luce doth so figurate and dispose the Atomes of the Air. that they are fit and apt to move the Unison string of the other Lure, and foro make the straw fall off, as being of an agreeable mood and temper for the susception of the motion, which the rest of the other ftrings (being of different degrees and nature) are not: for the maxime is true, Quicquid recipitur, recipitur ad modum recipients. And this being fo, it must needs be also granted that words and rhythms fitly joined and composed, being pronounced do put the atomes of the air into such a site, motion, figure, and contexture; that may at a distance operate upon the subject for which they are so fitted, and produce such effects, as they were composed and intended for: especially being framed under powerful and suitable constellations, from whence they receive their greatest force.

8. The chiefest objection that is usually brought against the na. Argain 8. tural agency of fitly composed words or thythms is a maxim of the Schools, ill understood and worse applied, which is this: Quantitates verum, nullius funt efficacia : unto which we shall render these responsions. 1. If quantity be taken mathematically, and abstractly, then it is true, that it is of no efficacy or operation, because it is then only entrationis, and doth only exist in the intellect, and so can operate nothing ad exita. But if it be taken concretely, physically; and as materiate, than it is of force, and very operative, as two pound quantity of lead will weigh down one pound of the fame lead, and two ounces quantity of the same Gunpowder, will carry a bullet of the same quantity further, and more forceably, that one ounce of the same will do: And one scruple of white Hellebor may be taken, when a Drachm will kill, and a fire of a yard Diameter will warm a man at a greater distance than a fire but of one foot diameter.

2. Figures, characters, words or speech are (indeed) properly

no quantities: For figures and characters are only delineations and circumscriptions of some kind ofmatter, and are all, whether natu-Harm. IsabHan. ral or artificial properly contained under quality, and denoting what figure or Form the thing is of. Figure therefore properly is attributed to artificial things, as to a circle, a square, a triangle, and the like; and form to animate things, as to a Man, an Horse, an Oxe, and the like: And so characters whether ingraven in metals, gemms, stones, clay, plaister or wood, or written upon parchment, paper, or the like, of what figure or form foever they be, are but qualities, and do qualifie the matter according to the form and figure impressed in the subject matter, which being artificially done, the matter is the patient, the figure or character is the exemplar cause, and the force that maketh the impression is the efficient cause, and that these as qualities have some efficacy, no rational man candeny.

3. But to make it more clearly manifest, let us suppose three various figures that are Hoperimetral, as a circle, a plain fquare, and an equilateral triangle: Though they be all of equal circumference, yet shall the circle contain more than either the square, or the triangle ; and therefore learned Ramus doth lay down this rule. Circulus e planis Isoperimetris inequalibus oft maximus. But when the question is asked, what is the cause, why a circle of figures of equal circumference, contains the most? The answer is commonly made, Quia omnium sigurarum persetissimus, & capacissimus est circulus; butif it be again urged, what is the cause, that a circle of an equal circumference to a plain fquare, should be more capacious than the fquare? Here (the thing being found true by ocular experience) the capaciousnels of the circle, more than the square (they being both of equal circumference) can be ascribed to nothing elfe at all, but only to the figure, and therefore of necessity, figures have in them some efficiency.

4. That which we call speech, or oration, is considered three ways. I. That which is mental and only conceived in the mind, and not expressed. 2. That which is expressed or uttered by the vocal organs. 3. And that which is written. And there are called mental, vocal and written. The two, that is, mental, and that which is written, are referred to the predicament of quality. And whereas oration vocal is by some referred to the predicament of quantity, as it is the measure of founds and syllables, as it is pronounced, Splan, Hamon, whereof some are made long, and some short; and so while di-Affidit, p.249 findt founds and fyllables are uttered in a certain mood, they are faid to be measured, and to belong to quantity: But if we will understand aright, one thing in different respects may belong both to the predicament of quantity and quality. So the prolation of founds or fyllables in respect of their modification, and comparing one to another, some may be long, and some may be short, and have a different part of time in their pronunciation, and so may Analogically, and by way of similitude, be said to be measured, and con-sequently referred to the predicament of quantity. Yet if we confider speech or oration, which consists of sounds and syllables, in relation to the efficient cause, the material and instrumental, which is the breath of Man by his several organs, moving, modulating and figuring the air (which is the subject matter) into diversity of fites, motions, contextures and moods, then we must conclude that words, charms or rhythms, having efficient, material and instrumental caufes, do belong to the predicament of Quality, and are of great force and virtue naturally, notwithstanding all that is or can be objected

5. Lastly, we are to consider that the breath of Man being varioully modulated by its passage from the lungs, by the throat, palate, tongue, and other vocal organs, doth make such several impressions and configurations of the moved atomes in the air, that thereby to great a divertity of impulses or founds are made upon the drum of the ear, that thereby naturally we are able to diftinguilb one from another. Now humane institution found forth the ways of making these several sounds, or tones, to be appropriated to fuch and fuch things, or to fignifie the diversity of creatures and things, according to the several compacts and agreements of Men amongst themselves, so that what one found doth fignifie in one language, may signific another thing in another. So that not confidering the inflitution or invention of this or that fignificancy of feveral founds in feveral languages, every found, or articulate prolation, doth naturally make a diftinct and several impulse upon the ear, and thereby the fenfes, and confequently the mind are variously affected by them. And therefore the younger Helmont doth give us an apposite passage, or two to this purpose, Eng. lifhed thus: "For as in those of ripe years, certain musical mo- Alphabet. NA. "dulations being heard do often to efficaciously imprint in the tar. p. 201 "mind the Idea of the voice and tones, that diverse do sensibly feel "them for fo long a time in themselves, as it were yet sounding, "that they cannot, when they would, be freed from them: From "whence also (he faith) the word inchanting seemeth with the La-"tines and Gauls to have drawn its original. So the Idea of our "Mothers tongue impressed in infants, doth so long adhere there, "that to them about to speak afterwards, it doth as it were place, "and order the tongue, and to is the only one miltres of their freech. And again he faith: "If in times past there were found those, who wide, 52 "by the benefit of musical instruments could move and mollifie the s mind of Man various ways: How much more humane voice, if " it being moderated by prudence, do break forth from a living ipirit, thall not only have power to effect those things, but also those Having thus far largely handled this point, we shall only recapi-"that are far greater? tulate a few things, and so conclude this Treatise.

1. It being granted, that great effects have been produced by words, charms, rhythmes, and tunes, we have removed all diabolical concurrence to those effects, except what may be mental and internal, as in all wicked persons, when they ase natural means to a wicked and evil end, and that (as we conceive) by sufficient and convincing arguments: And especially because, where there is no natural agent, there the Devil can operate nothing at all, and if there be a natural agent, his concurrence is not necessary.

2. As for the force of imagination upon extraneous bodies, we cannot in reason affirm it to be none at all, neither dare, or will we affert that its power (in that respect) is so vastly great, as many do

3. And for what strange effects soever, that are true and real, that do follow upon the use of words, charms, characters, rhythms, and the like, we do considently assimption, that they are effected by lawful and natural means, but withal that of this sort in this age, sew or none are found out that are efficacious. But that error, credulity, ignorance and superstition do put great force, and stress upon these things, when really they produce no effects at all,
